'Identity of Views'

By the Associated Press

Madrid (Thursday), Feb. 13. Premier Mussolini of Italy and Francisco Franco, Spain's chief of state, arrived at a "complete identity of views" upon European matters in two meetings yesterday at Bordighera, on the Italian Riviera, a Spanish communique announced early today.

Nothing more specific was said of their conference nor was there any mention of German participation.

The communique served principally to confirm that important discussions had been held and to disclose the Mussolini-Franco meeting place, a few miles from the French border.

That the communique limited the discussion to Europe appeared to rule out Africa. There had been some speculation that the Axis might have been seeking African bases for use against the British.

Franco is expected to meet Marshal Petain, the French chief of state, today somewhere on the French Riviera.

The complete text of Madrid's communique on the Franco-Mussolini meetings:

"In conversations which took place in the morning and afternoon of February 12 in Bordighera between the Caudillo (Franco) and the Duce and the Spanish minister of foreign affairs, Serrano Suner, it is possible to state there was a complete identity of views of the Spanish and Italian governments on all problems of a European character interesting to these two countries in the present historical moment."

Italian Offensive Has Petered Out, Greeks Report

Athens, Feb. 12 (AP).—A Greek military spokesman said tonight that the Italians in Albania have put a stop to their long series of counter-attacks and now are building defensive fortifications in the face of acute supply and transport difficulties.

There has been no Italian counter-attack for three days, he said.

The spokesman, denying Italian claims of destructive raids on Greek air bases, said the raids had been directed against the civilian populations of unimportant towns.

Krivitsky Case Closed As a Suicide

The fatal shooting of Gen. Walter G. Krivitsky, tortured refugee from Soviet secret agents since his exposure of Stalinist intrigue, was written off definitely and finally as a suicide by Washington police last night.

Following a conference with Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald and Lieut. George Darnall, chief of the Metropolitan Police homicide squad, Inspector Bernard W. Thompson, chief of detectives, told reporters:

"Now, as before, we are convinced that Krivitsky killed himself."

Thompson stressed the words "as before," emphasizing that almost from the moment that Krivitsky was found, his brain shattered with a bullet, in a room of the Bellevue Hotel Monday morning, investigators have deemed the death a suicide.

His remarks pointed to a vast accumulation of physical and circumstantial evidence supporting his conviction, but it wasn't enough for Krivitsky's friends who, with two notable exceptions, steadfastly maintained that the self-styled former western European chief of Soviet military intelligence was the victim of a master Stalinist assassin.

Latest to insist that Krivitsky was slain is the widow of Leon Trotsky, co-father of the Russian revolution, who told the Associated Press in

600,000 Nazi Troops Mass In Rumania

25 Fresh Divisions Roll in; Bulgarians Fear British Move

By the Associated Press

Belgrade, Feb. 12.—German troops were reported by military observers to stand nearly 600,000 strong in Rumania tonight—and the ice which formed the last serious obstacle to a Nazi crossing into Bulgaria was fast vanishing from the Danube under premature spring warmth.

This enormous increase in the accepted estimate of German strength in Rumania was based upon new information that, supplementing the 200,000 men sent into the country by the end of December, the German command recently has dispatched 25 fresh divisions, requiring movement of an average of 40 trains a day through Hungary.

From Ruse, the Bulgarian port on the Danube facing Rumania, it was reported that the river was now wholly ice free, and German bridge pontoons were placed along the Rumanian bank.

These were among the incidents reported here, in diplomatic or other advices:

Groups of German transport planes, presumably those which flew over Hungary yesterday, landed at Bulgarian airports, the official Sofia explanation being that they merely formed part of a consignment which Bulgaria had bought and paid for.

The United States legation in Bucharest, which is looking out also for certain British interests since Britain broke off diplomatic relations with Rumania, posted signs on British buildings, in English, Rumanian, German, Russian and Bulgarian, which read:

"This property is protected by the United States Government."

Willkie Calls GOP to Lead U. S. to Unity

Party Faces Its Great Opportunity, He Says, Daring It to Seize It

By Harry Crockett
Associated Press Staff Writer

New York, Feb. 12.—Wendell L. Willkie declared tonight that the democratic way of life could not survive in America if it was vanquished in Britain and challenged the Republican Party to take a positive stand on, and lead the fight for aid to Britain.

"Have you got it in you?" he cried to a crowd of 2,200 persons attending the National Republican Club's fifty-fifth annual Lincoln Day dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria.

Willkie, just returned from a fact-finding trip to the British Isles, where he conferred with persons ranging in rank from King George VI to "the man in the pub," called Prime Minister Winston Churchill "the man whom I think is the greatest public figure in the world."

Challenge Accepted

Arthur A. Ballantine, president of the club and former Undersecretary of the Treasury, was quick to accept, on behalf of the Republican Party, Willkie's challenge, with which he closed his 23-minute address.

Following an ovation by the crowd, in which cries of "We want Willkie" could be heard, Ballantine told the 1940 Republican Presidential candidate:

"You have transcended partisanship and that is the best service to a party. You have lifted us up and given us vision and now it is up to us to answer your call and show that we 'have it in us.'"

The Republican Party, Willkie asserted in his extemporaneous, nationally broadcast address, was born as the champion of freedom—"that was the reason for us coming into being"—and he warned that if it had no higher destiny "than the destiny of compromise and negation and failure and death," it would not survive.

"I doubt if in the history of parties, any party had such a golden opportunity as presents itself to the Republican Party tonight," he went on. "Where is the Republican that is not enamoured of it? Where is the Republican that does not want to meet the challenge of this newer day?"

Assails New Deal

He declared that "there is a party in power, not the Democratic—the New Deal party—without faith in the people, because its idea of winning elections and controlling votes is by the method of Government pressures and expenditures.

"We have a party in power which today has at last grasped the meaning of the international situation.

"Yet, no later than 1933 or 1934, there was the London economic conference, which it dumped, that might have saved this chaos of war and confusion."

"Here lies our opportunity," he said. "We know how the free enterprise system operates. We know that if it is permitted to function it can create for all men more than any man has heretofore known, of those who must work.

"Here we are: We know what the international situation is and, too, we know the necessities of a program to save those fighting men.

"People of the Republican Party I give you this challenge in the year 1941: Have we the vision? Have we the ability? Have we the leadership to take America down this glorious path that is offered us? I have no doubt that we have."

Brown Requests Purchase of Four Police Ambulances

The purchase of four combination scout car-ambulances to be manned and operated by policemen was recommended to the Commissioners yesterday by Police Chief Ernest W. Brown, it was learned last night.

Maj. Brown has instructed Inspector William G. Stott, supervisor of police equipment, to obtain information from manufacturers concerning the type of vehicle desired. The move follows numerous complaints of delay in handling victims of traffic accidents.

Under the police superintendent's plan, the cars will be placed in service in outlying precincts, taking the place of the scout cars already in use. They will respond to emergency calls and will be used to augment the ambulances of Casualty, Emergency and Freedmen's Hospitals.

When not in service transporting injured or sick persons, the scout-ambulances will patrol and perform the ordinary police duties, it was said.

Requests Include Funds for Bases At Guam, and Tutuila, Samoa

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

President Roosevelt asked for funds for new naval bases at Samoa, Guam and other American outposts in the western Pacific in an $898,392,932 naval program put before Congress yesterday.

Construction of an $8,100,000 base at Tutuila, Samoa, a "stepping stone" between Hawaii and Australia only 1,600 miles from New Zealand, is proposed in the supplemental estimates, along with $1,700,000 for "fleet operating facilities" and bomb-proof shelters at Guam.

Congress twice in the last two years has refused Administration requests for new base facilities at Guam, which lies 5,000 miles west of San Francisco and within 1,500 miles of Tokyo.

Opponents of the move have called it an "aggressive move" against Japan. Chairman Vinson, of the House Naval Committee, and other proponents of a Guam base, predicted last night that the request would be approved this time.

One request which aroused considerable interest was a fund of $96,680,000 in cash and contract authorization for immediate hiring and chartering of merchant ships. Additional funds were provided for arming such craft.

Two other areas of great strategic importance to the United States—the Caribbean and Alaska—would also be vastly strengthened under the estimates.

Other appropriation requests in the bill included:

Millions Asked

To provide armament and armor for these craft and strengthen the antiaircraft defenses of existing ships, $102,000,000.

A total of $96,000,000 cash and $30,000,000 contractural authority for purchase of planes and aircraft requirements.

An emergency fund of $12,000,000 for use in building bomb-proof shelters and other defense facilities.

More than $80,000,000 for additional naval base facilities in the Caribbean, including $35,000,000 for a protected fleet anchorage in the Vieques (Puerto Rico) area, which would make that island a naval operating base of major importance.

A sum of $5,100,000 for a protected fleet anchorage at Trinidad, and funds for strengthening Guantanamo, and Virgin Island bases.

A total of $46,943,000 for strengthening facilities in the mid-Pacific, including a $4,115,000 submarine base for Midway Island, and $16,000,000 for expanding air bases on Midway, Wake, Palmyra and Johnston Islands.

Submarine and air facilities costing $27,858,500 would be added to existing bases in Alaska.

Willkie Insists U. S. Can Spare Destroyers, Despite Knox's 'No'

Some Believe Roosevelt Told Him So; Navy Chief Says Move Would Hamper Fleet

Wendell Willkie said yesterday that "high authorities" of the Government had informed him that the United States could transfer additional destroyers to the British without injury to American defense.

His statement was made in answer to Secretary of the Navy Knox, who earlier in the day had declared the Navy could "spare no more destroyers" and that he was opposed to "depleting our fleet any further."

Willkie's assertion was interpreted in many quarters as indicating that President Roosevelt took a contrary view to that of Knox in the matter. Willkie made plain that the "high authorities" he referred to had talked to him after his testimony on the lend-lease bill Tuesday, and the only "high authority" he is known to have seen that evening was the President.

Secretary Knox was asked at his press conference about Willkie's recommendation to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Tuesday that we send Britain "five to ten destroyers a month." Have we any to spare, reporters inquired.

"We certainly have not," Knox replied sharply, adding that we needed all we have to maintain a "balanced fleet."

Reporters then asked if destroyers could be "spared" as new ones now building are completed. The Navy chief replied in the negative. He also declared that all available

Measure to Help Britain Virtually Ready for Report On Senate Floor

By Robert C. Albright
Post Staff Writer

The Senate version of the aid-Britain bill last night was practically in shape for report after special subcommittees in surprise amendments fortified Congressional powers to control spending and contracts.

A new "power of the purse" amendment, designed to meet Republican charges of a Presidential "blank check," was approved by a subcommittee and will go to a vote of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee today.

A second Administration amendment, further tightening Congressional controls over money, barred revolving fund use after July 1, 1946, of any money paid back by Britain on defense articles transferred.

Another subcommittee meantime redrafted the House-approved "Dirksen amendment" to resolve doubts of constitutionality.

The revised amendment will be accepted by the Senate committee today. It gives Congress the right by simple majority vote not requiring Presidential signature, to revoke the President's powers at will.

Constitutional questions were met in the new draft by providing the President's aid powers will terminate either on June 30, 1943, or when Congress adopts a concurrent resolution.

House Changes Accepted

In form or substance, every modification written into the bill by the House was approved by the Foreign Relations Committee previous to the subcommittee "purse-string" amendments.

Leaders said the action was taken partly in response to Wendell L. Willkie's Tuesday plea for "tolerant" consideration of modifying changes, although none of Willkie's proposed amendments, as such, were adopted. The full committee battered down a series of more drastic changes proposed by Senators Taft, of Ohio, and Vandenberg, of Michigan (Republicans).

Spending Curb Ironclad

Senator Byrnes (Democrat), of South Carolina, drew the Administration's proposed limit on the President's money and contract powers "to quiet fears that the President might make contracts creating a deficiency."

"This makes ironclad and clear the authority of Congress over the purse," said Byrnes. "It makes it absolutely positive that the President can neither make expenditures nor enter into a contract involving payment of money unless Congress authorizes it."

Byrnes said it was never the intent of the Administration to pursue any other course, despite charges to the contrary.

The new language added by the amendment empowers the President to authorize construction of aid armament only "to the extent to which funds are made available or contracts are authorized by Congress."

Senate Majority Leader Barkley headed the subcommittee which approved the change, sitting with Senator Byrnes and Senator White (Republican), of Maine.

Senator Barkley said the subcommittee retained the House-ap-

Tank Output To Be Doubled With 3 Shifts

Chrysler Production For Medium Machines To Be About 14 Daily

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Recent orders to the Chrysler-operated Government tank arsenal to work on a three-shift rather than a single shift basis are expected to increase total production of medium tanks to double the number originally scheduled by the Army, it was learned yesterday.

Chrysler production, which will account for slightly more than half the total output, will be stepped up from the anticipated peak a year from now of five or six tanks a day to about 14 a day as a result of the three-shift schedule.

Defense officials declined to make public the exact figures on anticipated production, but they said that the program was moving on schedule toward a maximum production to be reached in the spring or summer of next year.

In the meantime, it was learned, efforts are being intensified to obtain initial deliveries of a few of the medium tanks at the earliest possible date in order to begin tests to "iron out the bugs" expected in a product never before manufactured in this country.

First tanks to come off the assembly lines are expected within the next three months. This indicates that the program is keeping up with, or even bettering, schedule, it was said. In addition, it is now believed that the Chrysler plant may begin production by August, beating the initial time estimates by several months.

To expedite earliest possible deliveries, it is reported that an inter-agency group will be organized within the next few weeks among representatives of the Army, Navy,

Patent Agreements Impair Defense, He Declares

By John B. Oakes
Post Staff Writer

The national defense program has been impaired by foreign controls over production of essential war materials and by agreements between foreign and domestic companies, Assistant Attorney General Thurman Arnold told the Temporary National Economic Committee yesterday.

A two-year investigation of defense industries, Arnold said, has indicated that excessive prices, serious shortages and hindrances to American industrial development have resulted from foreign ownership of patents and from cartel and other arrangements in which domestic companies participate.

He charged "collusive bidding" on some Army and Navy contracts.

It is "probable," he declared, that "vital military information" has been disclosed to foreign companies because of patent license agreements.

And, he added, "startling instances of German control of defense industries" have been uncovered by the department, "as well as illegal price-fixing among American concerns."

In the last year, said the Assistant Attorney General, the antitrust division of the Justice Department has looked into "a number of cases in which patents held by German

Pan American Airways officials said the delay was occasioned by a "slight mechanical difficulty."

Silent Tribute

A President, who is striving to achieve national unity, stood for five silent minutes yesterday before the statue of a President who fought to preserve the Union.

Leading the nationwide observance of the birthday of the Civil War leader, President Roosevelt stood bareheaded in an unseasonally warm sun to do homage to Abraham Lincoln while an aide placed a wreath at the Lincoln statue in the white marble memorial.

Crowds of government workers, lining the memorial and the reflecting pool, watched in respectful silence as Mr. Roosevelt stood by his car, his silk hat in hand, gazing at the marble figure that looks down from atop the long flight of steps.

Not a word was spoken during the entire ceremony. Its high point was the sounding of a bugle playing "To the Colors" from inside the structure. Its tones echoed from the dim interior of the memorial, out into the brilliant sunlight and over the oblong pool, which reflected a clear blue sky.

The President drove with Mrs. Roosevelt from the White House to the memorial.

When they arrived a double file of soldiers, sailors and marines, standing on the long flight of steps, snapped to attention.

The band played, then there was a long moment of silence. Finally the bugle call sounded. Then Col. Horace Smith, military aide to the President, mounted the steps and placed the wreath.

Massed on the steps in vivid contrast to the white stone were the colors of 31 patriotic organizations participating in ceremonies arranged by the Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

Blood Bank Campaign Gains Momentum on All Fronts

Gaining momentum on all fronts, the Children's Hospital blood bank campaign received hearty impetus yesterday from these developments:

A Government employe, learning of the blood bank's existence through the drive being conducted by The Post, American Legion and Station WJSV, went to the institution and registered as a donor of "golden blood."

Station WJSV made a dramatic transcription of an actual blood-taking operation, which will be broadcast by that studio at 10:15 o'clock tonight.

Three more American Legion benefit parties were announced, proceeds to go into the fund for perpetuating the Children's Hospital blood and serum bank.

Although the "theme day" of the third annual campaign is not until tomorrow—St. Valentine's Day—proceeds of a number of "earlybird" benefits began arriving at the office of The Post's cashier.

The "golden blood" donor was 49-year-old Clinton A. Medbery, a heating engineer for the War Department, who recovered from staphylococcus aureus infection in 1928. He lives at 498 Maryland Avenue Southwest.

Central figure in tonight's broadcast will be Floyd Higbee, of Falls Church, Va., who yesterday airily asked doctors about how the blood bank is conducted as they withdrew approximately a pint of blood from his veins for "deposit."

Higbee has an ill child in Children's Hospital who has had two transfusions.

Newly scheduled American Legion parties are as follows:

U. S. to Finance Purchase of British Firms

The United States Government stands ready to help qualified borrowers buy up Great Britain's $800,000,000 worth of business properties in this country, Jesse Jones, Secretary of Commerce and Federal Loan Administrator, said yesterday.

"I see no reason why we shouldn't lend money to American investors to buy American investments," Jones told a press conference, explaining, however, that such loans could not be made to individuals.

The British own a variety of properties in this country, including manufacturing enterprises, real estate, distribution companies and retail concerns.

Liquidation to Be Slow

Sir Edward Peacock, British financial agent, has been in this country several weeks, charged with the duty of disposing of these direct investments.

He said yesterday at the Treasury that he would go slowly in selling them, in order to liquidate the properties "in an orderly fashion."

Disclosure by Secretary Jones that the United States Government would lend money to prospective buyer of the British investments was expected to speed up the liquidation process.

Investment companies and other large financial institutions, but not individuals, would be qualified for the loans, Jones implied.

Other experts predicted that investment trust companies would not be likely to borrow money to acquire the British properties, but that investment bankers would probably be interested.

Two Syndicates Interested

Two investment syndicates are considering buying some of the British properties. They discussed the matter several weeks ago with Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau and with David Schencker, investment trust expert of the Securities Exchange Commission.

If Jones' invitation is accepted by American investors, some of the best-known firms in the country may change from British to American hands.

Among them are leading insurance companies, an oil products company and a soap company.

shipbuilding facilities for their construction are now in use.

"I just want to say, without commenting directly on Mr. Willkie's statement," Knox added, "that as Secretary of the Navy I am against depleting our fleet any further."

Willkie Phones Reply

Willkie, in response to numerous questions yesterday, telephoned this statement here from New York:

"I was surprised to read Col. Knox's statement. Information given me by high authorities in the Government after my testimony yesterday confirmed my views that we are in a position, without any injury to our Navy or national defense, to give Great Britain immediate effective assistance by furnishing to her additional destroyers."

160 Now in Service

The Navy now has 160 destroyers in service, with 205 building or under contract. Fourteen of the latter are expected to join the fleet this year and 45 during 1942. Of those in service, 85 are new and the remainder of World War vintage.

Last summer there were 169 of the World War destroyers on the Navy list. Fifty were traded to Great Britain for the Atlantic base sites, while 45 have been converted into mine-layers, mine-sweepers, fast transports or antiaircraft ships.

Some officials have suggested the latter might be reconverted into destroyers and transferred to Britain, but naval officers hold that they are needed in the American fleet.

Roosevelt Asks Land to Survey Shipping Needs

President Roosevelt has asked Rear Admiral Emory S. Land, chairman of the United States Maritime Commission, to advise and assist him in assuring that American ocean shipping needs would be cared for in an effective and expeditious manner, it was announced last night.

In a letter made public by the commission, Mr. Roosevelt asked that Admiral Land make a thorough check on the tonnage needs of the country, both for the Army and Navy, and for the foreign and domestic trade of the country, and to report on requests by foreign countries, such as Great Britain, for assistance in getting more ships.

The question whether this country, as a nonbelligerent, might acquire foreign ships laid up in United States ports, for itself or Great Britain, has been discussed for some time. Such ships include 27 Italian, 2 German, 35 Danish and 14 French.

proved $1,300,000,000 limit on existing Army and Navy defense equipment which the President can lend, lease or give to Britain.

While the subcommittee imposed no over-all top on aid to be extended, Barkley called the Byrnes amendment a "movable ceiling" under which Congress would control the amount of outlays and contracts as the need arises for them.

He explained that as aid funds are required, Congress will appropriate, probably in lump sums, on the basis of the President's estimates. At the same time, every appropriation made would contain a specific and limited contract authority over and above the appropriation.

Barkley said it was impossible to devise a more effective over-all limit at a time when full aid requirements are not known.

A subcommittee headed by Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, and including Senator Thomas (Democrat), of Utah, and Senator White drew the proposed Senate revision of the Dirksen amendment.

Connally said the subcommittee's objective was to make concurrent resolutions an effective means of terminating the President's aid powers any time a majority in Congress so voted. He said there could be no doubt as to Constitutionality of the new amendment. He said the committee thought the amendment as approved by the House would be ineffective.

Chairman George, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee made plain that each of the subcommittee amendments was subject to approval by the full committee today.

"I think we will be able to report the bill tomorrow," the chairman told newsmen. "The Senate probably will open consideration on Monday."

Voted down with clockwork precision in the committee were the Taft amendments to restriet aid to limited credit grants to the United Kingdom, Canada and Greece; to prevent the use of American ports as British bases, to ban outright gifts of naval vessels to Britain, to bar purchase of arms in foreign countries and to eliminate the aid "revolving fund."

Strongest showing made on rejected amendments came on Vandenberg's proposed requirement for Army and Navy certification of all loans of arms. This was defeated 10 to 13. Also rejected, 14 to 9, was another Vandenberg amendment limiting the program to one year.

Committee disapproval apparently was foreshadowed for Willkie's suggestion that the bill specifically name the countries to be aided—Britain, Greece and China. Administration committeemen voiced the fear that this proposal would hamstring aid efforts in event that other nations might ally themselves with England. Belief privately was expressed that Yugoslavia and French North Africa, as well as Turkey, might eventually be aligned against the Axis if present war trends continue. As now written, the bill would extend aid to "any country whose defenses the President deems vital to the defense of the United States." An effort probably will be made this morning to narrow this definition.

"A special problem involved in these cases," he said, "is the flow of information of military importance to foreign powers by virtue of their right to collect royalties . . . and to be informed as to the production of articles involving the patent."

In an outline of the antitrust division's legislative proposals and plans for further prosecutions, Arnold recommended that Congress:

Give the division up to $1,000,000 in addition to its current $1,325,000 appropriation to expedite investigation of various industries, including "at least 31" producing "vital war materials" where there is evidence of "price increases, artificial shortages and foreign control."

Permit use of antitrust laws to break up conspiracies in cases affecting the national defense (such as housing for defense workers) even where interstate commerce is not involved.

Repeal the Miller-Tydings amendment to the Sherman Act, which, in effect, permits contracts prohibiting cut-rate prices on standard commodities.

Require registration of proposed mergers that would bring under single control more than 50 per cent of the national output of any commodity formerly produced by more than one enterprise.

Strengthen the hand of the Justice Department in combating local ordinances or State laws that act as barriers on interstate commerce.

Favor New Patent Laws

Amend the patent laws and increase both civil and criminal penalties for violation of the Sherman Antitrust Act.

Arnold told the committee that in addition to the antitrust campaign in strictly defense industries, grand juries should immediately investigate restraints on trade in the five domestic fields of housing, food, household appliances, clothing and drugs and medical supplies.

Urges Investigation

He also urged a grand jury investigation into "any combinations which are destroying the balance of prices between the things which the farmers sell and the things which the farmers buy."

Arnold was the first witness at this last group of hearings of the T. N. E. C., at which various Governmental agencies will make their recommendations for the committee's final report, which will be published in April.

Summarizing his division's investigation of defense industries, Arnold said:

"The United States Government has been charged excessive and unreasonable prices for essential war materials as a result of agreements between domestic and foreign companies and collusive bidding on Army and Navy contracts.

"Foreign companies have taken out patents and entered into cartel arrangements in the United States on essential war materials for the purpose and with the effect of blocking American development and creating serious shortages.

World Markets Divided

"There have been divisions of world markets by patent agreements between domestic and foreign companies which gave foreign interests the right to determine where and how the American companies may sell certain military supplies.

"It seems probable that vital military information has been disclosed to foreign companies through the requirement of itemized descriptive royalty payments in patent license agreements."

Arnold said that the activity of the division had already caused notable drops in price or had paved the way for competition in certain industries investigated, including aluminum, tungsten carbide, magnesium and military optical goods. On the other hand, he declared, the zinc industry, which has not been investigated, has enjoyed a 66 per cent price increase since 1938.

Flow of War Metals to U. S. Is Increasing

Strategic metals and other vital defense materials are flowing into this country in increasing quantities from Reconstruction Finance Corporation purchases, figures cited by Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones revealed yesterday.

At the same time the priorities division of the Office of Production Management moved to assure defense industries of the Nation's supply of aluminum and magnesium. It "urgently" requested magnesium producers to allocate all stocks of the metal to defense purposes, asked industrial users of aluminum to shift to the use of substitutes, and told airplane companies to return all aluminum scrap to the original source of supply for reprocessing.

Jones said that RFC material purchases have included 111,000 tons of rubber, 93,000 tons of tin, 34,000 tons of tungsten, 200,000 tons of copper, and $6,500,000 worth of tung oil.

Except for 2,000 tons of domestic tungsten, all the materials were bought abroad, he said.

In addition, Jones revealed, arrangements have been made with China to buy $10,000,000 worth of tungsten, $40,000,000 of tin and $10,000,000 of antimony. The United States has agreed to advance $50,000,000 of the purchase price to China prior to delivery. Half of this amount has been advanced and the rest is available "when China needs it," Jones said.

In all, Jones stated, the RFC has made defense allocations totaling $1,183,000,000, including commitments for purchase of materials and construction of defense plants. Of this, he said, $46,500,000 has been earmarked for machine tool purchases.

Sulfanilamide Found to Ward Off Rheumatic Fever

Chicago, Feb. 12 (AP).—Small daily doses in winter of sulfanilamide has proven effective in preventing recurrences of acute rheumatic fever in 55 children and young adults studied over a four-year period, three Baltimore physicians reported today in the Journal of the American Medical Association.

Rheumatic fever was once believed to be "growing pains," but the disease has since been regarded as one of the most serious medical problems.

Most of its victims are virtually incapacitated for life. Although the death rate among children is only 10 to 12 per cent, those surviving are almost always left with crippled hearts.

The report was by Drs. Caroline Bedell Thomas, Richard France and Franjo Reichsman.

Tank Ouput To Be Doubled With 3 Shifts

British Purchasing Commission and Office of Production Management priorities and production divisions. This group, similar to that already organized for aircraft production, will act to coordinate allocation and priorities of machine tools, principal "tight spot" in the tank program.

Some 2,000 machine tools are needed by the seven various plants participating in the medium tank program, it is estimated. Of these, 1,200 are not yet delivered. Principal immediate requirement, it was learned, is tooling equipment to machine the armor plates for the tanks.

As a possible answer to the enormous machine tool demand entailed by the program, Army officials were said to be studying with interest a Canadian order for 1,200 tank hulls made of cast steel. One of these hulls is reported to be undergoing Army testing this week.

As distinguished from present tank construction, which entails assembly of carefully planed and machined armor plates, the cast hulls come from the foundries in larger sections and require vastly less machining.

Production officials declared that substitution of the cast hulls probably would not expedite the present program, plans and requirements for which are well under way, but might be valuable in saving tools and man-hours in a future production effort.

Other problems lie in obtaining transmissions and armament for the tanks. The enormous arms requirements are indicated in an estimate of ordnance experts that the tank program will demand enough machine guns to equip an army of several million men organized on a 1917-1918 basis.

In addition to the machine guns, each tank will carry a 75 mm. cannon.

Besides the Government-owned Chrysler plant, now under construction, other companies which will share in the program are Pullman Standard Car, Pressed Steel Car, Lima Locomotive, Baldwin Locomotive, American Locomotive and American Car and Foundry.

Move to Probe Cameron Citizenship Is Killed

The House Immigration Committee voted unanimously yesterday to table a resolution by Representative Geyer (Democrat), of California, for an investigation of the manner in which W. J. Cameron, of the Ford Motor Co. obtained his citizenship.

Lemuel G. Schofield, a special assistant Attorney General, had told the committee that Cameron, a native of Canada, "met every requirement of the statute under which he was naturalized."

Subcommittee Favors Taxing Federal Issues

By Hedley Donovan
Post Staff Writer

A Senate Finance Subcommittee yesterday unanimously approved legislation to increase the national debt limit to $65,000,000,000 and subject future issues of Federal securities to Federal taxation.

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, chairman of the subcommittee, predicted that the full committee will report the bill today and that the measure will reach the Senate floor tomorrow.

Speedy Senate approval of the bill was foreshadowed yesterday when several prominent Senate critics of Administration fiscal policy indicated they will not oppose the $16,000,000,000 increase in the debt limit.

The finance subcommittee acted on the bill after Secretary of the Treasurer Morgenthau explained that the Treasury for several months has offered no long-term tax-exempt securities and has deferred its March 15 refunding operations pending Congressional decision on the tax exemption issue.

Senator Brown said yesterday that consideration of the bill tomorrow is "very vital" in order that the measure can be enacted before the Senate begins what may be a lengthy debate on the lend-lease bill.

Morgenthau and several subcommittee members forecast at the hearing "greatly increased" taxes in the present session of Congress, while Brown said a Federal sales tax might be necessary as "a last resort."

The Treasury Secretary told the sub-committee it was impossible to estimate the eventual cost of the lend-lease bill but maintained that America's defense outlays and the aid-to-Britain program would not push the debt beyond $65,000,000,000 in the fiscal year, 1942.

The present debt limit is $45,000,000,000, plus $4,000,000,000 earmarked for national defense. Morgenthau stated that the Treasury has now exhausted all but $1,123,000,000 of its borrowing authority under the general limitation and all but $1,628,000,000 under the defense limitation.

"This provides the Treasury with borrowing authority sufficient only for the next four months," he said, "and even in that period we would be restricted to short-term obligations for a larger part of our financing operations than seems advisable."

Morgenthau pointed out that every Administration for the last 20 years has recommended elimination of tax-exempt securities and said it is "particularly appropriate" that the step should be taken in order to help finance the national defense program, since "all will be called upon to share in this task."

The present tax exemption privileges "are worth nothing to the poorest subscribers but a great deal to the more wealthy subscribers" to Federal security issues, he said.

President Reported Feeling British Will Win in Six Months

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 12.—It is President Roosevelt's expressed conviction that Britain will win the war within five or six months—if the nation can hold out until summer—it was said today by Bertram Cruger, an American banker who is the London representative of the British War Relief Society of the United States.

He returned here last night from the United States. Speaking about his month in that country, Mr. Cruger described a brief visit to the White House.

"Mr. Roosevelt is as confident as any man can be," he said. "We discussed invasion possibilities, and the President seemed inclined to discount them because in his opinion it would be a foolhardy attempt—though he did not say it would not be made."

$375,000,000 Voted to Run WPA To July 1 by House

The House voted $375,000,000 yesterday to operate the Works Project Administration until July 1.

It was a fund supplementing $975,650,000 originally authorized by Congress for the first eight months of this year.

The new bill, which now goes to the Senate, also included $11,800,000 for customs refunds and special funds for the National Mediation Board and the Public Health Service.

The House rejected an amendment by Representative Voorhis (Democrat), of California, to increase the WPA appropriation to $460,000,000. It also turned down a proposal by Representative Bennett (Republican), of Missouri, to cut a $34,105,000 funds for WPA salaries to $25,000,000.

Foster-Wheeler C. I. O. Union Votes Strike

By the Associated Press

Carteret, N. J., Feb. 12.—Members of a C. I. O. union at the Carteret plant of the Foster-Wheeler Corporation, steam generating and refining equipment manufacturer, voted to strike with the change of shifts later tonight. The plants employs 800.

Neil Brant, organizer of the United Electrical Machine and Radio Workers of America, told a union meeting that negotiations with company representatives on demands for three holidays annually with pay had been unsuccessful.

William Lonsdale, plant superintendent, said his company pays much higher wages than other plants in the industry and grants more liberal vacation allowances.

Brant estimated the value of the plant's defense contracts at "more than $15,000,000."

Rail Strike Called

By the Associated Press

A prospective strike on the Rutland Railroad, which Gov. Wills of Vermont termed "important nationally and internationally at this time," added a fresh complication last night to the defense-labor outlook.

The Governor appealed to Washington to avert the strike of 1,300 employes called for tomorrow to resist a wage reduction ordered by the road, which links New York and Boston to Montreal and which is in receivership. Concern was expressed that the road might never resume operation.

Another development saw an outbreak of violence at the site of construction of the Battery-Brooklyn Tunnel in New York, where two A. F. of L. unions are waging a jurisdictional dispute. Policemen carried on a running battle with pickets in which stones, flats, eggs and clubs flew for half an hour.

A second day of conferences in Washington apparently brought no nearer settlement the C. I. O. strike at the Allis-Chalmers Co. in Milwaukee. The company has $45,000,000 of military orders.

Another conference, in Akron, sought to avert a C. I. O. strike called for today at the Seiberling Rubber Co., which has extensive orders for bullet-sealing tires and tubes and gas mask parts.

Two new C. I. O. strikes occurred at the Youngstown Metal Products Co., at Youngstown, Ohio, and at the Quincy Mining Co.'s copper works in Hancock, Mich., both involved wage disputes.

Still another C. I. O. strike was threatened for today at the American Car and Foundry plant in Berwick, Pa., where the union seeks wage adjustments, a union shop and group insurance. The company has contracts for several million dollars worth of Army tanks.

Jackson Orders Arrest of Bridges, Reopens Deportation Case on New Evidence, Alien Law

By George Bookman

Arrest of Harry R. Bridges, West Coast C. I. O. leader, and reopening of deportation proceedings against him were ordered last night by Attorney General Jackson.

The order was the Government's second move in three years to reach a decision on whether the lean, tight-lipped labor leader should be sent back to Australia, where he came from.

Jackson said he was reopening the case "in the light of new and additional evidence" contained in a 2,500-page FBI report on Bridges, and "in the light of the new provisions of the law."

The Attorney General said that Bridges, who resides with his family in San Francisco, would be served with a deportation warrant and that hearings would begin there March 31 before a trial examiner.

A statement by Jackson accompanying the order made it clear that the Alien Registration Act of 1940 was the justification for reexamining Bridges' status as a resident here.

The new alien law makes deportable any noncitizen who at any time in the past has been a member of or affiliated with a subversive organization.

Before this became law last year, the Government had to prove that the alien in question belonged to a subversive organization at the actual time when proceedings were instituted against him.

Jackson said that last summer he had directed the FBI to "make a thorough investigation of Bridges to find out "whether or not there existed new or additional evidence which would warrant the bringing of deportation proceedings" against him under the new statute.

J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, reported last November 28 and on the basis of this memorandum yesterday's order was issued.

"The report of the Federal Bureau of Investigation was purely factual and, quite properly, contained no conclusions or recommendations," Jackson stated.

"This action does not imply," he explained, "that the department has passed on the merits of this case."

Proceedings in the proposed deportation of Bridges were instituted three years ago by Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins, when she had charge of immigration matters.

Dean James M. Landis, of the Harvard Law School, trial examiner at the proceedings, confined his opinion to whether Bridges was a member of the Communist Party at the time the proceedings began.

"Dean Landis' conclusion," Jackson's statement yesterday said, "was that the evidence failed to establish that Harry R. Bridges was either a members of or affiliated with the Communist Party of the United States at the time deportation proceedings were instituted."

Jackson did not disclose what was contained in the voluminous FBI report. Hoover was quoted in a recent Miami, Fla., interview, later disputed, that the report shows positively Bridges had been a member of the Communist Party. At the time the report was given to Jackson, Bridges commented that the FBI evidence was "faked" and had been obtained "by bribery and intimidation."

Bridges, head of the CIO Longshoremen's Union on the Pacific Coast, is a power in labor circles. He has figured in waterfront strikes during the past several years and is a member of the CIO executive board.

Bridges Charges 'Persecution'

San Francisco, Feb. 12 (AP).—Harry R. Bridges, West Coast labor leader, asserted today that new deportation proceedings against him were "persecution" and "part of the drive against labor."

New "Elevator Shoes" Provides Little Fellow a Lift

By Jane Driscoll
The Post Fashion Editor

THE LITTLE MAN who wasn't there gets a break. We waited a long time to see the day, but now the miniature husband can raise himself to his wife's height or a beau can equal his best girl's tower of strength.

No more will he be classed in Yehoudi's mythical race, but he'll be a flesh and blood reality. And it's all because of the discovery of "Elevator shoes." They actually give a fellow a "lift" of 1 to 1½ inches in stature.

An extra layer of cork, starting at the heel inside the shoe, extends and tapers to the toe. The exterior is a little bit higher than the ordinary shoe, too, but this difference is very minute. In fact, at the local store where these shoes are available, the buyer had to demonstrate by comparing a normal pair of shoes with Elevators before the actual difference was noticed.

Nazi Raiders Attack British Libyan Bases

By International News Service

Berlin (Thursday), Feb. 13.—German warplanes blasted Britain's Libyan bases in a cripoling series of aerial bombardments yesterday, it was officially announced here early today.

Authoritative quarters said British air bases, troop camps and troop columns were heavily bombed.

Direct hits were scored on columns of marching troops and once dispersed they were raked with machine gun fire from low-flying Luftwaffe raiders, these quarters said.

German warplanes repeatedly bombed the British Mediterranean stronghold of Malta yesterday afternoon, destroying three Royal Air Force planes in dogfights, authoritative quarters said.

Graziani Reported Off to Rome

Cairo, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—British land and air forces struck deeper into Italy's East African empire on four fronts today as reports reached Cairo that Marshal Graziani, commander in chief of the shattered Fascist army in North Africa, had left for Rome by airplane.

The reports that Graziani had flown home, perhaps on orders of Premier Mussolini, came from the captured Italian base of Bengasi in eastern Libya, but lacked confirmation.

It also was reported here that the 17,879-ton crack Italian liner Conte Rosso had struck an Italian mine in the Mediterranean while en route to Sicily with refugees from North Africa and that many were drowned.

What appeared to have been the heaviest British bombing attack thus far on Germany's Stuka dive-bomber bases on the Island of Sicily was reported in an R. A. F. communique tonight.

British planes, taking off perhaps from the newly captured Libyan base, bombed the Sicilian airdromes of Comiso nad Catania in waves Tuesday night in an attack that lasted five hours and caused great damage, it was stated.

The raiders, which arrived over their targets at 20-minute intervals, destroyed at least four planes on the ground at Catania and started large fires "visible more than 60 miles away." A hangar was blown up with a direct hit.

At Comiso, the R. A. F. said, fires were started and burned for a long time.

On the African battlefronts action was highlighted by:

1. Announcement by the British Middle East command of the capture of El Ghena in Eritrea, along with prisoners and equipment, by empire forces striking down from the north and reports that the British column driving down the Red Sea coast is within about 120 miles of Massawa, chief port of Eritrea.

Heights Captured

2. The capture of two strategic mountain heights, one of 5,000 and the other of 4,000 feet, south of Cheren in a British assault aimed at encircling the railroad town atop a plateau 35 miles northwest of Asmara, capital of Eritrea.

3. Capture by empire forces of Mai Mefales, 40 miles west of Adiugri which is south of Asmara, thereby tightening further a huge pincers on the Eritrean capital.

4. Continued penetration by Britain's Kenya forces into southern Ethiopia and Italian Somaliland—to depths ranging from 60 to 75 miles—aided by planes of the South African air force.

5. A bombing attack on Addis Ababa, capital of Ethiopia and seat of the Fascist viceroy, the Duke of Aosta, where airplane hangars were said to have been bombed and set afire.

6. British bombing assaults on the airdromes of Maritza, Calato and Katavia on the Island of Rhodes in the fortified Italian Dodecanese Islands off the Turkish coast, destroying a number of grounded planes and leaving building in flames.

7. Announcement that 86 unserviceable planes, including a German Heinkel 111 and a German Junkers 88 had been seized at the Bengasi Airdrome of Benina, apparently damaged in the heavy R. A. F. bombardments that preceded the fall of Bengasi.

8. A dive-bombing attack by planes of the South African Air Force Monday on Afmadu in Italian Somaliland.

Wednesday's Middle East communique said that "operations about Cheren are developing well while our column operating farther south penetrated still deeper into hostile territory."

Thus far, it was stated, 80 Italian guns have been captured or destroyed in the Eritrean fighting.

"In Libya there is nothing of importance to report," the communique added.

British military authorities said, however, that the important Italian oasis of Giarabub, 125 miles south of Bardia and one of the last remaining pockets of Italian resistance in eastern Libya, might fall soon.

Cairo, Feb. 12 (AP).—More than 1,000 Axis planes have been shot down and destroyed in Africa since the war began, authoritative British sources said tonight.

British Hard Put to Halt Native Killings of Italians in Libya

By Edward Kennedy
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bengasi, Libya, Feb. 12.—All Cyrenaica is settling down under British rule, but Mussolini's Roman Eagles still perch upon the pillars of the lost jewel of Fascist empire.

Mottoes on the buildings extol the new Roman empire, but the Union Jack hangs from the Bengasi city hall and British and Australian soldiers walk in the streets.

Bengasi fell Friday to the British army of the Nile.

Proclamations on the walls announce that the former Italian province, which the Fascists incorporated into Libya, is under British military rule with Lieut.-Gen. Sir Henry Maitland Wilson as governor.

All 40,000 natives and some 7,000 of the city's 20,000 Italian civilians are here with the local government functioning. Shops are slowly reopening.

The main problem has been to stop looting of Italian property by natives, and orders have been given to shoot. So far shots have been fired only as warning.

British patrols are striving to restore order in the countryside where natives have killed a number of Italian agriculture colonists and pillaged their small homes.

A 6:30 p. m. curfew has been imposed to prevent violence or sabotage, but the Italian populations remains docile.

Those Italians remaining are mostly anti-Fascist or indifferent to Fascist politics. Ardent Fascists fled.

Axis planes have hammered at Bengasi every night since the British established themselves here and began converting the erstwhile Fascist base into a formidable springboard for further attacks on Tripoli and Italy.

They have been chased off with scant damage done, however.

Lines of prisoners are being marched from the Barga El Beda region, 75 miles to the south, where a British armored division cut off and captured an Italian army of 15,000 attempting to escape to Tripolitania.

The value of the lira has been set at 400 to the pound sterling, making it worth about 1 cent instead of the official Italian rate of 5 cents.

Prices are mounting steeply.

Fleeing from Nazi-conquered central Europe in fear of persecution because of their religious or political beliefs, more than 4,000 refugees a month—mostly Jews—are pouring into the United States with the hope of finding freedom as American citizens.

State Department records yesterday showed that since last July 1 more than 32,000 immigrant visas had been issued to such refugees and they have been arriving in this country in a steady, never-diminishing stream.

Among those granted visas were many who had found temporary refuge elsewhere after hurried flights from their homelands, including 14,000 in Portugal, 3,000 in Cuba and 2,000 in Shanghai.

An estimated 600,000 applications for visas are now on file in American consulates throughout Europe, officials raid. There have been 300,000 requests—mostly from Jews—in Germany or German-occupied countries, and another 200,000 in unoccupied France, with Jewish applicants again accounting for a large percentage of the total.

German authorities recently have permitted some Jews to leave the Reich or conquered territory, and American Jewish relief committees are now attempting to assist all permitted to depart to reach a haven here or in some other country.

Another big bloc of refugees seeking admission is made up of 85,000 Spaniards in France, some of whom are held in concentration camps as Communists or undesirables. Approximately 350,000 Spaniards fled to France in the wake of Spain's bitter civil war, but most have returned to Spain after making their peace with the Franco government.

Officials here said they doubted that many could come to the United States, even if visas were granted, since they cannot pass through Spain, now the only available route to the Portugues ports where passage to America can be obtained.

The increased number of visas granted, it was said, had practically made unnecessary the work of President Roosevelt's special committee, formed to recommend visas for political refuges and intellectuals. Officials said visas had been granted to practically all those among the 2,000 recommended who were able to take advantage of them.

Nazis See Gloom In Willkie Report

Berlin, Feb. 12 (AP).—The German Press today pictured Wendell Willkie's Senate Committee statement as one of pessimism over British prospects.

The Hamburger Frendenblatt said Willkie "found himself in the dilemma of all Englishmen in the contradiction between the cry for help and the make-believe prospects for victory. He refused to talk about the prospects of British victory because he saw every indication of British defeat in England."

This commnet followed the statement of a German spokesman that Willkie's expressions were "uncertain and hesitant."

Gen. Terella Blamed for Bengasi Rout

By the Associated Press

Cairo, Feb. 12.—Gen. Annibale (Electric Whiskers) Bergonzoli, captured by the British in the sand dunes of Libya, today laid responsibility for the final Italian rout at Bengasi on Gen. Tellera, commander of the Tenth Army who died of wounds suffered in the fighting south of that fallen port.

Gen. Bergonzoli said he had advised the immediate evacuation of Bengasi when straggling Italian troops arrived there from Derna, but Gen. Tellera believed there was adequate time to retreat and decided to wait another 24 hours.

The British and Australian troops struck at Bengasi from the north and also trapped Italians attempting to flee to the southwest.

Gen. Tellera was wounded fatally when an Italian antitank gun backfired, Bergonzoli said.

Gen. Bergonzoli also told of his escape from Bardia.

With 25 staff officers he said he walked for five nights in the retreat from Bardia, sleeping by day in hideouts afforded by wadis (dried river beds) and obtaining food from Bedouin tribesmen.

After reaching Tobruk he got out of there by airplane to Derna. From there he said he retreated with the last Italian contingent before the British forces entered.

He was among the Italians streaming out of Bengasi toward Tripoli when captured.

Willkie Is Drifting From Party, Leader Says

Port Arthur, Tex., Feb. 12 (AP).—R. B. Creager, of Brownsville, Tex., Republican national committeeman, said in an interview today that Wendell L. Willkie, by supporting the lease-lend bill, was "drifting away from the Republican party."

Creager, here for a Lincoln Day address, said enactment of the bill would mean "embracing tyranny at home to fight it in the world."

HERE'S THE BIG DEAL YOU'LL WANT!

Success of the big new Ford enables Ford Dealers to give you an unusually good deal . . . See Your Ford Dealer Today!

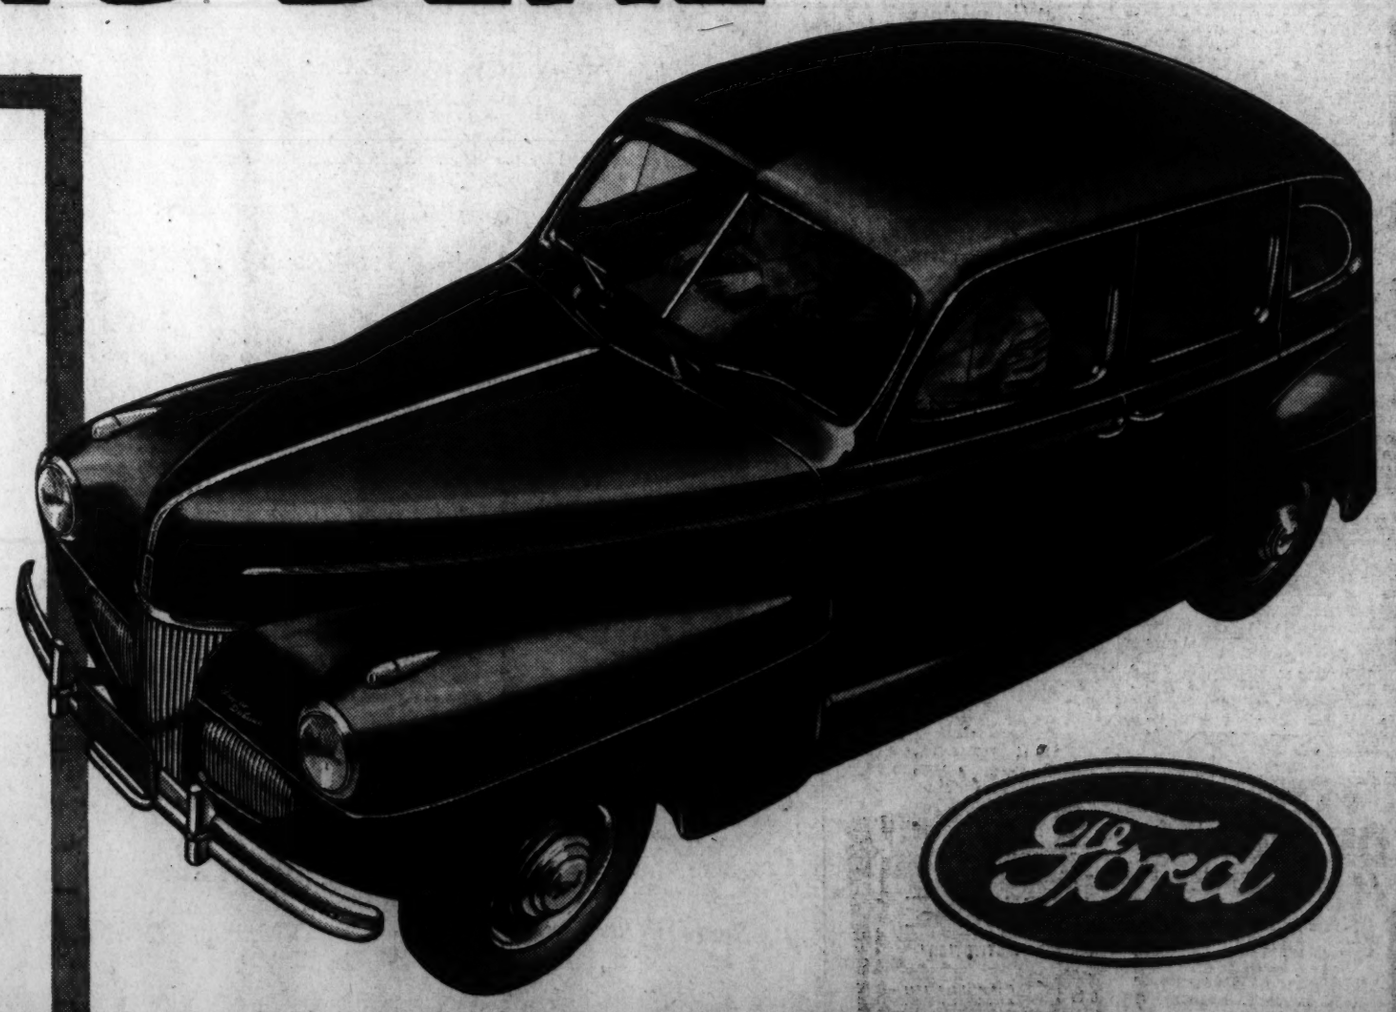
NO matter what kind of car you're driving, you'll find it good sense to see a Ford Dealer before you trade this year.

You'll find Ford Dealers eager to trade . . . and you'll find them offering a car that out-classes its field in several very important ways.

It's a big car—with the greatest passenger room, the greatest total seating width, the greatest total windshield and window area, of any car in its price range. It's a comfortable car—with a new Ford ride that's a sensation for its new softness, new quietness, new big-car "feel" on any kind of road.

It's a safe car—with bigger hydraulic brakes than anything else near its price. It's an 8-cylinder car—with lots of proof by now that its owners get its finer performance at no extra cost for gas or oil. And it's a new car, not just in front-end styling, but all the way through its big new modern bodies.

So make a note now to talk with your Ford Dealer. He's got a lot to offer if you're out to trade your car!



GET THE FACTS AND YOU'LL GET A FORD!

RAF Continues Raids Despite Bad Weather

By James MacDonald.
Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 12.—Widespread raids by British planes embracing Hanover, which was attacked for the second night in succession; Bremen and points in Holland, Denmark, Norway and France were announced today by air ministry officials, who said the flights were made under bad flying weather conditions.

Bad weather meant good news for the British public today because it gave them a virtually complete respite from German bombing attacks.

British officials announced that three of their planes—two of them fighters—were lost during the day's activities.

Officials said one enemy bomber was destroyed today by antiaircraft fire in east Scotland and its entire crew of five killed when the plane crashed in a woods. In addition, it was announced that two other German planes were shot down Monday night over Britain by antiaircraft fire.

Thirtieth Raid on Hanover

Royal Air Force bombers last night visited Hanover, the center of Germany's war machine and scene of one of the biggest raids the night before last. Oil tanks, refineries and railroad junctions were targets. It was the thirtieth raid on the city.

Making the fifty-fifth raid on Bremen, the R. A. F. aimed blows at naval, dockyard and shipbuilding yards, the Focke-Wulf plane plant, oil tanks and refineries, causing fires and explosions.

Early today other British planes attacked shipping at Kristiansand in southern Norway and the seaplane base of Thisted in Jutland. At Rotterdam big explosions occurred after the R. A. F. bombed an oil plant.

Long-range guns on the Nazi-occupied French coast hurled big shells today across the Channel. The missiles badly damaged two houses, shattered windows in other residences, killed some chickens but did not hurt any civilians.

Channel Coast Shelled

Shortly after noon the Germans fired a seeming practice shell across the Straits of Dover, but its only effect was to warn people to expect more missiles. When more shells came over later everybody was safely under cover.

An R. A. F. bomber crashed at Cambridge today upon its return from a raid. The plane's crew of three escaped uninjured, but the wreckage of the machine hit a row of houses and killed three elderly women.

A vanguard contingent of pilots who completed their training in southern Rhodesia arrived today.

Rome Admits British Threat In Somaliland

By Herbert L. Matthews
Copyright by New York Times

Rome, Feb. 12.—The extent of the British threat to Italian Somaliland was revealed by the Italians themselves today in a war bulletin which states: "An enemy mechanized column supported from the air occupied Afmadu."

This town is a road junction in southwestern Somaliland, more than 80 miles from the Kenya frontier and a little less than 70 miles from Chisimaio, the second important port of the country.

In Cheren, it is stated, very heavy fighting took place yesterday, which makes it seem as if the destiny of that Eritrean town is now being settled.

Twenty-five enemy planes were destroyed in yesterday's operations, says the communique. This makes 74 in all claimed by Italy in four days, during which it is stated that only five Italian planes were lost. Of the total, it is claimed 32 were shot down in combat, 9 fell to antiaircraft guns and 33 were destroyed on the ground.

German Help Hinted

The most intense activity, according to Italian accounts, has been over the Greco-Albanian front, where the weather has cleared after a long bad spell. The unofficial accounts, incidentally, mention the bombing of Greek troops in the sector of Klisura and Tepeleni, which are the first admission that the Greeks have driven beyond Argirocastro.

Writing in the Popolo d'Italia about operations in Ethiopia, Mario Appelius says:

"We have not had time fully to consolidate."

But he predicts that the British are going to have a hard fight. Their successes, he says, "are disproportionate to the ignominy of helping the Negus."

Appelius asserts it is "possible" that the Germans will help in Libya.

Admits "Some" Grumbling

He admits that internally there is some grumbling over recent developments. He claims that 80 per cent of this grumbling is done by sincere patriots who mean well.

"Twenty per cent are impure," Appelius continues. "But these are the slag which exists in every country. There is grumbling even in London, but London resists. The error of the English lies in believing that the Italians are less resistant than the British."

The criticisms in Italy, Appelius claims, come from "the margins of the middle classes."

Petain Waits to Confer With Franco

head of government, felt it was important enough to make the long journey to the south of France and wait all day and night for the sake of hearing Gen. Franco's report.

One report said that Gen. Franco might go on to Rome for a further conference, but the general expectation was that he would cross through France again tomorrow on his way home. It is certain that Marshal Petain did not come to the south of France solely for a rest or to look after his olive grove.

It may be, in fact, that it is a direct consequence of the long negotiations with the occupying authority, which ended this week with the appointment of Admiral Darlan as successor to Pierre Laval. Admiral Darlan has just assumed the burdens of his triple office of foreign minister, vice president of the council and minister of the navy, but he left Vichy to be at hand when the outcome of the Bordigliera conversations became known.

Marshal Petain's movements during the day showed that his interest was divided between a special train, which was side-tracked here most of the day, and his private estate, L'Hermitage, near Villeneuve-Loubet, in the Riviera hinterland.

The marshal's special train of seven cars reached Cagnes at 8 a. m., coming from Vichy, with the marshal's own automobile on board. For an hour after his arrival the marshal remained on the train. It was impossible to get anywhere near it, except for those who had passes.

Mobile guards and police were thick in the vicinity, as indeed they were in nearly every town along the Riviera. The roads have been watched as carefully as the railroad lines, for Gen. Franco, accompanied by numerous motorcycle and sidecars and guiding automobiles had whirled across France from Cerbere to Arles and then via Aix-en-Provence to the Riviera on his way to confer with Premier Mussolini.

Leaving the train shortly after 9 a. m., Marshal Petain entered the automobile of a prefect and drove to Villeneuve, accompanied by Gen. Auguste-Marie-Emile Laure, Marshal Petain's secretary-general. Mme. Petain went on this trip also. Remaining away for about an hour, and therefore not having had much time to visit his estate, he returned in a special coach for lunch.

In the afternoon he again spent another hour near Villeneuve, during which time the special train was moved from Cagnes to Antibes. There, the marshal, by automobile, rejoined the cars in the late afternoon.

Franco May Step Aside

Vichy, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Proposals for creation of a "Latin bloc" challenging Britain's Mediterranean conquests were reported to have been discussed today at a secret conference of Premier Mussolini and Generalissimo Franco of Spain somewhere in Italy.

Reports persisted that Adolf Hitler, Foreign Minister Joachim von Ribbentrop or some other high-ranking Nazi official participated in today's conference in Italy, but they lacked confirmation.

600,000 Nazi Mass in Rumania; Bulgaria Fears British Move

Balkans, announced that Bulgaria "fears England is about to violate her neutrality, thus dragging Bulgaria into the war." Concern was expressed that British planes might fly over Bulgaria to get at the Rumanian oil fields.

Bulgars on Turkish Border

British quarters here in Belgrade asserted that Bulgaria's army was massed almost in its entirety on the Turkish frontier and that the Bulgars planned to prevent Britain's allies, the Turks, from intervening if the Germans marched through Bulgaria to assault the Greeks.

The German and Italian ministers conferred in Sofia with Ivan Popoff, the Bulgarian foreign minister.

Also reported from the Bulgarian capital was the completed mobilization of the first Bulgarian army corps, to "relieve soldiers who are in the line along the Greek and Turkish frontiers."

Commandeer Glycerine

The Rumanian government prepared for what was described officially as "any eventuality." Workmen put sandbags about the American-built telephone exchange and other vital buildings in Bucharest. Air raid shelters were being completed throughout the city.

The Rumanian war ministry ordered the public to surrender every drop of glycerine—which is used in the manufacture of munitions.

Three hundred big German tractors of the kind used to pull heavy guns arrived by rail in Bucharest.

From Istanbul, Turkey, came news that a British military mission, which had just finished inspecting the Turkish fortifications along the Greek frontier, had begun a new tour of Turkish military establishments in Anatolia.

Rumania's precautions were understood to include a plan for evacuation within the next few days of the entire civilian populations of Ploesti, the oil field town; Constanta, the Black Sea port, and the Danube town of Giurgiu.

Cotton And Rayon Rational in Britain

London, Feb. 12 (AP).—The government announced today war requirements had forced sharp reductions in the supplies of cotton and rayon which would be allowed domestic consumers.

Use of cotton for the six months beginning April 1 was fixed at 20 per cent of the normal peacetime supply. The rayon quota was set at 40 per cent of usual requirements.

The Lancashire member of Parliament said in the House of Commons lobby, after the announcement, the restrictions would force many cloth mills to close.

U. S. Hasn't Asked About War Aims, Churchill Says

By the Associated Press

London, Feb. 12.—Prime Minister Churchill declared today that "there is such common comprehension in the United States" of British war aims that no occasion had arisen to outline them for representatives of the Washington Government.

He told the House of Commons that no American representative, to his recollection, had ever broached to him the subject of Britain's aims in war and post-war reconstruction.

His statement replied to a question in the House of Commons by J. H. Martin, Laborite, who asked assurance that before any statement was made outside Britain on peace aims and reconstruction the government would first inform Parliament.

"Statements of British policy will be made by ministers on such occasions as are agreeable to the public interest," Churchill said.

Reynolds Urges Latin America Motor Trips

Senator Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, yesterday broadened his activities from those of District "mayor" to those of goodwill ambassador for the Latin Americas.

Addressing the advisory council of District Motor Club at the Washington Hotel, Senator Reynolds urged A. A. A. officials and motorists in general to get into their automobiles and drive to Buenos Aires. With the completion of the Pan American Highway, he said, such travel will become commonplace.

Senator Reynolds related his own experiences in Mexico and South American countries. The Pan American Highway now runs through Mexico and forms the longest scenic roadway in the world, Reynolds said.

"Little needs to be done to it," he added, "before you can drive to Buenos Aires in safety and comfort."

Upon motion of P. Y. K. Howatt, chairman of the highway and bridge committee, the advisory council adopted resolutions opposing the closing of Van Ness Street through the Bureau of Standards grounds and the location of the Pan American annex across Virginia Avenue and Eighteenth Street.

Mrs. George Thorpe, chairman of the legislative committee, outlined a six-point program for the District Motor Club.

It embraced off-street parking facilities, a separate traffic court, 100 additional policemen, extension of the driver training courses in high schools, reopening of the District testing laboratory, and repeal of the pro rata personal property tax on automobiles.

A testimonial book was presented to Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police, by Senator Reynolds on behalf of the advisory council. Washington I. Cleveland announced that the A. A. A. had decided to donate a cabin for the use of the Metropolitan Boys Club at Scotland, Md.

20,000 Men Offer Blood of 75 Pets To Save Laddie

Monterey, Calif., Feb. 12 (AP).—The 75 dog mascots of companies at Fort Ord were offered today by the fort's 20,000 men for blood transfusions to help save the life of Laddie.

The 10-year-old Airedale, so broken hearted over being separated from his master, Private Everett Scott, that he had refused to eat, has been recovering slowly since he was brought by plane from Kansas City to his master's side.

One blood transfusion helped. A huge St. Bernard is standing by. Today the men at the camp, united in their interest in Laddie's welfare, joined in offering the mascots of various companies for other transfusions, if needed.

'Passionate' Study Of Sand Credited For African Drive

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—The "passionate interest" of a British army officer in sand, any kind of sand, was ascribed today as at least partly responsible for British military successes in the African campaign.

Sir George Sansom, visiting professor at Columbia University, speaking at a luncheon, told of the interest of Maj. Ralph Alger Bagnold, in "sand dunes, sand drifts, sand formations, the consistency of sand, in fact anything about it."

The major studied the sands of North Africa for many years and it was such research, Bagnold said, which enabled our troops and our mechanized transports to move swiftly across great arid spaces, to strike hard blows and so to cause that discomfiture of Signor Mussolini which was eloquently described by Mr. Churchill in his broadcast on Sunday. I feel sure that when the history of the Libyan campaign comes to be written, Gen. Wavell will ascribe some of the credit for his success to this student of an obscure problem."

Police Write Krivitsky Down as Suicide

Mexico City last night:

"Krivitsky's death was not a suicide. That suicide theory is just one of the OGPU's many schemes to attempt to cover up its murders.

"Stalinists, for example, tried to make the first unsuccessful attack on Trotsky appear as self-assault."

Like Mrs. Trotsky, associates of her husband, who was killed in Mexico City last summer, have insisted that Krivitsky's death was a plot of the Russian secret police. They have held that if Krivitsky was not actually "liquidated" by a master killer of Stalin, he was at least hounded into self-extermination by incessant surveillance or had actually agreed with his shadowers to kill himself to save his wife and son, now living in New York.

Thompson, however, told reporters that the Krivitsky case is closed "as far as the Police Department is concerned."

There remains one formality, however, before Coroner MacDonald will release a certificate of suicide, retracted after its issuance Monday, to the District Health Department.

Dr. MacDonald said he would swear in a jury over Krivitsky's body at the District Morgue at 11:30 a. m. today—an unusual procedure intended to make identification of the body official and permit its release to Krivitsky's family for burial.

Dr. MacDonald said the suicide certificate would be released today and the body turned over to the John R. Wright funeral home, 1337 Tenth Street Northwest, which has been engaged by Louis Waldman, Krivitsky's friend and attorney, to attend to the details of shipment to New York.

Lieut. Darnall and Detective Horace Caranfa returned to Washington last night with positive identification of the automatic pistol found with Krivitsky's body and detailed typewritten statements from a former German army officer and his wife who were the last of the general's friends to see him alive.

Charles Henshaw, a clerk in the Charlottesville (Va.) Hardware Co., identified the gun—a .38 Colt automatic—by means of its registration number—43907. He identified the man who bought it at Charlottesville last Thursday as Krivitsky through his picture, Darnall said.

Police ballistics experts previously determined that a shell found in Krivitsky's room had been discharged in the pistol. The bullet that penetrated Krivitsky's head from the right temple to below the left ear was lost in the hollow tile hotel room wall.

The statements were taken by Darnall and Caranfa from Eitel Wolf Dobert, 33, and his brunette Grecian wife, Marguerita, 30. Dobert, author and lecturer and a convert from national socialism to democracy, lives with his wife and son, Stephen, 2½, on a 90-acre chicken farm near Gilbert Station, Va., about 12 miles north of Charlottesville.

Krivitsky, old friend of the Doberts, came to the farm Thursday with an unidentified "American friend." He stayed until 1 p. m. Sunday, when he left for Washington with Mrs. Dobert.

Thompson declined to reveal the contents of the statements, but they were presumed to cover in detail Krivitsky's visit and Mrs. Dobert's activities in Washington after she left Krivitsky a half block from Union Station early Sunday night.

Krivitsky had come to the Dobert farm to complete plans for his escape from persecution of Soviet agents. In the section of small farms and dense woods in the Blue Ridge foothill country, he hoped to find safety for himself, his wife, Tonia, and son, Alex, 7.

Henshaw told the Washington officers that Krivitsky signed the gun-purchase register as Walter Poref, the same name he used in registering at the Bellvue Hotel, 15 E Street Northwest, Sunday night. He said Krivitsky selected a box of 50 hollow-nosed cartridges and he denied reports that later a larger amount of ammunition was bought for the gun.

About noon Darnall and Caranfa went to the Dobert home, a tiny, two-room log cabin said to have been the boyhood home of Gen. Thomas Sumpter, a hero of the American Revolution. They were closeted with the couple for more than two hours during which Caranfa took detailed typewritten statements from each.

Mrs. Dobert told a Post reporter Tuesday night that she spent Sunday night in Washington "with friends." It was learned yesterday that she registered at 5:47 p. m. Sunday at the Capitol Park Hotel, North Capitol and E Streets, adjacent to the Bellevue Hotel.

Krivitsky registered at the Bellevue at 5:49 p. m.

Mrs. Dobert said she went to a moving picture Sunday night, went shopping Monday, dined Monday night with friends and saw another movie. She checked out of the Capitol Park at 11:36 a. m. Monday and spent Monday night at International House, 1708 New Hampshire Avenue Northwest.

Thompson's statement to reporters was made after Darnall and Caranfa had returned to Washington with the statements of the Doberts and Henshaw.

Doctors Saw G. H. A. as Threat to Their Standards

being climaxed in District Court.

That meeting, it was publicly shown yesterday for the first time, brought forth a statement by one Medical Society member that a scheme which would spread the burden of medical care in a sound fashion "would have tremendous social value."

It elicited a hint that the Capital's organized physicians would "play ball" with G. H. A. if the latter—still in a formative stage—would resolve itself solely into a "financial organization."

At that meeting, held in the board room of the Home Owners Loan Corporation, which contributed $40,000 to launch G. H. A. as a medical cooperative for HOLC and other Federal employes, a strong intimation that the group health plan was a step toward socialized medicine was delivered by Dr. Thomas A. Groover, now deceased.

Dr. Groover was one of the 21 individual physicians who were indicted on December 20, 1938, along with the American Medical Association and three affiliated societies, for alleged persecution of G. H. A.

"The fundamental thing that concerns the medical profession and actuates it to look askance at such developments as this (G. H. A.)," said Dr. Groover, according to the transcript, "is the consideration as to the effect it may have on the quality of medical care.

"I believe that the medical profession as a whole would be perfectly willing to waive almost any other consideration if they could be convinced that it would not tend to the deterioration of the quality of medical care."

The X-ray specialist, who died last April, asserted that the world's medical leadership had passed from Germany, France and England since those countries began introducing "these social schemes."

More tolerant, however, of experimentation with such group care plans as GHA represented was his younger colleague, Dr. H. C. Macatee, who told the joint meeting:

"I think I might say for the Medical Society that we are in sympathy with the proposition of spreading the costs of illness to individuals over a large group, so that the disasters that come to family budgets may be avoided by that group protection.

"We feel that if some method could be devised by which there could be accomplished economically—and I use the word economically in the sense of not only doing it within the means of the people of moderate income but also from the view of keeping the project solvent—that if some such method could be worked out, it would have tremendous social value."

Dr. Macatee, who is not a defendant in the case at trial, offered the suggestion that the newly organized—but not yet in operation—Group Health Association be a fiscal organization rather than one actually dispensing medical care.

This point was pursued by Dr. J. Russell Verbrycke, another member of the doctors' delegation to the joint meeting in 1937 who argued that "the best doctor would not accept a salaried position for anything you could possibly pay."

Dr. Verbrycke, who is not among the 20 individual defendants, said he could "see no reason why you (G. H. A.) couldn't have free choice of physicians, that is, having every member of the Medical Society who would agree to live up to certain fee tables."

His idea was to have G.H.A. draw upon a panel of District Medical Society members, who would be paid only for services rendered to subscribers, with the central body having only one salaried man who would be a sort of business manager.

On such a basis, said Dr. Verbrycke, "I feel pretty certain that the Medical Society and this organization (G. H. A.) could get together and be very helpful to each other."

The complete 25-page transcript of the 1937 conference was read to the jury by Lewin while William F. Penniman, first president of G. H. A., was on the witness stand. Although he was present at the joint meeting, he made few remarks. After he presented a short introductory statement, the physicians representing the medical society did most of the talking.

Other representatives of G. H. A. at the "let's get together" meeting which failed to bear fruit included Williams C. Kirkpatrick who, like Penniman, was an HOLC official and who later became president of the cooperative; Dr. Henry Rolf Brown, its first medical director, and Ormond E. Loomis, also an HOLC official.

Other witnesses yesterday were Mrs. Dorothy Everett, a former employe of the District Medical Society, who was asked to identify certain letters, and Theodore Wiprud, the society's executive secretary, who was supenaed by the prosecution along with the minutes of the society's 1937 and 1938 meetings.

Dr. Michael J. Davis, who Lewin had said would be called to the stand yesterday, probably will testify today, the Government counsel declared. Dr. Davis, from New York, is an authority on medical economics.

Buick SPECIAL *4-door Sedan, model 47, $1021. White sidewall tires extra.

Here are FOUR NEW ADDITIONS to the BUICK SPECIAL Line that Compact Motorcar Bigness into Handy Size

TIME was when you measured a car's ability and standing by the yardstick distance from bumper to bumper.

But not any more—not entirely.

Not since Buick made ready the four new additions to its 1941 SPECIAL series that are built for big-car travel tastes—and small-car garages!

They are cars to take the measure of almost anything on the road in the lift and life of their 115-hp. Buick FIREBALL engines.*

They are cars that doff their bonnets to no others for smart appearance, rich, comfortable interiors and thoroughgoing Buick quality.

They are cars with room for all the family, with all the little Buick luxury touches, with the unrivaled comfort of Buick's all-coil springing and steady-going roadability.

But bumper to bumper they are shorter—so they fit your garage.

Their wheelbase is 118 inches—so they park like a bicycle and flit through traffic with ridiculous ease.

They go farther on every gallon—farther, even, than other Buick models—and they've got a get-up-and-get-away-from-there lift that gets you where you're going pronto!

So you can't take their measure with a yardstick.

You've got to measure them by what they do for you—in the easier handling, the bigger thrill, the extra convenience they add.

And when you hear the prices on them—prices made lower by their new compactness—you'll find they measure up plenty BIG in the dollar-for-dollar value they put within your reach.

Buick Prices begin at $915 for the Business Coupe *delivered at Flint, Mich. State tax, optional equipment and accessories—extra. Prices subject to change without notice.

*Add Compound Carburetion at slight extra cost and horsepower steps up to 125 while gasoline mileage goes even higher.

Adopt Ideals Of Lincoln, Clerics Urge

Catholic, Protestant and Jewish leaders yesterday broadcast a plea for application of the Lincoln spirit to modern problems.

Bringing a "Lincoln's Day" message from WRC under the sponsorship of the Committee on Religious Life in the Nation's Capital, they were Dr. Charles A. Hart, of Catholic University; Dr. Hugo Schiff, of Alexandria, and Dr. Mordecai Johnson, president of Howard University. Dr. Albert J. McCartney, committee chairman, presided.

Recalling, as did many other speakers during Lincoln Day exercises in the Nation's Capital, Lincoln's "malice toward none and charity toward all" plea, Dr. Hart said:

"Because there was so little of this spirit of charity and so much of hate after the last World War we failed to find peace and thus we enter the valley of death to be tried again so as by fire."

"If we cry 'peace, peace,' and there is no peace," he said in another part of his address, "then we shall known that we have not paid the one price by which peace is had as Lincoln saw it—the driving out of our hearts of every thought of hate and the enthroning therein of a charity which shall exclude no single human soul made in the image and likeness of God."

Rabbi Schiff, spiritual leader of the Congregation Beth El, pictured in Lincoln "the practice of both statesmanship and religious faith," declaring:

"Statesmanship has to encounter the tragic events in both peace and war with a firm will—if not to transform them at least to deal with them by improving the shortcomings in peace time and by lessening the hardships in war time."

Dr. McCartney, in his introductory remarks, said that the bedrock of Lincoln's second inaugural address carried the plain acknowledgement that, while man proposes, God disposes, and that "the judgments of the Lord are true and righteous altogether."

Dr. Johnson spoke on "The World-Significant Soul of Abraham Lincoln," and the male chorus of the Twelfth Street Branch of the Y. M. C. A. rendered several numbers, including "Swing Low, Sweet Chariot" and the National Anthem. Timothy H. Ward directed the singers.

Meanwhile, New York Avenue Presbyterian Church, where Lincoln often worshiped, was the scene of the annual Lincoln Day dinner of the Men's Club, whose members and wives heard Oswald Ryan declare that "Lincoln statesmanship is the only statesmanship that can save democracy today."

Commissioner of the Civil Aeronautics Authority, he was presented by Willard Gatchell, Men's Club president. Dr. Peter Marshall, pastor of the congregation, and Mrs. Marshall; Dr. Albert Evans, associate pastor, and Mrs. Evans and others were at the head table. The church contains the Lincoln Pew and also the Lincoln Tower, the latter given in memory of Lincoln by his family.

Another spiritual-keynoted service was held at First Congregational Church, where the Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War heard Harry B. Fleharty, special assistant to the Attorney General, give an address on the life of Lincoln.

Plane Ride Has No Thrills For Playmate of Tad Lincoln

D. C. Woman Played On White House Lawn In Civil War Days

An 89-year-old Washington woman, who played with Tad Lincoln on the White House lawn 76 years ago, yesterday took her first airplane ride, a Lincoln Birthday present.

When Mrs. Ella F. Gulick returned to earth, she shook her head and declared:

"Not a thing exciting about it!"

The slender, gray-haired widow, who lives at 2401 Calvert Street Northwest, explained later at her home that she doesn't frighten easily.

"I've seen too much in my life," she said. "Only thing would be a runaway, and I've never been in a runaway."

She explained that she was thinking of a runaway carriage, the great fear of her youth.

But Mrs. Gulick confessed that she was a bit uncertain about the 180-mile-an-hour flight beforehand. She took her daily dose of port wine, doctor-prescribed, just before leaving home, she said, and brought along a 4-ounce perfume bottle of it as a precaution. It remained untouched.

The ride was a gift of the Pennsylvania Central Airlines, for which a friend of the family works.

P. C. A. officials offered it when they heard that Mrs. Gulick on a four-month visit to Washington in 1865, played with President Lincoln's son, rolled hoops on the White House lawn, picked flowers from the President's private greenhouse and played tag in the east room of the Pennsylvania Avenue mansion.

"We weren't official friends," Mrs. Gulick explained. "But everything was higgelty-piggelty at the White House, what with the war. There were no guards to speak of. So with my cousin, who lived at Seventeenth and Pennsylvania Avenue, I made the White House lawn my playground. That's how we met Tad."

Police Boys' Drive Gets Under Way Tonight for Funds

The annual sustaining fund campaign of the Metropolitan Police Boys' Club will get under way tonight at a mass meeting and buffet supper, featured by an address by Federal Security Administrator Paul V. McNutt.

Upward of 1,000 volunteer workers are expected to attend the function at 8 p. m. at the Willard Hotel. The club, in its month-long drive, will seek to raise $100,000, the greatest goal of its seven-year career.

Other speakers at the rally will include Charles B. Dulcan, sr., campaign chairman; Morris Cafritz, president; Maj. Ernest W. Brown, club founder; the Right Rev. James E. Freeman, Bishop of Washington; Fred A. Smith, advance gifts chairman, and L. Gordon Leech, campaign director. A tribute will be paid to J. Edgar Hoover, FBI director, in the course of the evening, and Davey O'Brien, erstwhile professional football star and presently a G-man, will be introduced.

Also on the speakers platform will be the 50 directors of the organization. Radio, stage and screen entertainers will perform.

Baering Down On the News

By Arthur (Bugs) Baer.

Back in 1914 I was so scared of submarines I wouldn't walk up a damp street.

Now, this war is tougher than the other one. You can't tell whether a guy is lurking in a cloud or ambushed in seaweed.

I see that the Germans bombed Iceland which is only 1,000 miles away as the crew commutes.

That scares us fellows in New York where the buildings are combination giraffe and bottle necks. If those bombers knock over the Empire State Building there will be hitch-hikers in New Jersey thumbing rides on New York elevators.

The architects say our skyscrapers are the safest places in the world. But I'll still take Horace Greeley's advice 70 years late and lap the field.

56 Leaders Urge War on 'Foreignisms'

Secretary of the Navy Knox and 55 other national figures in the worlds of politics, business, labor and entertainment issued a Lincoln day "Declaration of Independence" yesterday calling for a "relentless war on Communists, Nazists and Fascists."

Charging that the "subversive doings" of these groups in the United States "have become a menace to the life of the Nation," the statement urged the American people to raise the "battle cry, 'foreignisms must go'!" It added:

"We call on our fellow countrymen to rise and wage relentless war on Communists, Nazists and Fascists, until they have all been driven from our shores."

Congressmen Sign

Signers included Senator Barkley, Majority Leader; Senator Harrison, president pro tempore of the Senate; Senators Nye, Glass Tydings, Reynolds, Sheppard, Capper and Bennett Clark; Joseph P. Kennedy, former Ambassador to London; Mayor Fiorello LaGuardia of New York; A. F. of L. President William Green, and C. I. O. President Philip Murray.

Others were Harry H. Woodring, Alfred E. Smith, William C. Bullitt, Joseph P. Davies, Daniel C. Roper, Admiral Richard E. Byrd, Patrick J. Hurley, Dwight F. Davis, George M. Cohan, Eddie Cantor, Kate Smith, Douglas Fairbanks, jr., Lionel Barrymore, Harry Warner, Irvin Cobb and Walter Johnson.

There were also Edward R. Stettinius, jr., John Hay Whitney, John J. Raskob, Richard J. Reynolds, Eddie Rickenbacker, Newbold Noyes, Roy W. Howard, Paul Block, Verne Marshall, Representative Hamilton Fish, former Ambassador Florence J. Harriman and Evalyn Walsh McLean.

Read by Tydings

The "Declaration of Independence" was read by Senator Tydings last night in a radio broadcast. It was published yesterday by the United States Flag Association.

The document stated that "the American people have been most patient and forbearing in their sufferance of the activities of Communists, Nazists and Fascists," and it recounted the activities of the three groups in publishing newspapers, holding meetings and operating schools and summer camps as evidence of this tolerance.

As a result, the declaration said, these elements have "infiltrated into schools, churches, youth groups, labor unions, military forces and munitions plants.

"They, especially Communists," it added, "have secured Government positions that have enabled them to do effective propaganda work and secure certain information for their governments."

"The time has come" the signers insisted, "when the security of the Nation and the happiness of its people require that these subversive activities be stopped."

Dewey Backs Lend-Lease Bill as Other Party Chiefs Assail Willkie in Lincoln Day Speeches

District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey, of New York, indorsed the lend-lease bill here last night as he and Republican leaders throughout the Nation celebrated Lincoln's Birthday with banquets and rallies marked by divergent opinions on British-aid legislation.

Typifying the party's division on the question were speeches by:

Senator Taft, of Ohio, who told a Harrisonburg, Va., Lincoln Day dinner that Wendell Willkie "does not and cannot speak for the Republican Party" on foreign affairs. Taft, a rival of Dewey and Willkie for the 1940 G. O. P. Presidential nomination, said the lend-lease bill "authorizes the President to take us into war."

Senator Nye, of North Dakota, addressing a rally in Philadelphia, termed Willkie's support of the measure a "betrayal" and a step toward destruction of the two-party system.

Fish Denounces Willkie

Representative Fish, of New York, said at a Baltimore gathering that Willkie was "beating the war drums more furiously than the interventionists and the warmakers of the Democratic Party."

Dewey told a distinguished gathering at the Mayflower Hotel, the first Republican Lincoln Day dinner held in Washington, that he was "satisfied" that the House-approved version of the lend-lease bill would be approved by the Senate "with some necessary further reservation of power to the people through the Congress."

"Speaking for myself alone," he added, "I hope it will be. I also hope it will be in such form that it can be adopted with the support of both parties, serving notice on the world that the American democracy in full power is a strong and united nation."

Cautions His Party

However, Dewey declared that in this "period of national crisis, grave responsibility rests upon the minority party" and "it must fulfill its democratic function of acting as a check upon the excesses of the majority."

Representative Martin, of Massachusetts, House minority leader, told the same audience that Republicans "must be vigilant to battle for the preservation of constitutional government." He added:

"The American people want us, as the constructive opposition, to be watchdogs. We will not fail them. "America wants no dictatorship!"

Needs "A New Lincoln"

Also addressing the Mayflower gathering, William E. King, of Chicago, former Illinois State senator, called for recognition of "our country's imperative need of a new Lincoln."

"Now," he asserted, "we are confronted with the problem of emancipation from the tyranny of economic insecurity; the tyranny of starvation in the midst of plenty; the tyranny of usurpation and dictatorship; the tyranny of the abolition of the sovereignty of the people."

Sharing the Washington platform, Senator Brooks, of Illinois, quoted Lincoln as saying:

"All the armies of Europe, Asia and Africa combined, with all the treasures of the earth (our own excepted) in their military chest, with a Bonaparte for a commander, could not by force take a drink from the Ohio, or make a track on the Blue Ridge, in a trial of a thousand years."

Face Similar Emergency

The Nation-wide burst of Republican oratory in honor of the first Republican Presidential candidate and one of the party's founders had a central theme: That the Nation today is confronted with an emergency of similar proportions to the Civil War emergency that confronted the Great Emancipator.

While aid to Great Britain was generally approved, criticism of proposed methods ranged from mild censure to bitter denunciation.

Emphasizing his disagreement with Willkie on the lend-lease bill, Senator Taft declared the 1940 Republican Presidential nominee's testimony in favor of the legislation before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Tuesday was made "as that of an individual and is entitled to respect as such."

Senator Nye told his Philadelphia audience that during the Presidential campaign Willkie charged "again and again that the Roosevelt Administration was edging us toward war by careless speech and careless action."

Before the Senate Foreign Relations Committee Tuesday, Nye said, Willkie was "confronted . . . with these campaign declarations" and "his explanations were arrogant and an insult to the American electorate." Nye went on: "What was his explanation? Merely this, 'It was a bit of campaign oratory.'"

At Brooklyn, Senator Bridges, of New Hampshire, denounced the Administration for its "insatiable appetite for control." Of aid to Britain, he said, "there can be no doubt that our own welfare demands it."

Addressing a Lincoln Day banquet at Hagerstown, Md., Representative Karl Mundt, of South Dakota, asserted:

"On this 132d birthday of the immortal Abraham Lincoln, it is a tragic fact that the goal of 'government of the people, by the people and for the people' for which he so effectively planned is in greater danger of perishing from this earth than at any time since the founding of this Republic."

Owners Wire Praise of Dodge Fluid Drive*

From all over the country came the answers when we asked 5,000 Dodge Buyers to wire what they like most about their new 1941 Luxury Liners!

YES, sir...this giant "value poll" told us exactly where Dodge stands with the nation's new-car buyers! When we asked 5,000 Dodge buyers to wire what they like most about their 1941 Dodge, a flood of telegrams streamed in!

In wires like those shown above, owners themselves made the greater Dodge value an open book for all to read. They praised the Dodge velvet-smooth ride...Dodge genuine hydraulic brakes...its big-car roominess. And that sensational development, Dodge Fluid Drive*, was widely acclaimed!

See and drive this magnificent 1941 Luxury Liner right away!

Legislation Required

As a direct result of the Supreme Court's decision in the Hutcheson case, the Department of Justice has given up hope of upsetting certain labor conspiracies to restrain interstate trade. At the request of the Government, a Federal court in New York has dismissed an indictment against the International Longshoremen's Association, which had been accused of using unscrupulous methods to crush other unions and halt the flow of lumber to employers refusing to "cooperate." This is one of several indictments that will doubtless have to be dismissed. More important, dozens of cases will not now be presented to grand juries because the Supreme Court has said that unions may lawfully obstruct interstate commerce in jurisdictional disputes.

According to Thurman Arnold, the Administration's chief trust-buster, the indictment in the Longshoremen's case "disclosed a situation in which common laborers were forced into a union which holds no elections and over which they have no control." Ten persons, none of them employed in retail lumber yards, he says, were granted an A. F. of L. charter. They elected a president for five years. Since that election, he contends, no meetings have been held and the membership is not consulted on union policy. Yet this union, according to the indictment, forced employes to join it and attempted to destroy a rival union which had secured more advantageous wage contracts.

In this and other cases, dictatorial labor leaders are accused of using industrial warfare to restrain interstate commerce to the detriment of the public and labor alike. Yet the Supreme Court has put these activities beyond the reach of the antitrust laws. Racketeers are left free to break up legitimate unions, to crush all opposition and to hold up interstate trade to enforce their demands.

Amendment of the Sherman and Clayton Acts to correct this defect becomes an urgent necessity. Monopoly and racketeering are no more excusable on the part of labor groups than on the part of industrialists. If Congress investigates the flagrant malpractices of those labor czars who attempt to crush unions and businesses alike to serve their own selfish purposes, legislation to offset the effect of the Court's opinion in the Hutcheson case is not likely to be delayed.

Franco On Tour

A veil of mystery surrounds the exact purpose of the trip to Italy and unoccupied France which Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the Spanish dictator, is making in the company of his brother-in-law and foreign minister, Ramon Serrano Suner. Its potential significance, however, can be gauged by the fact that the present trip marks the first which the Caudillo has made outside Spain since he rose to power. Hitherto he has let Suner do his foreign traveling for him.

So far as can be determined, the result of the visit made by Senor Suner to Berlin and Rome last fall was entirely negative. Even though Franco is bound to Hitler and Mussolini by strong ties of ideology and gratitude—the Nationalists could never have triumphed in the civil war had it not been for the considerable aid rendered them by Italy and Germany—he has hesitated to plunge Spain into war again. And for good and sufficient reason. Spain is far from recovered from the bloodletting and destruction of the civil struggle which raged from 1936 to 1939. The people are tired and hungry. To make Spain a belligerent might have far from pleasant consequences for the Franco dictatorship.

However, if the pull in Spain is in the direction of remaining at peace, the pressure on Spain from the side of Berlin and Rome is in the direction of getting her into war. The Italian debacle in Africa has created the possibility that Great Britain may soon be able to divert considerable naval, military and air power from the Mediterranean to other theaters of the war. To prevent that from happening, the Axis must create new complications for the British in the middle sea. Recent German troop movements in Bulgaria suggest that one form which the Axis counter-offensive against Great Britain may take will be a German thrust deeper into the Balkans with Salonika and the Dardanelles as possible objectives. When this happens it would be to Germany's real advantage to have the British fully occupied on the other side of the Mediterranean, say, at Gibraltar.

It would be risky for Spain to enter the war in any case. It could easily prove disastrous if, before taking the plunge into belligerency, Franco did not make sure of the future policies of the Rome and Vichy governments. If, after he had crossed the Rubicon and joined Hitler in an attack on Gibraltar, the momentum of Italian disintegration should prove too great to be halted and Vichy should prove less rather than more cooperative toward Berlin, the Caudillo might then find himself out on a rickety limb. The generalissimo's present tour, therefore, may be one of exploration regarding the future role of Italy and France in the struggle.

A Futile Amendment

An interesting controversy has arisen over the Dirksen amendment to the lease-lend bill. At the time of its adoption by the House this proposal was regarded as a clever device by which Congress could recapture the powers that bill gives to the President without the necessity of passing a repeal measure over his veto. Now Senator George has asked a subcommittee to redraft the amendment apparently in the belief that it is unconstitutional.

"Nor shall such powers," says the Dirksen amendment, meaning the powers to lease and lend war materials to other countries, "be exercised if terminated by a concurrent resolution." By this means the House is attempting to confer upon itself and the Senate the authority to repeal an act by majority votes without the approval of the President. The Constitution recognizes no such procedure for the elimination of acts from the statute books. It gives the President a very definite part in the legislative process through the veto. And of course the President may veto bills or resolutions designed to repeal a law as well as those creating new law.

It is true that Congress often passes concurrent resolutions which do not go to the President for signature. That type of action is used to create joint committees, to authorize joint sessions and sometimes to modify bills already passed by both houses but not yet submitted to the President. Both houses may also pass resolutions to express their views on a subject. If any such resolution is legislative in character, however, it must go to the President for his signature. The power to make national policy can't be exercised by Congress alone, unless the President fails to sign a bill or Congress passes it over his veto.

On the other hand, it is equally plain that Congress, in granting powers to the Executive, may fix the time and the conditions under which those powers shall become effective or shall expire. Under the Reorganization Act of 1939, for example, the President was authorized to effect a regrouping of executive agencies. But his reorganization orders became effective only after the expiration of 60 days, during which Congress could have upset them by concurrent resolution. In his recent book on the Presidency, Prof. Edward S. Corwin, of Princeton, notes also that the Supreme Court has upheld a delegation of power which the Secretary of Agriculture may exercise only after obtaining a favorable expression of opinion from groups of farmers.

It has long been the custom of Congress to delegate powers that may be applied or may be nullified upon a finding of fact by some other body or official. The Neutrality Act of 1940 prescribed various regulations to go into effect "whenever the President, or the Congress by concurrent resolution, shall find that there exists a state of war between foreign states. . . ." In other words, Congress may provide that delegated powers shall no longer be exercised when they are not needed to effectuate a given policy. And it could doubtless make the House and Senate, acting without approval of the President, the judge as to when the prescribed condition is fulfilled. Mr. Dirksen took no such precautions to bring his amendment into line with constitutional procedure. As it stands, it appears to be meaningless.

Canadian Role

In the House debate on the lend-lease bill an opposing argument stated that the United States was proposing more aid to Britain than the members of the British Commonwealth were making. Canada was cited. "Canada," said Representative Maas, "while she has sent a few volunteers, hasn't even resorted to conscription. Canada's resources have not been tapped to finance British war material purchases."

We may leave out of consideration the remark on man power in view of the fact that the issue has to do with munitions. Is Canada, who is a cobelligerent with Britain, working to the full in the provision of munitions? The answer is a consensus that Canadian contribution is of such increasing magnitude that, according to an article in The Winnipeg Tribune, the Canadians are spending 40 per cent of the national income on the war effort. The paper adds that, if the United States were to match this outlay, the defense bill would be no less than $32,000,000,000 a year. Moreover, the output of Canada complements rather than duplicates the American output; fighting Britain, indeed, needs the contents of both arsenals, whether they are the same or not.

Certainly Canada neither gives nor leases the munitions she is making for Britain. But then the two countries are vastly different. Canada is a debtor nation, with the highest per capita debt of any country in the world; the United States is a towering creditor. Both are receiving in payment the holdings which the British have in the respective countries. (Britain's Canadian holdings, undoubtedly, are those that pay-to-the-end Americans wish to see the British turn over to the United States.) In this respect alone Canada and the United States are on the same footing. When Canada is debt-free, no doubt she will turn to the lend-lease method, or gifts. One can't imagine the Canadians running up a debt against her cobelligerent and mother country for this joint effort of theirs.

It isn't inconceivable, indeed, that the Canadians may lend and lease to Britain and borrow on lease from the United States. At any rate, Canada has to depend upon the United States for much of the war material she is fabricating for Britain. And to that end she is selling out her holdings in America. When the bottom of that barrel is envisaged, she will herself be a beneficiary of the lend-lease bill, if the terminology of that measure means anything.

The Bar Is Right

By their not unexpected resolution that a local lawyer should fill the vacancy on the District Court bench, the directors of the District Bar Association have rendered the city the same kind of service they did last year in encouraging the appointment of Justice Pine. Earlier this week the Federation of Citizens' Associations unanimously took the same stand. The Barristers, an organization chiefly of younger lawyers, also has offered a slate of Washington men. The arguments in favor of appointing a justice familiar with local procedure are well known and never have encountered any effective rebuttal. The uniform procedure in Federal courts, operative now for two years, does facilitate transfer of justices from one jurisdiction to another. However, each District Court has local regulations superimposed on the basic rules, and in Washington these local regulations are made vastly more complicated by the fact that our District Court must handle cases which elsewhere are the responsibility of State and municipal tribunals. Recent developments emphasize the importance of appointing a justice who can go to work without wasting time in familiarizing himself with local procedure. It has been revealed that besides the jam in civil cases, the District Court at the end of last week had accumulated 316 criminal cases awaiting trial. Although "presumed to be innocent until convicted," 125 persons remained in jail because of the delays. Assignment of a third justice to criminal cases will increase the hopelessness of trying to catch up with the civil docket under present conditions. By all means one of the competent local lawyers should be nominated to succeed the retired Justice Gordon, and quickly.

Go Ahead, Mr. Dies

The House, by its vote of 353 to 6 in favor of continuing the Dies Committee's investigation of un-American activities, has expressed the public's desire that this inquiry proceed. The committee's service in turning the light of publicity on subversive activities has thus been accepted as a necessary supplement to the efforts of the Department of Justice in ferreting out spies and saboteurs. The committee laid itself open to valid criticism when it exposed, and thereby put on notice, persons against whom the Federal Bureau of Investigation was trying to bring charges. Since that time, however, a working agreement has been reached with the Department of Justice. The best concrete evidence of this cooperation is the Voorhis bill which would enable the Federal Government to prosecute saboteurs of war materials intended for export. The answer to another objection may be found in the way future hearings are conducted. The scatter-gun methods employed by the committee in the past have sometimes done more harm than good. Such methods might well be avoided in the future. Certainly the committee ought to exercise every care against giving unlimited publicity to testimony which rests on shaky foundations. On the whole, however, Mr. Dies and his colleagues deserve the green-light signal given them by the House. They have a real job to do and there is every expectation that, in view of the experience they have accumulated, they will do it well.

THE LITTLE NATION.

Having no gift of strategy, no arms,
No secret weapon and no walled defense,
I shall become a citizen of love,
That little nation with the blood-stained sod
Where even the slain have power, the only country
That sends forth an ambassador to God.

Renouncing self and crying out to evil
To end its wars, I seek a land that lies
All unprotected like a sleeping child,
Nor is my journey reckless and unwise.
Who doubts that love has an effective weapon,

Letters To The Editor

The Medical Profession

While our fight in regard to the European war rages in Congress, there is going on in Washington a fight regarding a much bigger and more destructive war than that—the war against disease. The legal fight between the A. M. A. and Group Health may result in something epochal in a way, but it will never settle the question, because there are arguments both for and against both sides. It is high time that we, the laity and erstwhile "victims," have something to say on the subject. What we want is to get well in the quickest possible time, at the lowest cost, and never to get sick again! Doctors could not possibly want the same thing for us without at the same time "wishing themselves out of a job."

A certain eminent physician, whose little book is now widely read and acclaimed, envisions the time when "everyone will be his own physician" and when doctors will function primarily in two ways: to teach health and to take care of accidents, etc. The bodily machine is not so mysterious that it does not work according to laws, more of which could be better understood by the public. But how can we expect doctors whose degrees cost them ten years and $10,000 even to attempt to "teach themselves out of a job." We, the laity, will have to demand this new order and then find a way to make it financially feasible for the doctors. Neither the A. M. A. nor Group Health has the answer. ONE OF THE LAITY.

"Depraved Tastes"

In the Post Impressionist column in The Post of February 3, there appeared an account of a cockfight in Maryland—the heading was "They Die But Once."

Since reading the article, this thought stays with me: What good can we hope to come to our country when such cruel, debasing performances are indulged in by its citizens—not by the ignorant only, but by those among us who should and do know better, but whose love of money and depraved tastes are in the ascendancy.

Cockfights, prize fights, low movies, low standards of the newspaper funny sheets—all of these have deteriorated and are deteriorating the moral fiber of our people. Cannot something be done about this before we destroy ourselves.

May I add my appreciation for the addition of poetry to your editorial page. After reading the unpleasant facts about the world, it is sheer delight to come upon that bit of imagery or whimsy. To me the inclusion of such features is what keeps The Post from being as deadly dull as most newspapers.

Ukrainians And H.R. 1776

The committee representing more than 2,000 groups and societies of citizens of this country of Ukrainian birth and extraction strongly urge the passage of the pending bill on the aid to be given by the United States to the peoples of the British Commonwealth of Nations, Greece and China, expressing their belief that this measure is a "part and parcel of an absolutely necessary plan to protect America."

"We have in mind," they say, "the liberation of international trade, equality of access to credits and raw materials, as well as to sea lanes and seaports for all nations, efficacious administration of international law, general improvement of the standards of living, international organization for the protection of health, safeguarding of interests of backward races, development of democratic institutions and procedures, guarantees of civil liberties, recognition of minority rights, self-determination of peoples combined with a measure of economic unification, and the outlawing of aggression. . . .

"Economic unity of nations and self-determination of peoples should be the two cardinal principles of reconstruction of the world. The failure of Europe and of the part of American public opinion to thoroughly grasp the difficult, but right, and American-proclaimed program of international economic cooperation, reconciled with the idea of national self-determination and political democracy at the end of the first World War, is one of the main causes behind the present war.

"If this failure continues, America will have to resign herself to becoming an armed camp because recurrent bloody world upheavals are bound to ensue and they will threaten our very existence."

Concerning Machiavelli And The "Democratic Spirit"

The letter, "Machiavelli's Writings Reveal Democratic Principles; Perusal Shows Absurdity of Blaming This War on Him," under the signature of Irving Levitas, which appeared in The Post of January 23, should not remain unchallenged. The letter seems to convey two propositions: First, a complaint that the "present political mess," in general, is unjustifiably attributed to Machiavelli's writings; secondly, that the Florentine's writings disclose a democratic spirit.

The first proposition can be easily dismissed from consideration with the observation that the blame attributed to "The Prince" is merely psychological and philosophical. One need not be unduly alarmed on that score. It is the second proposition wherein Mr. Levitas advances the idea that other writings of Machiavelli disclose a democratic spirit that invites serious criticism.

Mr. Levitas maintains that Machiavelli had written other books in addition to "The Prince" and, therefore, the Florentine should not be judged by "The Prince" alone. However, he overlooks the fact that even "The Prince" contains high-sounding notions upon which Machiavelli dwells profusely in his other works. One must not "take the text out of the context and make it a pretext," Mr. Levitas admonishes us. This instruction is valid; consequently, Machiavelli's writings must be judged in their entirety, in pari materia. While it is true that Machiavelli's works, such as "Florentine History," "Art of War," "Discourses on Italy," etc., are sprinkled with democratic ideas, nay, humanitarian sentiments, he "daubed his vice with a show of virtue," according to his own admissions, as a mere pretext to attain questionable ends. To Machiavelli the means justify the ends, and the tragedy of it all is that he justifies any means to gain any end.

From time immemorial, among genuine philosophers, statesmen and sages, profound debate has been flourishing on the question as to whether the use of any means is justifiable for the purpose of attaining desirable ends, the highest goal. These great spirits are strongly divided on this issue. But, with the exception of the tyrant, the autocrat, the bureaucrat and the petty chief, no responsible doctrinaire supports the justification of the use of any means to attain inglorious ends. Machiavelli belongs to the category indicated in the exception.

It is admitted that Machiavelli's writings contain some lofty thoughts. But even "The Prince," as it was pointed out, is not devoid of such sentiments; hence it can be demonstrated through "The Prince" that wherever Machiavelli pronounces a democratic principle, he attempts "to seem a saint when most he plays the devil." A few illustrations will suffice to prove this assertion.

On the question, whether it is better to be loved than feared, Machiavelli concludes that "It has been sometimes asked whether it is better to be loved than feared, to which I answer that one should wish to be both. But as that is a hard matter to accomplish, I think, if it is necessary to make a selection, that it is safer to be feared than to be loved." Here there is a reasonable conclusion that a prince should so conduct himself that he should be both loved and feared, but his preference is to be feared than be loved.

And the reason for Machiavelli's preference is revealed in his concept of the qualities of humanity. He says: "For it may be truly affirmed of mankind in general that they are ungrateful, fickle, timid, dissembling and self-interested; so long as you can serve them they are entirely devoted to you; their wealth, their blood, their lives, and even their offspring are at your disposal, when you have no occasion for them; but in the day of need, they turn their back upon you." Thus Machiavelli expresses high tenets about a mankind that is capable of offering the highest sacrifices, life itself, when it is properly served; and yet teaches that the same mankind is not to be trusted, because they are "ungrateful, fickle," etc.

On the question as to whether princes ought to be loyal to their undertakings, Machiavelli has this to offer: "It is unquestionably praiseworthy in princes to be faithful to their engagements, but among those of the present day, who have been distinguished for great exploits, few indeed have been remarkable for their virtue, or have scrupled to deceive others who may have relied on their good faith." Again, Machiavelli unscrupulously acknowledges the virtue to be faithful to one's engagements, but simultaneously concludes that success and victory rest on deceit and breach of good faith.

Throughout Machiavelli's works, fine, catchy phrases can be found, but the latter are used as a lure and a snare to deceive and to betray; hence Machiavelli's name has gone down in history as synonymous with perfidy and treachery, and his prince is a double-tongued prince, an offspring of Belial or Mephistopheles. Fetcho The Flea

ONE TIME, not so long ago, a vain, bombastic little flea by the name of Fetcho was making a great speech before a crowd of big fleas upon the back of the Brown Dog. His chin was out and his eyes popped and danced like two blue flies inside a sunny window. He was a very small flea, but his talk was big and his ideas were enormous. The only difference between him and the big fleas was that he was very clever and the big fleas were very stupid.

"Fellow fleas," he cried, "the dog upon whose back we toil for a living is unfair to us. He is careless of our welfare, jumping fences and chasing rabbits. He is lean and we are ill-fed. He picks his hide with [illegible] teeth, stirring us about at all hours. He has no respect for us. He rolls in the dust and mud and gallops through puddles of water. He snores in his sleep and keeps us awake. And when he's awake he keeps us from sleep with his scratching, chuffing and tumbling. Shall we allow this to continue? Shall we eat of his insults? Shall we take his dirty digs? Shall we be drowned in sloppy ditches? Shall we be kicked about with his muddy paws? I say no. We must organize and demand our rights. We must have respect!"

"You are right, Fetcho," cried the big fleas in a chorus. "We must have respect!"

From that moment Fetcho became the leader of the big stupid fleas and they followed him obediently. He wrote slogans and had them carry them upon their backs. Some read: "This dog is unfair to fleas." "He bites and scratches us." Others: "We demand our rights." "We must have peace and quiet." "We must have respect." And with these signs upon their backs they started their long march forward from the rump of the Brown Dog.

At high noon of the second day they neared the house of the Mayor. This Mayor was a wise old flea, with a sharp pink nose. He lived alone at the top of a long frizzly red hair, just in the middle of the Brown Dog's back. When he saw this army of fleas marching beneath his roost he adjusted his spectacles and looked very sober, for he saw the banners the stupid fleas carried. "I see trouble upon your backs. Who is this young rascal making fools of you?" he murmured.

"These big fleas are no fools," cried Fetcho. "They are full of trouble and I am the one to lead them out of it."

"Into it, I fear," said the old and very wise Mayor, wrinkling his long thin brows.

"I can't eat," cried one flea. "I can't sleep," cried another. "I'm nervous," cried a third. And the whole army of fleas cried, and Fetcho cried loudest of them all. "I have written THE LAW and we will make this dog obedient. We are marching to his ear this very day."

And the fleas marched away from the Mayor upon the heels of the vain and foolish little Fetcho. But the big fleas were very stupid.

That evening, just at sunset, Fetcho led his fleas to the end of the Brown Dog's right ear just as he was yawning a tremendous yawn.

"Hear, hear," he loudly cried, holding THE LAW in both hands.

"Hear, hear," echoed the big fleas. The Brown Dog yawned again.

"In the name of the fleas of your domain I have written THE LAW. Be it resolved:

1. Henceforth be fair to fleas.
2. And never scratch.
3. You must not wiggle.
4. Nor jiggle.
5. Nor bite your hide.
6. Sleep long and late.
7. And ignore all rabbits.
8. Develop good habits.
9. And never run a race.
10. Keep out of puddles.
11. Back-yard huddles.
12. Your habits have been a disgrace.

"You have annoyed these citizens and abused their rights. You have tossed them about and we object. We must have respect."

The Brown Dog yawned, flopped his right ear downward and pointed his nose right into the sky. Then, lifting his left hind leg, he scratched his ear for 15 minutes. And the last flea he knocked into the air was little Fetcho, still holding fast on to THE LAW and crying out his rights. The Brown Dog got up, sniffed the ground once and trotted away.

"We have been insulted," cried Fetcho as he fell upon his wiry nose. "Brown Dog has shown us great disrespect. We will sit here upon the ground until he comes back and apologizes." Fetcho looked about him and saw only 19 fleas alive of the 400 who had marched with him.

In the morning Fetcho arose, waved THE LAW above his head and cried, "We will march away from this place and hunt out the Brown Dog. We must punish him for this disrespect. Follow me, stanch fellows!"

But the cold night had frozen 7 of the 19 fleas and they could not follow. And when the 13 big fleas marched after Fetcho these poor chaps continued to sit on the frosty ground and stare at the departing army in cold silence. They, too, were martyrs.

Fetcho struck off across the fields, his company of fleas upon his heels. It would have been a sad day for the Brown Dog, I fear, had he happened along. Thirteen fleas are a formidable army when led by a flea of courage and vanity. But the Brown Dog was many miles away and safely out of reach. For days the little army journeyed behind its leader. Now one and then another weakened in flesh and spirit, but Fetcho was full of brave words and courage and led them on.

The last one of his followers eventually tripped over a rusty pin and broke his neck. This left our fiery little Fetcho alone. He was a pathetic sight and soon died, a ragged and shrunken figure, in the dust of an untraveled road. This was in the late summer of the year of Our Lord, 1943. I have often seen the Brown Dog since; but he seldom, if ever, is annoyed by dissatisfied fleas.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

Mr. Willkie And His Party

MR. WILLKIE went to the heart of the matter when he insisted that the real issue before Congress is whether American aid to Britain is to be effective. No responsible leader of the Republican Party is now opposing aid to Britain. Neither at the White House nor among the Democratic leaders in Congress has there been any disposition to oppose amendments to the bill which clarify, define, and limit the President's powers. The amended bill as passed in the House, plus the amendments suggested by Mr. Willkie, not only maintains all the powers of Congress as against the President but even asserts in the Dirksen amendment new Congressional powers of dubious constitutionality.

LIPPMANN

The charge that this bill is a blank check delegating to the President vast unlimited power over war and peace and industry is simply not true. The bill gives the President the power to lease or lend out of the existing equipment of the United States weapons up to the value of $1,300,000,000. This equipment was procured under appropriations from Congress; it is to be disposed of by express authority of Congress. There is in this no surrender of Congressional authority. In addition the bill provides for the manufacture in the United States of more equipment to be made available by lease or loan or exchange to Britain and the nations resisting aggression.

THIS SECTION of the bill is not accurately understood by the general public. The bill says in Section 6 that "there is hereby authorized to be appropriated from time to time out of any money in the Treasury not otherwise appropriated, such amounts as may be necessary to carry out the provisions and accomplish the purposes of this act." It is widely believed that this authorizes the President to make unlimited expenditures. As a matter of fact, it does not give the President one penny. This section does not authorize the President to do anything. What it does, and all it does, is to authorize Congress to appropriate money to carry out the purposes of the act. The President will have no new money when this bill passes. He will not have any money to help Britain until Congress, after hearings in the Appropriations Committee, passes an appropriation bill. And he will have only as much money as that future appropriation bill appropriates.

If this is news to some, it is because not many of us understand the actual procedure of Congress. Yet a lot of things would not be said about how this bill surrenders power if the speakers would read and digest Section 834 of the Rules of the House of Representatives. That rule was first adopted in 1837 and provides in substance that Congress cannot appropriate money for any purpose unless Congress has previously passed a law authorizing Congress to make appropriations for that purpose. Thus in practice Congress always has to pass at least twice on every policy. First it must pass on the policy itself and the administrative machinery for exercising it. This is called the Organic Act, or the authorization; that is what is now before Congress. Then, since it takes money to operate any policy, Congress must again pass on the policy by appropriating money. After the lend-lease bill is law, there will have to be an appropriation bill to make it operative. Since Congress can withhold funds, its control of the policy, as intended by the Constitution, is absolutely unimpaired.

THE REAL question is not whether this bill gives the President power that belongs to Congress but whether, when Congress has approved the policy of aid to Britain by passing this authorization bill, and has provided the funds in a subsequent appropriation bill, the President will act swiftly and efficiently to get the goods produced. The opposition today is worrying about the powers given to the President. In a few weeks we shall be worrying about something much more substantial — whether with the divided and undefined responsibility which exists in Washington we shall get results that make effective enough our aid to Britain.

Perhaps it is not too optimistic to hope that under the leadership of men like Mr. Willkie, Senator Austin, and Representative Wadsworth, the opposition may yet turn from barren obstruction to the real business of holding the Administration accountable for the effective execution of the national defense policy.

THE RECORD of the Republican Party in Congress reveals a certain capacity to learn from experience. Thus, in the House, when in 1938 the naval expansion bill was put to a vote, 66 per cent of the Republicans were opposed. But on the 1939 naval bill only 45 per cent were opposed. In 1940 the naval appropriation bill and the two-ocean navy authorization went through without a roll call.

No one can say, therefore, that Mr. Willkie need despair of leading his party to a clearer appreciation of the needs of the times. The same capacity for learning has been manifested on measures connected with aid to the Allies. On the destructive Vorys amendment in the summer of 1939, just before the war broke out, on the amendment which prevented repeal of the arms embargo and, therefore, delayed the placing of orders for aircraft by about six months, 96 per cent of the Republican membership of the House voted to retain the embargo. By the autumn of the same year, when the embargo was repealed, 88 per cent of the Republicans opposed repeal. Fifteen months ago they did not even wish to let Great Britain buy arms for cash. A few days ago the whole Republican membership of the House Committee on Foreign Affairs, excepting only Mr. Tinkham, went on record in favor of lending Great Britain $2,000,000,000. And when the bill was debated in the House, there were very few speakers who did not say that in one form or another they wished to help the British who "in their valiant struggle which has aroused our deepest sympathy, need planes, guns and war material."

IN THE LIGHT of this record on the two matters of national defense and aid to the Allies, it is a fair question whether the Republican Party in Congress has been wisely led. For, as a matter of fact, it has steadily backed away from its own first commitments. To have taken the pacifist and isolationist position and stood by it would have been one thing. To take it and then back away from it, as the somber history of our times has unfolded, is a confession, it seems to me, that the Republican leaders of Congress have not believed in their principles or foreseen or judged truly the real course of events.

It is a record which demonstrates how badly the party needs leadership from men who understand the world they live in. It is a record of miscalculation and bad judgment. It was this record which produced the revolt that caused the nomination of Wendell Willkie. The historic failure of the old party leaders to rise above their lamentable record is the reason why their party would not follow them in Philadelphia, why the country will not follow them. They have not known where they were or what was happening or what to do about it. Mr. Willkie has known and does know. This fact made him a popular leader and this fact will now cause him to become not merely the titular leader but the effective leader of those who have in their keeping the future of the Republican Party.

In A Committee Room

SOME SORT of moral is probably to be drawn from the difference between historic moments here and abroad. The most trivial ceremony of the German state is performed with military precision and overwhelming significance. The massed troops, big men, standing straight and expressionless, line the high corridors. The banners, bunched in standards, give just the right Wagnerian touch to the immense rooms. The statesmen, elaborately uniformed, glittering with sunbursts of gold lace, deploy to their places with no crowds to hinder. And a nation's liberty is signed away before the small but select audience ceases to clap the grand entrance.

The curious contrast must have sprung to the mind of every contemplative person who squeezed into the jammed, stuffy and disorderly Senate caucus chamber, to hear Wendell L. Willkie testify in behalf of the lend-lease bill. There could be no doubt that the moment was historic. On the stand was the most successful recent leader of the political opposition, only defeated for the Presidency after a bitter, hard-fought campaign, with every personal and political reason to distrust and vilify his more fortunate rival. Yet he had come of his own free will, in a moment of grave national peril, to speak for the policies of the man who had beaten him.

PERHAPS, therefore, it will not be amiss to try to re-create the scene, for the record, as it were. The setting, the Senate caucus room, is an unfortunate example of the plutocratico-imperial style of architecture—huge, badly proportioned, adorned with many useless columns, and veneered with the depressing sort of marble formerly much favored by plumbing manufacturers. Huge as it is, however, the room was not nearly big enough. The people had come from all over the East and Midwest, some arriving just after dawn, all waiting for hours to get in. Strangely enough, they were not the prosperous, mink-coated, wildly be-hatted women and sleek men one had half-expected to see. They were rather simple, ordinary looking people, plain people, but anxious for their glimpse of the significant instant.

At the end of the room the Senators, looking old and bored, sat around their table. Behind the table were the distinguished visitors—the Vice President's wife, Mrs. Henry A. Wallace; friends and powerful constituents of committee members, and the vivandieres of isolationism, Mrs. Nicholas Longworth, Mrs. Bennet Champ Clark and Mrs. Robert A. Taft, who sat, like the syrens disappointed of Ulysses, in a special row of chairs joking among themselves. In front of the Senators' table were the seats for the press, with a little well in the middle for the witness.

Such was the setting. The crowd was so thick that when Willkie made his entrance, he was not seen until he reached his little well. Then those in front started to clap. The photographers, pushing in eagerly, popped their bulbs.

After that there was a long wait, for Willkie had dictated his statement on the plane, and had not received a typed copy in time. He whiled away the hot half hour telling the Senators nearest him of his Transatlantic airplane journey, speaking in the tone of an enthusiastic tourist—"we sailed practically the same route as the old Portuguese discoverers." And then a secretary pushed his way in from the door, bearing papers; Senator Walter F. George, the neat, bankerish committee chairman, called the hearing to order, and Willkie began to speak.

BEFORE WILLKIE began, the crowd had been restless, taking frank pleasure in such minor, monotony-breaking episodes as the appearance of a photographer in search of angle shots on the caucus room's broad marble cornice. Willkie's words commanded prompt attention. He spoke straightforwardly, without special emphasis, developing his argument clearly and plainly. His words were seldom lost in his Indiana burr, for the burr only becomes serious when he grows oratorical.

The Senators listened to the statement as attentively as the crowd, Vandenberg, of Michigan, leaning forward portentously, old Hiram Johnson judiciously smoking a big cigar in one of his paperholders, and all the others assuming appropriate expressions. When Willkie finished, Senator George called the committee roll for questions. The first to venture was Vandenberg, who wanted to know whether war would not result if "we embrace" the President's foreign policy. Willkie replied simply that he could not tell, but that he was sure war would come if we allowed Britain to fall. Then Vandenberg cautiously retired and Gillette, of Iowa, a man of conscience but little clarity, who prays for guidance and receives contradictory answers, took up the attack. Gillette's meaning was somehow muffled. The Senators who followed had little to contribute, and finally it was the turn of Bennett Clark of Missouri.

A large, red-faced, brazen-voiced man, Clark has a genius for public rudeness which makes him a fairly formidable cross-examiner. Washington had been licking its lips for weeks over what "Clark would do to Willkie," and when Clark's name was called all the isolationist ladies stood up in eager anticipation. Unfortunately, Clark was beaten by Willkie's reasonable, quietly good-humored answers. The laugh went against him, and he retired from the attack. There were a few more unimportant exchanges. Senator George thanked Willkie impressively. He took his leave. And the scene dissolved in a violent jostling of people anxious to get out before their neighbors.

The Acheson Report

By Merlo J. Pusey

II

Separating Judges And Prosecutors

THE HEART of the Acheson report is its proposal to separate the function of prosecuting from that of judging in the administrative system. Ever since the principles of democratic government took form, men have clung to the right of an impartial hearing before an unbiased judge when they are accused of violating the law. That concept of fair play is deeply imbedded in our Bill of Rights. Yet, in creating many administrative agencies, Congress has ignored it.

An immense hierarchy of officials has been created to enforce numerous regulatory laws. Congress rightly saw that effective administration of these acts would require special bodies of experts. But as yet it has given little thought to the confusion and injustices which arise when these bodies of experts assume the functions of investigators, prosecutors, judges and appellate courts. This fusion of functions in some instances amounts to a denial of rights that have long been considered fundamental in the United States. For a time our legislators seem to have forgotten that the way in which the law is enforced is no less important in a democracy than the enforcement itself.

"Many—not all—of these agencies," said E. Barrett Prettyman in a recent address, "have taken unto themselves the right to make decisions in such manner as they please, basing their action upon an assumption of their own integrity, ability and impartiality . . . Citizens are faced with rulings about which they are not informed, their rights are adjudicated by persons before whom they are not permitted to appear, the infallibility of the Government is frequently assumed to their detriment, they are subject to the whims of individuals rather than to the impartial application of established principles, they are prosecuted and judged by the same person or the same authority. . . ."

IN MORE FORMAL language this criticism is sustained by the Acheson report. The Attorney General's Committee on Administrative Procedure lays proper emphasis upon the dangers of "commingling" the functions of prosecutor and judge. The great majority of the cases handled by administrative agencies, it points out, are disposed of informally by mutual agreement. But where a controversy arises, it is of the utmost importance to have the facts properly presented and carefully weighed. The committee believes that if the initial decision within the agency "can carry a hall mark of fairness and capacity, a great part of the criticisms of administrative agencies will have been met."

Most hearings before these quasi-judicial boards or commissions are now conducted by trial examiners, referees or other presiding officers with little authority or prestige. Usually they are merely advisers with no real power to decide the cases they hear. "Almost invariably," says the committee, "the agency heads rely heavily upon subordinates other than the hearing officer to digest the record and to draft findings and opinions in accordance with the directions of the agency." So "the conduct of the hearing becomes divorced from responsibility for decision." "The hearing itself degenerates, and the decision becomes anonymous." Attorneys find it a waste of time to argue their cases because decisions are made by reviewers who hear neither evidence nor arguments.

This sort of botchery led the committee to recommend truly sweeping reforms. In effect, it would give each administrative agency a corps of judges to be called hearing commissioners. "These officials," says the report, "should be men of ability and prestige, and should have a tenure and salary which will give assurance of independence of judgment." To make certain that such men would be chosen the committee would have them nominated by the various agencies but appointed by the proposed Office of Federal Administrative Procedure after investigation of their judicial qualifications and capacity. Their terms would be seven years, salaries $7,500 per year, with an extra $1,000 for chief hearing commissioners. They could be removed only for cause by an independent trial board.

THESE HEARING Commissioners would become the fulcrum of the reformed administrative system. They would have full authority to preside at hearings and to "make findings of fact, conclusions of law, and orders for the disposition of matters coming before them." Decisions of these officials would be final, except that they could be appealed to the agency heads by private parties or representatives of the agency. Of course, the agency heads could also review any case on their own initiative. But the committee suggests that such reviews be limited to specific points at issue, and that the findings of the hearing commissioner be disturbed only if they are found to be clearly erroneous.

If this procedure gives the appearance of an appeal from an impartial "judge" to a biased board, it should be said at once that the committee contemplates a much greater degree of impartiality at the top than some boards have manifested in the past. This would be accomplished, in part, by further internal reorganization. Obviously the heads of these quasi-judicial agencies can't initiate every prosecution or hear every case. The committee suggests that this fact be recognized by setting up special prosecuting and investigating divisions. These subordinates would initiate cases with only general supervision from the agency heads. In turn the top officials would confine their activities to the formulation of general policies and the review of appeals in open session.

Efficiency alone seems to demand such a division of labor. Equally as important as good management in a democracy, however, is fair play—procedure that will scrupulously protect the rights of the citizen. By calling for internal reorganization of administrative agencies for this purpose the Acheson Committee has rendered a truly outstanding service to the American system of government.

IT IS TRUE that this proposal does not go as far as the minority believes it should. Messrs. McFarland, Stason and Vanderbilt think the committee's plan "cannot fully achieve the complete independence that is essential for the exercise of the adjudicatory function; and therefore, as an exclusive means of separation, it should be confined to those cases where complete separation of functions is not possible." In cases where it is practicable, the minority suggests that deciding officials be completely divorced from investigating and prosecuting agencies.

To this the majority replies that unless there is some harmony between the "investigating and enforcing arm" and the "deciding arm," confusion may result. The regulation of railroads and control over security issues, for example, are very complicated tasks. There are obvious advantages in assigning such responsibilities to special bodies if the essentials of fair play can be attained by internal separation of functions. The committee is particularly fearful that division of regulatory agencies into completely separate entities would seriously hamper negotiations and informal settlements, which it regards as "the life blood of the administrative process."

"There are, however, some agencies, such as the Federal Trade Commission and the National Labor Relations Board," says the committee report, "whose principal duty is the enforcement, by decision of cases, of certain statutory prohibitions. In the case of such agencies the practical objection . . . to isolating the adjudicatory function and handing it over to some independent body would not exist to the same extent. It would be theoretically possible to assign to one agency the task of investigating charges and filing complaints of statutory violations and to another agency the task of deciding the controversies thus arising."

SO IF CONGRESS should enact the Smith bill separating prosecutors and judges in the NLRB, it could find a good deal of justification for that act in both the majority and minority sections of the Acheson report. Even if it freely admitted that internal reorganization is the best approach to the general problem of administrative reform, extraordinary precautions against biased law enforcement may be desirable in some instances.

By all means the most important point, however, is that investigating and judging be made separate functions in the administrative process. The clear-cut advocacy of this principle is the dominant theme of the Acheson report. Acceptance of this principle will bring revolutionary changes in many of the Administration's "new instruments of power." But it should not be supposed that the committee went far afield to devise means of curbing abuses of authority. It proposes only to take the best methods of well-managed agencies and give them general application, where that is feasible. This fact by itself shows how negligent Congress has been in conferring vast powers upon hastily created agencies without even attempting to direct their far-flung activities according to the American pattern.

Fair Enough

A Delicate Problem

THE BEST WAY to go to the theater is to go alone and cold sober, because that way you can relax and sort of soak into yourself and forget about everything but the play, whereas the other way, well, look:

First you have to box around to find out what she wants to see, and never mind whether you would rather see something else, because you wouldn't say so if you did, and then, naturally, she will pick a tough one, so it will be around 6 p. m. before you even know whether you can get in. Then you have to slap her in the countenance with a steak, and all the time she is baring her pretty fangs at the rare viands and exotic delicacies you are squirming and wishing she would heave it in, because it is 'way across town to the theater, and if there is anything a guy hates to do it is come stumbling in late and walk all over a lot of people. But if you even sneak a squint at your watch, you are hurrying her, and if you are going to be surly, why, it would have been better to stay at home, and it isn't every night she gets out on the town with you, so you might make an effort to be polite if it isn't asking too much.

So then you have to gentle her into the hack, and if it is rain or snow the cab has got to heave to right exactly in front of the theater or, with the silly shoes they wear, she will get her feet wet. Then you have got to ease her through the crowd and down to the seats and lay back her coat for her, and then her program slips off her lap and you have to fish around in the dark, and all the time during the show you have a sense of responsibility and care which is just what you go to the theater to get away from.

In the intermissions some of them want to go out for cigarettes in the lobby, and that means more traffic problems, and if she doesn't smoke, well, you do, and if you do go out and leave her, you are something rhyming with "house," and if you don't, well, that is just the time when you never wanted a smoke so much in all your life.

There is also the hazard that she won't like the show, after all—which is her right, to be sure—but if you are alone and you don't like it, that is simple. You get up and go out. But if she doesn't like it you have got to find out how much she doesn't like it and help her not like it, but, even so, you are stuck, because they practically never give up on a show, even if it is terrible.

I MENTIONED that it is a good thing to go cold sober, too, without any Martinis or anything at dinner, because if you do get a little steam up you are sure to be wanting a dram before the show is half over, but by the time it is all over you are cooled out, and then you have to start fresh at whatever place you go to. And by that time you are ready to curl up and go to sleep right in the middle of Broadway.

Well, after you stand up and help her into her coat and discover that you are standing all over your own hat, which has slipped out of that damn wire thing, and then she drops her gloves and it is slow going up the aisle, and outside there are ten customers fighting for every hack and, anyway, they are all headed the wrong way, where if you were alone you would be out and gone in 9¼ seconds, Eastern Standard Time, and not a care in the world.

They are all right and, on the average, very good company some places, but a great worry in the theater, and, anyway, whoever got up the idea that the theater is like Noah's Ark and strictly two-by-two?

I marvel at that Jules Brulatour, the husband of Hope Hampton, who has been toting her around theaters, fights and all for 20 years, always two-by-two. Think of the dropped programs and gloves that guy has picked up and the problems of traffic and timing he has had to live through. All right, then, she is pretty and all right, and she is sweet for all I care, but I am afraid I will have to say that if I had been Mr. Brulatour there would have come a night somewhere 'way back when she would have caught me in a mood with that program and those gloves, and I would have snatched her pretty little noodle off and thrown it at Bert Lahr.

Mr. Willkie Testifies

By Mark Sullivan

Clarifies Reasons For The Bill

THE EFFECT of Mr. Wendell Willkie on the lease-lend bill is not limited to the agreeable and effective personal impression he made. By his report on the facts, and his analysis of the principles involved, he, to a considerable extent, modified the situation. Because of Mr. Willkie's testimony, the future course of the bill will be to some degree changed.

Mr. Willkie said that Britain's immediate great need is destroyers, long-range bombing planes and mercantile ships. There are other things she will need later—but for these three she has immediate and urgent need. The only source which can supply these things to Britain, at once, is the Government of the United States—because the Government owns all that are available for immediate delivery. (This is completely true as respects destroyers and bomber planes, and largely true as to mercantile ships.) If Britain had all the cash and credit in the world, it would not help her to get these particular supplies, at once. With cash or credit she could give orders to private American builders for future delivery, many months hence. But for immediate delivery she can get them only from the United States Government.

Now our Government, under existing law, is not supposed to sell these things, nor otherwise dispose of them. Actually, our Government has been supplying these things to Britain—but only by indirect devices, a kind of subterfuge. Our Government has turned over 50 destroyers to Britain by two devices—first, by assuming these destroyers are "obsolescent;" and second by putting the transaction on a trade basis—we got in return from Britain certain naval bases.

ALSO, our Government has turned over bombing planes to Britain by the device of telling manufacturers to let Britain have planes being made for us, and give us later deliveries—that is, giving priority to British orders. Finally, our Government, through the Maritime Commission, has been able to transfer mercantile vessels to Britain by the expedient, as Mr. Willkie pointed out, of holding auctions, at which Britain could bid highest.

All this, Mr. Willkie says, is indirect, cumbersome and dilatory. Colloquially, and effectively, he said, "I am opposed to trying to kid along on any such basis." He says that we should, by the lease-lend bill, give the President power to turn these things over to Britain directly and immediately.

Mr. Willkie made it clear that, as respects these three categories, and as respects immediate delivery of them, a grant of cash or credit to Britain would not help. This is—as respects these three categories and immediate delivery—a sound answer to those Republicans and others, including this column, who have urged that we should put our help to Britain solely in the form of cash or credit.

Mr. Willkie admits that many of the arguments for putting our help solely on the basis of cash or credit "have great merit." Nevertheless, he implies that we ought to abandon the cash-credit notion entirely. His position is that, as respects not only the three immediately needed categories, but everything, we ought to put all in the hands of the President.

It is still tenable for advocates of the cash-credit plan to hold that the whole of our help to Britain should be put in two forms. First, as respects supplies now in existence and owned by the United States Government, the President should be given power to transfer such supplies to Britain. But second, as respects other supplies, not yet made and meant for future delivery, the cash-credit plan should be adopted. This would mean that, as respects future supplies, Britain would go on with the present method—ordering from American manufacturers, and making payment to them out of the cash or credit supplied by our Government.

THE ARGUMENT for the cash-credit method is that it would keep upon the shoulders of Britain and Prime Minister Churchill the responsibility for the conduct of the war. It would avoid putting on the President of the United States, and therefore upon the Government and people of the United States, the discretion and responsibility inherent in controlling and allocating the whole flow of supplies from the United States to Britain and other countries. Britain would get the supplies, Britain would be wholly responsible for the use made of them. If Britain wishes to transfer some of the supplies to Greece, China, or other countries, that would be Britain's responsibility.

The argument of those who favor the cash-credit method is, that if our President is in his official self the whole source of American supplies for the war, that condition would put upon the President a partial responsibility for the actual conduct of the war. This might readily become a responsibility for winning the war, and a responsibility for going to whatever length is necessary for winning the war—which might mean, later, something we do not wish to commit ourselves to, at this time.

In general, as respects putting limitations on the grant of power to the President, Mr. Willkie is as apprehensive as anyone else. He endorsed most of the limitations already suggested, and proposed several important new ones.

Berlin Still Second-Rate News Center

By C. Brooks Peters.

Copyright by New York Times

Berlin, Feb. 12.—Although this is the headquarters of the men who claim to keep the "law of action" in this war exclusively in their hands, Berlin continues to be a second-rate news center. For German diplomacy seems to move in secret channels and diplomatic events which in any way involve the Axis most frequently "break" in other capitals before any news is officially released here.

As late as 6 o'clock Tuesday, for example, authoritative quarters in the Wilhelmstrasse professed not to be in a position to make a statement regarding the meeting of Benito Mussolini and Gen. Francisco Franco—even whether such a meeting was planned. A short time later, however, the official news agency declared Franco had arrived on French territory en route to a meeting with the Duce.

Silent on Vichy

So far as Vichy is concerned, furthermore, the Wilhelmstrasse continues to maintain strict silence about Pierre Laval's refusal of Marshal Petain's offer, and Admiral Darlan's taking over of important posts in the Vichy cabinet which the Germans apparently wanted to see in the hands of Laval.

Even the severance of Anglo-Rumanian diplomatic relations is treated as a matter of course here. The Germans declare the reasons for this step by London were purely propagandistic and that the British were leaving Rumania because Premier Ion Antonescu had cleaned up the land situation and there was no further possibility of their carrying on further activities against the Reich.

The objective of the British in Rumania, it is said here, was to get that country into an encirclement front against Germany. When that failed, the Germans continue, the purpose of the British mission in Bucharest was to arrange sabotage acts designed to reduce the economic potentialities of Rumania for the Reich as well as to decrease Germany's oil supply.

Revolt Blamed on English

"In Berlin the people are convinced," writes Dienst Aus Deutschland, the semiofficial service, "that in the recent Rumanian putsch attempt there were English influences involved."

The fact that the British are leaving Bucharest, the press says, is an indication of the decreasing influence of London in the Balkans and of the irrestible retreat of the English from the European continent.

A German newspaper in Norway, meanwhile, reports that the rumored change in the composition of the Bulgarian government may be awaited for February 15. The names of the new ministers are not yet known, this report asserts, but, it adds, it may be assumed that King Boris wants to have, for reasons of foreign policy, a government containing a greater number of strong men "with initiative of their own."

Free Norway Unlikely, Nazis Tell Quisling

Copyright by New York Times

Stockholm, Feb. 12.—Swedish press reports from well-informed Oslo sources indicate that the German occupation authorities have informed Maj. Vidkun Quisling's government that it must not count on the re-establishment of Norway's independence even after a German victory.

A German promise of such independence had until now constituted the chief incentive and propaganda theme of the Quislingists.

The report states that the Germans declared the prerequisite for the liberation of Norway would be complete acceptance by her people of the Nasjonal Samling (Norwegian Nazi Party) and its ideals. A condition to the ultimate withdrawal of German troops is the creation of Norwegian armed forces sufficiently strong for the defense of the country.

Far from encouraging the Norwegian defense preparations, the German military authorities recently decided to build fortifications for themselves in Norway, which the Swedish press says "cannot be looked upon as provisional but definitely of a permanent character."

That there has been such a German warning seems corroborated by the recent change in the attitude of Maj. Quisling's administration and propagandists toward the problem of future Norwegian independence.

Maj. Quisling, who previously had always emphatically declared Norway would regain her freedom after a German victory, now says only that "Norway will regain her freedom to the greatest possible extent."

That the tension in Norway is close to the breaking point is deduced by the Swedish press from leaflets distributed throughout Norway by a secret patriotic organization, asking Norwegians to abstain from too hasty and violent actions against the Quislingists and German soldiers. "The day will come," say the leaflets, "when we shall all together go into action, but not before the signal has been given. Passive resistance, however, must continue."

Presumably as a result of Herr Himmler's visit, the Quislingists are reported trying to teach prison wardens sadism. Many wardens are said to have resigned rather than comply with orders that "instructions for the humane treatment of political prisoners no longer have validity," and those who do not "show an accommodating spirit" must be treated brutally.

U. S. Weakens Axis Aviation Foothold in South America

By Devon Francis.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

Rio de Janeiro—On the lip of Rio de Janeiro's Santos Dumont airport, named for Brazil's aviation immortal, sit two large, German-made transport planes, idle now for a period of months.

They do not fly because native-born Brazilian pilots have not been trained to fly them, and by government ruling they cannot be used on the republic's large and expanding network of airlines except with such pilots at the controls.

The property of Deutsche Lufthanza, the German air transport monopoly, until the European war forced suspension of service over the South Atlantic, they belong now to the Condor Syndicate, a Lufthansa affiliate which operates a service of imposing proportions throughout Brazil.

Certain restrictive measures taken by South American governments against airlines dominated, or partly owned, by foreigners—and that includes business interests of the United States—have focused attention on the role which the airplane is playing in hemisphere security.

Active for 20 Years

For 20 years Europe has fought for an aviation foothold on this continent.

For a little more than half that time the United States Government has encouraged, at first with meager support and later with concern over the implications involved, the competition of North American aviation interests with those of Europe.

To understand the attitude of the Washington Government toward the development of military and civil flying in South America is to understand the growing influx of aeronautical technicians here in the last few months.

To understand the restrictive measures taken by the South American republics against foreign airlines is to understand the concern with which they regard all foreign aviation activity within their boundaries.

The war has emphasized that where a commercial airline can fly, a military airplane can follow.

German aviation interests have been well entrenched in South America. They are particularly well entrenched in Brazil.

But so are those of the United States.

German and North American airlines fly on almost 40,000 miles of routes. But where North American lines have, for the most part, followed the perimeter of this continent, touching at the big coastal cities for a maximum of passengers, mail and express, the German lines have fanned out through the sparsely settled interior.

The United States armed services have sent military and naval missions, including air representatives, to the capitals of the South American Republics for advisory and instructional purposes.

U. S. Planes More Dependable

The Pan American Airways system, embodying Pan American Airways and such affiliates as Panair do Brazil—organized to comply with local laws—flies almost 25,000 route miles in South America.

With Pan-American-Grace Airways, in which P. A. A. owns a 50 per cent interest, and Avianca, the nationalized Colombian line, the route miles in which United States concerns hold a financial interest in all of Latin America total more than 37,000.

German and Italian route miles within South America total about 18,000.

United States transport planes used in South America are more modern and evidently more dependable than those of European competitors. The accident record of lines in which United States firms hold an interest is far and away better than those of the European lines.

Still, German airplanes have been sold in South America because government-subsidized companies consistently were able to underbid United States aircraft factories.

The Brazilian navy bought a complete German aircraft factory not only because the price—based on barter—was right, but also because German experts came to Rio de Janeiro to help set it up and teach Brazilian workmen how to turn out their product.

Experts Visit Berlin, Rome

Brazilians were invited both to Berlin and Rome to study German and Italian production methods, and came away with a justifiable admiration for European efficiency.

Then the war came. German aircraft engines—none is manufactured here—became hard to get. The store of German manufacturing materials got low. Representatives of United States factories grew in favor. A Brazilian manufacturer returned from a trip to North America with the report that United States airplanes were superior in many respects to those made in Europe.

Moreover, under the German barter system, Brazil could not absorb in German-manufactured products the value of its own agricultural products exported to Germany.

The war gave the United States the first decided competitive advantage with Germany in Brazil in several years.

Council Warns Against Booms Boomeranging

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 12.—The Council for Democracy today urged community planning for production, employment and allied problems as an essential to the success of the defense program.

In a memorandum prepared with the aid of a national panel of consultants, the organization recommended formation of community councils representing all local groups "to cooperate with and inform existing organizations during the emergency."

Declaring that the community's main opportunity and the Nation's most immediate need lay in production, the council warned against "booms that boomerang" and advocated the "farming-out" method of production wherever possible.

Benefits of this method were listed as:

"(1) Existing capital investment is fully utilized and no time is lost in building new plants and new machinery.

"(2) In the event of bombing attacks upon the United States, the dispersal of industrial activity provided by the farming-out system provides maximum security for maintenance of production.

"(3) Local labor is employed and this eases the problem of what to do with workers when defense activities cease.

"(4) There is no increase in the housing problem.

"(5) Serious dislocations in relief are avoided and the necessity of building temporary schools and other social centers is removed.

"(6) By utilizing present capacity to its fullest extent, post-emergency adjustment is facilitated."

The council's consultants said that the demand for productive capacity must be met by each locality with an "authoritative" statement of local resources and a workable plan for putting it to use, and they gave as examples of cities where this had been done, successfully, York, Pa.; Bloomington, Ind., and Kansas City, Mo.

Lazy Town of 28 Grows to 5,000 Overnight

Holly Ridge, N. C., Feb. 12.—This roadside village 30 miles north of Wilmington is rapidly blossoming into a full-fledged national defense boom town.

Two months ago it was but a hamlet of 28 inhabitants. Today it is mushrooming into a city, for here Uncle Sam is building Camp Davis, an anti-aircraft firing center to cost $10,000,000 and house 20,000 soldiers.

Early in December there was nothing to do in Holly Ridge but sit around the stove in Postmaster C. C. Hines' general store.

A visitor could see only a few houses and a filling station and store on one side of the railroad tracks and a tiny freight depot on the other. Nobody ever bothered to stop here save a few salesmen who sold stock for Hines' store.

Now things are different.

Land which could be bought for a dollar an acre has skyrocketed, and real estate men are selling small lots described by a villager as "two collard rows 75 feet long" for $1,500 each.

Thousands flock here daily to work and seek work. The State highway patrol has erected quarters for four patrolmen who are on 24-hour duty.

A clothing store, drug store, pool room, cafe, hardware store, real estate office and myriad hot dog and small lunch stands have sprung up. A theater is under construction.

Nearly 5,000 men are at work on the project, cutting streets and digging ditches. Temporary office buildings have been erected on the four-square-mile area, and permanent buildings have been begun.

The railroad company has added a depot and has installed telegraph facilities. The power company which serves Wilmington has built an 11,000-volt three-phase temporary line to the camp site, bringing the first electric lights ever seen there.

For the first time in its history, Holly Ridge has a parking problem. State patrolmen discourage parking on the shoulders of the highway, for it is one of the main routes of New York to Florida tourist travel; and as a result, parking places cannot be found within blocks of the center of the town.

Men are working seven days a week, and some skilled labor has been put on a program of two 10-hour shifts a day instead of three shifts of eight hours as at first.

For 24 hours a day the camp site hums. Beneath huge floodlights the work goes on throughout the night. Much of the night-time work consists of unloading and distributing materials over the camp area.

As the camp rises, residents watch it with amazement and mixture of pleasure and chagrin.

Formerly the village was quiet. There never was any difficulty in sleeping. Nobody was in a hurry because there wasn't anything to do. But that is ended now.

De Valera Broadcasts

New York, Feb. 12.—Eamon De Valera, Irish prime minister, broadcast a warning to the people of Ireland telling that they did not realize "how near the war is." and warning them that compulsory evacuation of Dublin would be effected if voluntary evacuation were insufficient.

The radio report said:

"De Valera discussed the question of a possible attack on Ireland and as a last measure the possible evacuation of Dublin. 'The first attack on us,' said De Valera, 'would be on our capital. Since it will be very difficult to provide deep underground shelters in Dublin, the number of women and children in the city must be reduced.'"

Col. J.J. Phelan To Be Buried Here Saturday

COL. PHELAN

Funeral rites for Col. John J. Phelan, 61, utility officer of the United States Veterans' Hospital in Wichita, Kans., and a resident of Washington for many years, will be held at Sacred Heart Church, Sixteenth Street and Park Road Northwest, at 9 a. m. Saturday followed by military burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Col. Phelan died Tuesday in Wichita after a brief illness.

He was born in Lowell, Mass., and was graduated from Tufts College in 1907. Employed by the Government for the past 34 years, he served first with the Coast and Geodedic Survey of the United States Geological Survey on the United States and Canadian Boundary Commission in Minnesota.

Col. Phelan later served with the Engineers Corps in the World War, on construction work at Walter Reed Hospital, in the Veterans Administration and as inspecting engineer with the procurement division of the Treasury Department.

In 1928 and 1930 he received the degrees of bachelor of laws and master of laws at Columbus University here.

For the greater part of the last 30 years of his life Col. Phelan was a resident of Washington. He was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers, the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, the Washington Society of Engineers, the Military Order of the World War, the Military Engineers and the Fort Stevens Post of the American Legion. He was a fourth degree knight of the Knights of Columbus.

Surviving are his wife, Mrs. Emily Phelan, of Washington; a son, John J. Phelan, jr., of Hampton, Va., and a grandson.

Funeral Held For Lady Russell

Funeral rites were held yesterday morning at the chapel at Fort Lincoln Cemetery for Lady Russell, famous British novelist, among whose works is "Mr. Skeffington," a current best-seller soon to be made into a movie. The Rev. R. L. Wolven officiated. The body was cremated.

Lady Russell, born Mary Annette Beauchamp and twice the widow of noblemen, wrote simply as "Elizabeth." She was the sister-in-law of Bertrand Russell, British philosopher. Among her other well-known novels are "Elizabeth and Her German Garden," "Enchanted April" and "Pastor's Wife." She died on February 9 at Charleston, S. C., at the age of 74.

Services will be at 2:30 p. m. at Deal Funeral Home, 4812 Georgia Avenue Northwest, with burial in the Washington Hebrew Congregational Cemetery.

Mrs. Kaufman was a granddaughter of Selig Baumgarten, who came from Hanover, Germany, and established a rubber stamp business in Baltimore. She is survived by her husband, Morris Kaufman, and two sons, Albert H. Kaufman, Washington, and Frank E. Kaufman, Chevy Chase, Md.

Admiral Cone Dies of Heart Ailment at 69

ADM. CONE

Admiral Cone, 69, served as an officer of the U. S. fleet during the war with Spain and the World War. He received the Distinguished Service Medal from his Government and military honors from Great Britain, France and Italy. In 1918 he was injured when the S. S. Leinster was sunk in the Irish Sea by a German submarine.

Mrs. Cone, who accompanied him here from California about two weeks ago, was at his bedside.

A native of Brooklyn, he was graduated from the Florida Agricultural College in 1889 and from the United States Naval Academy in 1894.

He formerly was vice president of the United States Shipping Board Emergency Fleet Corporation and commander of the United States Shipping Board.

In recent years he had made his home at Chevy Chase Club in Washington, D. C. The body will be sent to Washington tomorrow for burial in Arlington National Cemetery.

His first wife was Patty Selden, of Norfolk, Va. They had two children, Elizabeth and Hutchinson, jr. His second wife was the former Julia Mattes.

Funeral Today For H. J. Redfield, G. P. O. Veteran

Funeral services for Harry J. Redfield, long-time Government Printing Office compositor, will be held this afternoon, with burial in Congressional Cemetery.

Mr. Redfield, 80, who made his home at 1219 Jefferson Street Northwest, died Monday at Washington Sanitarium after a few months' illness. He retired from the printing office in 1925.

Services will be held at 2 p. m. at S. H. Hines funeral home. He is survived by two sons, Arthur H. Redfield, Washington, and Walter L. Redfield, McLean, Va.; one brother, Edward L. Redfield, East Falls Church, Va.

A native of Albany, N. Y., Mr. Redfield came here in childhood. He was a member of Columbia Typographical Union, Federal Lodge No. 1, of F. A. A. M.; Sons of the American Revolution, and was a past noble grand of Columbia Lodge No. 10, I. O. O. F.

Women Urged To Seek God's View in Prayer

Launching what may become a national movement, thousands of Washington churchwomen are being urged to pray tonight from 11 o'clock until midnight to seek "God's viewpoint on modern problems."

Outgrowth of the Women's Christian Life Forums of last week's National Christian Mission, the movement is being furthered through the Washington Council of Church Women, of which Mrs. Frank A. Linzel is president. It is hoped to be spread through the National Council of Church Women, the central body.

It was during the women's forum at McKendree Methodist Church that Miss Muriel Lester, the "Jane Addams of London," asked all women to take part in what she called spiritual discipline" on Thursday nights for the duration of the war crisis.

Mrs. Warren Bowman, wife of the pastor of the Washington City Church of the Brethren, suggested that a start be made.

Meanwhile, the executive committee for the local mission met yesterday at the Federation of Churches' Building to report "enthusiastic response" to the week's revival. Dr. Raphael Harwood Miller, local general chairman, said afterward that a complete report on the attendance, practical accomplishments and other details would be given later to the federation.

The home visitation evangelism campaign—another phase of the mission—will begin Sunday afternoon.

Mrs. Ida Godfrey's Funeral Saturday

Mount Holly, N. J., Feb. 12. Services will be held Saturday afternoon at nearby Cookstown for Mrs. Ida E. Godfrey, 85, widow of Brig. Gen. Edward S. Godfrey, officer under Gen. Custer. Mrs. Godfrey died yesterday at her home there. She will be buried in Arlington Cemetery beside her husband, who died in 1932.

She leaves a son, Dr. Edward S. Godfrey, jr., of Albany, New York State director of health, and a daughter, Miss Mary Godfrey, of 1835 K Street Northwest, Washington.

WILLIAM R. (OLD BILL) MANSFIELD

'Old Bill' One of Remaining Street Car Tower Switchmen

For more than 30 years, William R. (Old Bill) Mansfield, 54, of 206 Third Street Southeast, has been routing street cars from his perch in the control tower at Fifteenth Street and New York Avenue Northwest.

One of Capital Transit Co.'s oldest employes, Mansfield learned his unusual trade by operating an old manual-controled tower switch at Union Station in 1908. He has been switching street cars, at the rate of several hundred daily, almost continuously ever since.

"This job isn't what it used to be," he said yesterday. "In the old days we would pull the switches over by hand and sometimes they would freeze and wouldn't pull at all."

Then, too, before the days of electric controls, Mansfield said the switchman would occasionally pull the switch too soon and the front wheels of a street car would make a turn while the rear wheels continued on a straight track.

And the salary wasn't too good, either, amounting to $1.25 for a 10-hour day. He gets more now.

His job now is easier, because of the electric push-button system used to switch the tracks, "but you still have to keep alert—there ain't time to read magazines when you're in the tower," he says.

Operating switches both at Fifteenth and New York and at Fifteenth and G Streets, Mansfield has to keep continuously on the lookout for street car numbers. His biggest problem is in recognizing the destination sign on cars during snowstorms and heavy rains.

In the tower are two switch controls and three small lights, blue for straight, amber for the curved track and white which shows when the car is passing over the switch. These must be watched to keep cars from taking the wrong route.

Bill has been with the street car system since 1901, when he went to work as flagman for the old Washington Railroad Co. He also served in the change pits and as street switchman before working in the Union Station tower seven years later.

February Best Time to Buy Rugs for Home

By Martha Ellyn
Household Editor

FEBRUARY is the home decorator's "clover time." January may have its white sales, but it is February when the merchants give Mrs. Consumer the opportunity to buy from a large and varied assortment of home furnishings at a great saving. And if she wants to make her money go far she should take the time right now to look over the price reductions.

Martha Ellyn

A noted interior decorator once said that nothing—with the exception of love—will lift a woman's spirits like a new and beautiful background. We can't always step out and get ourselves new houses and furnishings but we can bring new beauty into our homes by changing the furnishings.

Looking over the items offered in the February home furnishing sales, I noted that rugs and carpets may be bought at tremendous savings. Rugs were once the gifts of kings, hung in the conquerors tent and used as covering for royal couches and decorations for castle walls, but now they are within the reach of every one. At least three things must be considered by Mrs. Consumer when she goes out to buy a floor covering for this is a household item that is not bought often.

Things to Remember

The following are points to remember:

1. The floor covering should fit in with the walls, upholstery and drapes. If these factors are fancy figured the floor covering should be of plain type, and if the walls are plain, the upholstery and drapes of simple design, a more ornate floor covering may be used.

2. The floor covering should harmonize with the style of furniture. One would not use a hook rug with French or Georgian furniture.

3. The floor covering should be of the right size. This depends, of course, upon the room and the purpose. A small "postage" size rug should not be used on a room of large dimensions.

4. The floor covering should be of the right quality to harmonize with the other furnishings. A cheap rug with high quality furniture would not be in good taste. The covering should be of the type to stand up under the wear it will receive.

There are two main divisions of domestic rugs—pile-woven and flat-woven. Pile-woven rugs include the cut-pile varieties such as Wiltons, velvets, chenille and Axminster, and the uncut pile rugs such as tapestry and body Brussels. Flat-woven rugs include, linen, ingrain, rag, fiber and grass.

Best Known Types

The best known domestic rug types are:

American Oriental—A washed rug which imitates the sheen of hand-woven rugs. These can be woven in chenille, Wilton or even Axminster looms.

Axminster—A rug of very long cut pile, providing a deep, soft surface. The most obvious way in which to tell an Axminster rug from other weaves is that it is made of worsted and has a velvety sheen or gloss, when viewed against the nap. This type of rug is always woven of wool yarn. Designs in axminsters are often of Oriental influence, since the weave allows fine detail.

Wilton—This floor covering is thick, springy and enduring. Because of its great range of patterns and colorings, rich texture and excellent wearing qualities it is the most popular domestic rug. The quality depends upon the grade of the wools used, and also the number of wires to the inch in the loom. It is generally conceded to be the best of the domestic weaves.

Chenille—Has a furry, thick pile, and is woven in any number of plain or mixed colors. The finished rug has the appearance of an especially woven seamless fabric. A chenille and a Wilton of the same thickness feel the same underfoot, but on examination will show that the chenille has less pile and a thicker backing than the Wilton.

Hooked—A very heavy looped Brussels weave that gives the appearance of a hand hooked fabric and allows for colonial decorative motifs in the design.

Wilton velvet or velvet—A good rug to give excellent service in a bedroom or a guest room, where the wear is less severe than in a living or dining room. Just as tapestry rugs are inferior to Brussels rugs so velvets are to Wiltons.

Brussels—A machine-made worsteed rug. The wool pattern is introduced by the Jacquard machine and the pile uncut, which mainly distinguishes Brussels from Wilton. The loop pile is stiff and wiry, and it does not absorb dust or mat down like cut-pile rugs. It is not as soft and luxurious and lacks the velvety richness obtained by shirring the pile. Brussels are particularly good in dining rooms as crumbs are easily removed and chairs will not leave marks

Tapestry—An imitation of Brussels, but not so heavy and durable, the pile being shorter and of inferior material.

One of the reasons for the charming quality of this living room is the use of the luxurious broadloom carpet upon which the room has been built. The plain carpet gives the right background for the floral motif of the wallpaper as well as the other dominant decorative notes throughout the room have been balanced by the use of plain drapes and the richness of the plain carpet

Reviving the gay, floral patterns of the Georgian period are the modern interpretations in the carpets and rugs to today. This luxurious floral design supplies a gracious background for the Eighteenth Century style of furnishings

The simplicity of this fern-leaf design makes it an ideal floor covering for living room, library or dining room. It is adaptable for all periods of design, including Eighteenth Century, Early American, Provincial and Twentieth Century Modern

Faults of American Diet—Too Much Sugar, Refined Foods

By Ida Jean Kain

Nutrition is one of the most vital factors in our national defense program. The important job before scientists and dietitians is to educate people as to what constitutes an adequate diet for maximum efficiency. And the important job before the homemaker is to apply this knowledge to the three meals a day.

Our food problem is quite different from that of the other countries. Ample food is available—the need is not for conservation or substitutions, but to put the science of nutrition into practical usage. And let's hope that the lesson we learn about balancing the diet will be a permanent one.

The American diet has two common faults—the over-consumption of sugar and the use of refined grains and flours. When these foods make up too large a part of the diet, not enough vitamins and minerals can be included. In this case, even though you are giving your family plenty to eat, you are not giving them adequate nutrition.

Make sure that you give your family only whole grains. This applies to both ready-to-eat cereals and those which must be cooked. Buy the cereals which plainly state that they contain all of the wheat. And, of course, all breadstuffs should be made from the whole grain—putting Vitamin B back into flour will make bread really the "staff of life."

To cut down on the sugar consumption and step up the vitamin intake, serve a dessert of fresh fruit—sliced oranges, fruit gelatin, grapefruit, or a compote. Desserts made with milk and eggs are also excellent for these ingredients are listed as protective foods.

The protective foods really do protect against illness and they should form the greater part of the family menus. They are: milk and other dairy products, eggs, meats, fish, fowl, cheese, leafy vegetables, uncooked vegetables, fruits. When a butter substitute is used, choose one that has been reinforced with Vitamin A.

Many of the inexpensive cuts of meat are highly nutritious—beef liver is nutritionally more valuable than calves' liver. Meat organs such as heart, kidneys, brains and liver are all richer in vitamins than some of the muscle meats, and they are just as good sources of protein.

Frame Window With Flowers

In a sunny window you can easily grow the lovely Lady Washington geranium and kalanchoe. Arrange them on shelves with your prized bits of glassware, and what a picture you have—the gay colors of the flowers vying with the jewel-like tones of the glass!

Or think what miracles plants would work with other pieces, giving grace to an old secretary, brightening a bronze tray. Many plants flourish in even darkish spots with a little care.

As for the sun-loving geranium, its other wants are few. Not too much water, a not-too-rich soil, and it should thrive. One Lady Washington variety has gorgeous red blossoms splashed with velvety black.

Kalanchoe, too, is one of the sturdier house plants. Its clusters of pink or red flowers last for weeks and all it asks is a porous, sandy soil and lots of water while growing.

Then with your flowering plants you want the grace of trailing foliage. Philodendron, English ivy and wandering Jew can be grown easily in either soil or water.

Everybody Has Them Now

The first man known to have built private bathrooms in his living quarters was a king of Crete who lived more than 4,000 years ago. The king's bath was in a room that adjoined the throne room and the queen also had a bath in her suite. A good water supply and drainage were installed in the palace. They had all the comforts of bathing exceeding two of the most important—soap and clean towels.

TOMORROW is Valentine's Day and color should reign supreme in your decorative schemes as well as in the recipes themselves. If you are going to have friends in for luncheon here is a menu that will fit the day.

St. Valentine Luncheon

Grapefruit and Grape Cup
Crabmeat Florentine
Assorted Relishes Corn Sticks
Valentine Salad
Cranberry Angel Whip Coffee

Here is the recipe for Crabmeat Florentine, which makes a deliciously distinctive luncheon dish.

Crabmeat Florentine

Cut off roots of 2 to 2½ pounds spinach and remove wilted leaves and tough stems and wash spinach thoroughly. Cook in small amount of boiling salted water until tender. Drain and place in a buttered flat baking pan. Boil down the spinach liquid to 1-3 cup. Make 6 depressions in the spinach and drop in spoonfuls of crabmeat, using one 6½ ounce can crabmeat. Melt 2 tablespoons butter in double boiler, add 3 tablespoons flour and mix well. Add 1¼ cups milk gradually and cook, stirring constantly until thickened. Add spinach liquid and 4 teaspoons prepared drained horseradish and season with salt and pepper. Pour over spinach and crabmeat and bake in moderate oven, 350 degrees, for about 25 minutes. Serves 6.

Mary Haworth's Mail

Having Talked for Two Years of 'Great Obstacles' To Their Marriage, Man Realizes Girl's Love for Him Is Waning. If He Unbends, Can He Win Her?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: About two years ago I met, and later fell in love with, a girl I am now faced with losing. We had talked of marriage, but had admitted two obstacles—namely, religious difference (our families', really; not ours) and money. My family had said we should not let the religious difference stand in the way, providing we could work out the financial problem; but she had said that she thought her family would object on religious grounds. However, both of us felt they might change their minds if (and after) we were married.

We are both quiet and rather serious minded. We enjoy the same amusements and have never had a serious argument in the two years we have known each other. As I have said, we had conceded two possible obstacles to marriage—and both of them big ones. But recently I secured a dependable position that pays enough to support us nicely. And about the same time, she got a job that has taken her away to New York and other cities. Both of us thought that her going away would help us to forget—as we had tried many times before to "break away" (in view of the obstacles to marriage), but had always come back to each other.

Now, I have been "on the road" myself and I know how lonely one gets; and realize, also, that she will be bothered by other men, as she is exceptionally good looking. The first time she came home from New York, she told me that we must "break off" for good; as she didn't think she loved me any more. Naturally, I assumed she had become interested in another man, but she denied this—saying that she had simply lost her love for me, through realizing we never could be married.

Although I couldn't believe her, I agreed to try to forget her—but I find that I can't. I went to New York recently to see her, but she was still uncertain about how she feels toward me. Again, she said there is no other man she cares for. I realize it would be cowardly to resort to liquor or other women in an effort to forget; and I am determined to keep after her, not only to win back her love and her promise to marry me; but also to make her realize that she is too young for the type of work she is doing, and that eventually it will spoil her freshness and beauty.

Do you think my efforts in that direction would be worth the heartache I might experience if I fail? I shall appreciate an early reply. Sincerely, J. A.

Fear of Disappointment Hampers Growth

DEAR J. A.: Your predicament recalls a fragment of verse, to wit: "The gods grant no retrieving a wasted chance; fate knows no tears . . ." I think the current cold shoulder you are getting from the girl is a form of payoff for your long indecisiveness as to whether you really wanted, or intended, to marry her. Where you once saw fit to argue financial inability to marry her, she (to protect her pride) saw fit to conjure a corresponding "obstacle," by remarking that her family probably would oppose the match, anyway.

Your mutual understanding that her family "might change their minds, if and after you were married," indicates that neither of you regarded the "religious difference" as an insuperable obstacle. It was merely a "talking point," employed to camouflage your individual reluctance to commit yourself permanently to the serious contract under discussion. Had you, at any time during the past two years—before the girl went away to New York and other cities—wanted her as urgently for your wife as you do today (when you fear you have lost her), you would have poohpoohed the idea that you two, together, couldn't overcome any seeming obstacle to blissful marriage.

It is quite likely that the girl's erstwhile love for you has cooled to cynical affection; and that now,—when she is very sure you are hers for the taking—she doesn't regard you as much of a prize. And I must say you don't seem to be much of a world beater, in the field of romance. Your gingerly caution, even now, in having the forethought to wish to spare yourself, if possible, such heartache or disappointment as might accrue through a final, desperate but unavailing effort to "win her back," suggests that your first and greatest and tenderest concern is for yourself, rather than for her. This she has probably come to see; and it is reasonable to think that her final recognition of your utter selfishness has permanently altered her reaction to you.

Here is the picture, as of today: Threatened with the loss of her former devotion, so taken for granted; as well as tormented by thoughts of imaginary rivals (who may exploit her feelings as selfishly as you have), you are now convinced that your personal sense of well being would be best served by branding her as yours-for-life. However, you would rather write her off now, as unattainable, than go through hell and high water, trying to make amends for your ruinous complacency, in seasons past. And it is just this consistent strain of self concern that makes you unlovable in her sight, and (unless and until corrected) probably will always deny you full happiness in any love relationship.

In my opinion, it would be good for your soul—win, lose or draw—to rise above niggardly considerations of personal pride and pain, and go after the girl with every impassioned appeal, apology, protestation and persuasion at your command. Life, as some sage has observed, is less concerned with giving security and happiness than it is with providing experience and growth. And you may expect to eke out an existence that embraces little emotional experience and even less growth, if you continue to try to spare your feelings at every turn. M. H.

Miss Haworth will be glad to help you in solving your problems. Write her in care of The Post Woman's Page.

Flowers Still Hold Favor As Valentines

By Carolyn Abbott

If your valentine tomorrow isn't as clever as you think it should be, it won't be the fault of the florists or beauty experts, for both have a host of new ideas on the subject. Should your best beau want to say it with flowers, here are a few suggestions to pass on to him.

Heart-shaped epaulets made of fragrant freesia, worn with a matching headdress of sweetheart roses fashioned in the shape of an anchor, advertises the fact that you have gone Navy.

A floral valentine ensemble that takes its motif from a flier's uniform insignia is the Army pilot's way of saying "You're My Valentine." The headdress of carnations is shaped to form wings around a miniature airplane. Bracelets also of fresh carnations, repeat the wing motifs.

Lovers of old-fashioned valentines can wire floral pieces. One sentimental one is made of sweetheart roses, snapdragons, carnations and cornflowers fashioned into a muff bouquet. A matching heart-shaped nosegay that ties behind milady's pompadour with a bow of tulle completes the ensemble.

Regardless of shape and color, orchids still hold their own as the most romantic of valentines.

The beauty world itself is afire with sentiment. Powders, perfume, compacts and the whole line-up of gadgets that keep you charming for more than one day have burst into a flurry of paper frills and valentine verses.

Over the Coffee Cup with John Wilkins

An old custom in the Ardennes was to take ten cups of coffee after dinner. Each had a different name. From the second cup on, to each was added an ever-increasing quantity of alcohol.

They must have furnished transportation home from dinner parties. Anyhow, we're not suggesting this as a hobby. We just say Wilkins Coffee is swell all by itself and the rest of this is just curious information.

Officialdom Attends Dinner at White House Given for Royal Refugees From Luxemburg

By Hope Ridings Miller

TOPFLIGHT OFFICIALDOM attended the dinner given at the White House last night in honor of Grand Duchess Charlotte, refugee sovereign of Luxemburg; her husband, Prince Consort Felix, and their eldest son, the 20-year-old hereditary Grand Duke Jeane.

At the first formal function given here in honor of the royal guests, who arrived yesterday at noon for a three-day visit, President and Mrs. Roosevelt gathered in for dinner a large company which included Vice President and Mrs. Henry A. Wallace, Speaker of the House Sam Rayburn, nine Cabinet members and several notables from out of town.

Also among those present were the Grand Duchess' lady-in-waiting, Mme. Joseph Bech, and the aide de camp to Prince Felix, Lieut. E. Konsbruck.

Ruler of a tiny west European duchy now overrun by the Germans, Grand Duchess Charlotte, her husband and their six children fled from their homeland last May and crossed the Atlantic by clipper. They are making their home in Montreal and came to Washington from there.

The party will stay at the White House until tomorrow morning and will be at the Luxemburg Legation until late that afternoon when they will leave for Chicago.

Last evening's fete was the first of two dinners planned in their honor. Red carnations, freesia, gloriosum and maidenhair fern decorated the horseshoe table at which guests were seated.

IN ADDITION to the guests already mentioned, the company included Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull; the Minister of Luxemburg and Mme. Le Gallais, Secretary of the Treasury and Mrs. Henry Morgenthau, the Attorney General and Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, the Postmaster General and Mrs. Frank Walker, Secretary of the Navy and Mrs. Frank Knox, Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold Ickes, Secretary of Agriculture and Mrs. Claude Wickard, Secretary of Commerce and Mrs. Jesse Jones and Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins.

Senator Pat Harrison, president pro tempore of the Senate, was there with Mrs. Harrison; as were Senator Walter F. George, chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, and Mrs. George; and Representative Sol Bloom, chairman of the House Foreign Affairs Committee, and Mrs. Bloom.

UNDERSECRETARY of State Sumner Welles and Mrs. Welles were among those present; also the Undersecretary of Commerce and Mrs. Wayne Chatfield Taylor; Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Dean Acheson, and Mayor Fiorello H. LaGuardia of New York and Mrs. LaGuardia.

Two former American Ambassadors to Belgium and Luxemburg—Dave Hennen Morris and Joseph E. Davies—were in the company. Mrs. Morris and Mrs. Davies accompanied their husbands. District Engineer Commissioner Col. David McCoach, jr., was there with Mrs. McCoach. George T. Summerlin, chief of protocol, was among those present, as were Dr. and Mrs. John Campbell White, of New York; Lindsay C. Warren, Comptroller General of the United States, and Mrs. Warren; Robert W. Bruere, of the Maritime Labor Board, and Mrs. Bruere; Frederic A. Delano; James Lawrence Fly, of the Federal Communications Commission, and Mrs. Fly.

MISS LUCINDA RAYBURN, sister of the Speaker of the House, was in the company, as were Mrs. Gilbert M. Hitchcock, Mr. and Mrs. James L. Houghteling, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Kelly, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Reynolds, Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Palmer, Mr. and Mrs. James H. Rowe, C. R. Smith, president fo American Air Lines; Sigmund Spaeth, noted musician and lecturer, of New York, and Mrs. Spaeth and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Whiting.

Arriving at Union Station yesterday at 12:30 p. m., the royal guests were welcomed by a large group of officials who escorted them on to the White House. In the afternoon they drove to Mount Vernon with Mrs. Roosevelt.

The Grand Duchess will attend the First Lady's press conferense at 10 o'clock this morning, and an hour later she will visit the headquarters of the American Red Cross. Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davies will entertain at luncheon in honor of the visitors today. A musicale at the White House at 4 o'clock and a dinner there at 8 o'clock will complete today's official calendar for the royal company.

'It Was Such A Nice Party'

—says Mrs. Frank J. Wideman (right) to her hostess, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General. Mrs. Jackson, whose "at home" had been set for January 15, but had to be postponed due to her illness, received yesterday afternoon at their apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel

Elizabeth Hughes To Be April Bride

Mr. and Mrs. William Hughes, of Chevy Chase, Md., announce the engagement of their daughter, Elizabeth, to Henry Edward Allen, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Percy F. Allen, of Alta Vista, Md. The wedding will take place in April.

Miss Hughes attended George Washington University and was graduated from the University of Maryland.

Mr. Allen, who is an economic analyst in the Division of Commercial Treaties and Agreements of the Department of State, was graduated from Washington and Lee University and has done graduate work at George Washington University. He is a member of Sigma Phi Epsilon, national social fraternity and Delta Phi Epsilon, national professional foreign service fraternity.

Mrs. Mesta in New York

Mrs. George Mesta, of Boston and Pittsburgh, who has been in Washington for the last few days, was in New York last night for the Lincoln Day dinner at which Wendell L. Willkie was the speaker. She will return to Washington Saturday morning and will attend the Susan B. Anthony anniversary ceremony at the Capitol that evening.

Wives of Notables Throng Mrs. Jackson's 'At Home'

By Elizabeth Henney

Guest arrived late. They also stayed late. In fact, Mrs. Robert H. Jackson, wife of the Attorney General, barely had time to dress for the White House dinner after her "at home" yesterday afternoon, which had been technically from 4 to 6 o'clock.

An "at home" which had been originally scheduled for January 15, the party had had to be put off because of the recent illness of Mrs. Jackson. Yesterday, Mrs. Jackson received alone in the drawing room of their apartment in the Wardman Park Hotel. Her gown, of cerise silk jersey, was fashioned on Grecian lines and fell floor length in soft folds. At the waistline, her girdle was piped in gold and she wore a single strand of old-fashioned gold beads as accent.

In the dining room a merry throng were gathered around the lace-covered table and much admired was the centerpiece of blended spring flowers, flanked by three branched candelabra of heavy silver holding tall ivory tapers.

Mrs. Charles Fahey Pours at Tea Table

Officiating at a silver urn at one end of the tea table was Mrs. Charles Fahey, wife of the Assistant Attorney General. She was gowned in chartreuse crepe, fashioned with passementerie trimming the sleeves and neckline, and wore matching earrings and bracelet of turquoise and Indian silver.

At the opposite end of the table was Mrs. Norman M. Littell, whose husband is another Assistant Attorney Genneral. She was wearing an effective gown of taffeta in a large leaf print of navy blue and white and had topped her costume with a broad-brimmed, flowered spring hat of navy blue.

Shortly thereafter they were relieved at tea duties by Mrs. Thurman W. Arnold, wife of Assistant Attorney General Arnold (she was gowned in black with a small toque of blue flowers) and by Mrs. Wendell Berge, whose husband is on the Temporary National Economy Committee. Mrs. Berge, who was gowned in powder blue with a dusty pink turban, was explaining that during the recent political campaign every one called them the "Wendell Burggys" in order to rhyme with the Republican candidate's name.

Others who assisted at the tea table included Mrs. L. M. C. Smith, who was gowned in gray with a matching sailor; Mrs. Chester A. Pryor, whose black gown featured two blue clips at the neckline; Mrs. Francis Biddle, wife of the solicitor general; Mrs. Matthew F. McGuire, wife of the assistant to the attorney general; Mrs. James V. Bennett, wife of the director of the Bureau of Prisons; Mrs. Francis M. Shea, Mrs. Samuel O. Clark, jr., Mr. N. A. Townsend and Mrs. Gerald Herrick.

Mrs. Jesse Jones Arrives Early

An early arrival during the afternoon was Mrs. Jesse Jones, wife of the Secretary of Commerce. Mrs. Jones, with a full schedule before her, found it necessary to make her calls brief to get them all in. She was chic in gray with a short fox jacket and stopped for a few moments' chat with the hostess during a lull between arriving throngs.

Another who came early for a brief visit was Mrs. Claude A. Swanson, widow of former Secretary of the Navy Swanson. She was swathed in a long coat of gray squirrel, and topped it with a small turban.

A gay conversational foursome were Mrs. James Craig Peacock (in black with a small flowered hat), Mrs. Consuelo Seone (whose black hat was trimmed with a filmy veil), Mrs. Barnet Nover (who topped her beige outfit with a broad-brimmed, red felt hat) and Mrs. James W. Hughes, wife of the Governor from Delaware. Much the subject of comment and compliment was Mrs. Hughes' chic black and white outfit, especially her postillion hat of white felt with two long white feathers shooting off at a perky angle.

Sudden Epidemic Of Spring Hats

Noticeable throughout the crowd was the sudden epidemic of spring hats, flowered toques, gay feathered sailors and broad-brimmed straws, brought out, no doubt, by the pleasant weather.

Still others noted during the afternoon were Senora de Recinos, wife of the Minister from Guatemala; Mrs. D. Worth Clark, wife of the Senator from Idaho; Mrs. C. Wayland Brooks, wife of the new Senator from Illinois; Mrs. Daniel W. Bell (in soldier blue with hat to match), wife of the Undersecretary of the Treasury; Mrs. Alan Kirk, and Mrs. Horace Williams, who is here from England for "the duration."

Mrs. Walker Arrives From Honolulu

An interesting visitor who comes to Washington every year all the way from Honolulu is Mrs. H. Alexander Walker. She arrived yesterday for a brief stay with Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Green.

A member of one of the leading families of Hawaii, Mrs. Walker lives there in a beautiful home in the Nuuanu Valley. Their country house on the windward side of the Oahu Island faces the sea, with purple mountains rising behind it.

Mr. Walker and the two daughters of the family remained behind in Honolulu, but a son, H. Alexander Walker, jr., is a freshman at Harvard. His mother will visit him there before returning to the islands. Tomorrow Mrs. Walker will go to Newport News, Va., to christen a sugar freighter. Mrs. Bennett Champ Clark, wife of Senator Clark, and Mr. and Mrs. Green will accompany her.

Mrs. Walker's hobbies are growing orchids and raising Kerry blues and Scottish terriers. She plays the ukelele and sings native songs to its melodies.

Another Washington visitor is Mrs. Elbert Farnam, of New York. She is spending a few days at the Sulgrave Club. Col. and Mrs. Farnam have a place near Garrison, N. Y., on the Hudson, where they are neighbors of Representative and Mrs. Hamilton Fish and Miss Janet Fish.

Yesterday Mrs. Fish and her sister-in-law entertained at a luncheon at the Sulgrave Club for Mrs. Farnam. The other guests were Mrs. Charles McNary, wife of Senator McNary Mrs. Charles Dewey, wife of Representative Dewey; Mrs. R. W. Keen, wife of Representative Kean; Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, and Mrs. Orme Wilson. Also present was Mrs. Frederick Osborne, of New York, whose husband is here doing defense work.

Miss Fish's niece and nephew, Mr. and Mrs. William L. Breese, who are the proud parents of a daughter, have decided to name the child Belinda. Mrs. Breese has just returned to their home on Gate Mill Road from the hospital.

Friends Gather At the Wessels For Dinner Party

Their guests included Lieut. Col. Paul Jacquin, French Air Attache, and Mme. Jacquin; Miss Carolyn Nash, Col. and Mrs. Arthur Harris, Mrs. James Brown, jr., George Abell and Col. Thomas Riley.

Joining the company after dinner were the Assistant Military Attache of the Swedish Legation, Lieut. Curt Wennberg and Mme. Wennberg.

About the Town

DUDLEY HARMON

NOT EVERYONE of the hundreds of visitors pouring in here daily in Washington on an errand concerning machine tools, bottlenecks, or priorities. An institution completely removed from the defense problem—the new National Gallery of Art—is already attracting distinguished people from all over the United States.

Not until March will the gallery be officially opened, but some leaders in art fields have already enjoyed a preview. Mrs. George Blumenthal, wife of the chairman of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, was in town earlier this week for a look at the museum. The President's mother, Mrs. James Roosevelt, was also an interested visitor.

THE eminent editor and art critic, Frank Crowninshield, is in town to gather material on the gallery for an article in Vogue magazine. He is an uncle of Mrs. D. Percy Morgan of New York, at whose Georgetown home we had an opportunity to talk with him the other evening. Mr. Morgan is with the Defense Commission and they have taken the home of Mrs. Donald Shepard on Thirtieth Street. Mr. Shepard, incidentally, is counsel for the National Gallery.

Mr. Crowninshield was telling the other evening how the Paris Vogue, and several other publications which were published in French, have ceased to exist following the German invasion. The London Vogue is still functioning, but on a much smaller scale. Mr. Crowninshield has in his New York apartment an interesting collection, with many of the works of modern French painters.

THE GALA opening of the gallery is set for Monday evening, March 17, and will definitely be the biggest thing Washington has seen in years. Probably more distinguished artists, museum directors, and Government figures will be gathered under one roof at that time than has ever been assembled before. The famous guests are to be headed by the President and Mrs. Roosevelt, who, incidentally, will be celebrating their wedding anniversary that day.

A large staff of clerks and stenographers has been working for weeks on the list of some 6,000 people to be invited. Several may even come from as far away as South America.

DEFINITELY on hand will be Mr. and Mrs. David Bruce of New York, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Mellon of Upperville, Va., Samuel Kress of New York and Joseph Widener of Philadelphia and Palm Beach. Mr. Bruce, whose wife is the daughter of the late Andrew Mellon, is chairman of the Board of Trustees of the gallery. Mr. Kress has already given to the museum his exceptional collection of Italian art. Mr. Widener's famous collection is to go to the gallery later on.

SINCE THE opening is on a Monday, many of the distinguished out-of-towners are planning to make a weekend of it. The town will be cluttered with celebrities beginning as early as Saturday, and Washingtonians are already planning a series of luncheons in their honor.

Anyone entering the gallery now on an errand finds several stepladders and a uniformed policeman at a desk in the huge marble lobby. Since the collections are valued at some $50,000,000, the presence of the officer is not surprising. That the famous paintings are now in the process of being hung explains the ladders.

Other gallery notes: Officials have seen to it that there are plenty of comfortable sofas for visitors attacked by "museum feet" . . . There's also a cafeteria, so one may spend the entire day in the gallery . . . And there's a smoking room downstairs.

"I don't see why a museum also has to be uncomfortable" says Director David Finley.

Biddles to Be Honor Guests

Mr. and Mrs. Anthony Biddle, who are in Washington for a few days, will be honor guests at a luncheon to be given today by the Minister from Norway and Mme. Munthe de Morgenstierne. The party will take place at the legation on Massachusetts Avenue.

Mr. Biddle was recently named to represent this country as Minister to Holland, Belgium, Norway and Poland. He is expected to leave shortly for London, where the refugee governments of all these countries have set up their headquarters. Mrs. Biddle does not yet know if she will go with him.

Mrs. Conner Is Married

A surprise to many Washingtonians was the announcement, received in yesterday's mail, of the marriage February 1 of Mrs. Catherine Rouse Conner and Thomas Henry McInnerney. The ceremony took place in Fort Lauderdale, Fla. After March 19 the couple will be at home at 820 Fifth Avenue, New York.

Mrs. McInnerney made her home in Washington for several years, up to last fall, when she moved to New York. Originally from Kentucky, she is Democratic National Committeewoman from that State. Her country place in Kentucky is a replica of the famous shrine celebrated in the song, "My Old Kentucky Home." Pretty and titan-haired, she was frequently seen at Capital parties. She was divorced last year from Samuel L. Conner, of Bardstown.

The bridegroom, a well-known businessman, is president of the National Dairy Products Corporation. He also was a director of the New York World's Fair, and has served in other important capacities. He was educated at the University of Illinois.

Notes of Society

Official and Residential

Mrs. Roosevelt will preside when Miss Dorothy Thompson speaks under Town Hall auspices next week. The meeting has been postponed from Sunday evening to Thursday, January 20, and will take place at Constitution Hall instead of at the Shoreham.

Mrs. Warren Austin, wife of Senator Austin, will not observe her weekly "at home" this afternoon.

Mrs. Wayne Wirgman and her daughter, Miss Polly Wayne Wirgman, will sail from New York on Saturday on the Swedish liner Kungsholm, for a cruise to South America. They will be gone a month.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Clarendon Smith have visiting them Mrs. Thomas Bilodeau, wife of the late Judge Bilodeau, of Boston.

Dr. Florence E. Grady, of the Woman's Hospital, Philadelphia, has returned there after spending the week-end with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy J. Grady, at 3718 Ingomar Street, Chevy Chase.

Miss Dorothy Meyer entertained at the Washington Hotel at a recent party, when her engagement to George Fields, of Virginia, was made known. No exact date has been set for the wedding, but it is expected to take place in June.

Mrs. Onan A. Hydrick will give a silver tea for the Fairfax Association for Aid to Britain on Monday afternoon at her home, Lawnvale, McLean, Va. Assisting her will be Mrs. Smith Bowman, Mrs. Frederick Richardson, Mrs. Robert Graham, Mrs. Rixey Smith, Mrs. James Hughes, Mrs. Neitah King, Mrs. John Barbour and Mrs. George S. Kernan.

Mrs. James M. Hammond, of Cedar Lane, Bethesda, will entertain today at the second in a series of luncheons she is giving. Most of the guests will be members of the Women's Club of Bethesda, of which the hostess is music chairman. Among those present will be Mrs. Frank A. Bennett, Mrs. George Schmucker, Mrs. David L. Davis, Mrs. Thomas E. Cassey, Mrs. Melvin Elgin, Mrs. John L. Hubere, Mrs. John M. Mader, Mrs. T. W. Phillips, Mrs. J. Reed Bradley and Mrs. Theodore Tiller.

Mildred Braswell To Become Bride

Capt. and Mrs. James B. Braswell, of California, announce the engagement of their daughter, Mildred Alice Braswell, to Robert Lee Simpson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Ellsworth Lee Simpson, of Arlington, Va.

The wedding will take place February 22 in Arlington. The bride-elect was educated in Cristobal, Canal Zone. Mr. Simpson received two degrees from the College of William and Mary. He is a member of Theta Delta Chi fraternity.

Windsors Going To Philadelphia For Wedding

Commander and Mrs. Charles Windsor, of the Wardman Park Hotel, with Mrs. Windsor's son, David Chew Stephenson, are leaving today for Philadelphia to spend the week-end.

Tomorrow they will attend the wedding of Mrs. Windsor's other son, Lowry Chew Stephenson, to Miss Nancy I. S. Downs, in St. Martin's-Church-in-the-Fields at Chestnut Hill, Pa., and on Saturday they will attend another wedding, that of Mrs. Windsor's cousin, Mr. Samuel Chew, to Miss Barbara Dale Williams. This ceremony will take place at St. Asaph's Church in Bala, Pa., just outside Philadelphia.

Commander and Mrs. Windsor and Mr. Stephenson will return to Washington on Monday.

Junior Leaguers Start Beginner's Course in Spanish

If you hear Spanish being spoken by a group of girls over the Red Cross knitting, you are probably hearing members of the Junior League of Washington who have just started a beginners' course of Spanish.

Mrs. Clarence Howard, a graduate of Wellesley, who has studied at Barcelona, taught Spanish in Boston and done commercial translating, is instructing the class, which meets every Tuesday and Friday afternoons at the Junior League clubrooms at 2001 Massachusetts Avenue.

The six-weeks course has been arranged by the education committee of the Junior League headed by Mrs. L. Metcalfe Walling.

Those already studying by the "conversational" method—which gives a working knowledge of Spanish with fundamental grammar rules, are Miss Sylvia Alexander, Mrs. George Baker, Mrs. Lewis Clark, Mrs. Herbert P. Fales, Mrs. Frank S. Goodwin and Miss Ann Sterrett.

Capital Whirl

By Sally Swift

ALTHOUGH people in the Capital feel that Washington is the cross-roads, if not of the world, at least of the Western Hemisphere, one is constantly finding travelers who are making their first visit here. Such a visitor is charming Lary Hardewicke, wife of Sir Cedric Hardwicke, the actor, for whom Denys Smith entertained at an informal cocktail party the other afternoon.

Lady Hardwicke makes her home in Hollywood and will shortly return there. The Hardwickes have two sons in the Royal Air Force and Lady Hardwicke hears that one of them will be sent to Canada, that, in fact, he may already be there. If this happy news proves true she will go to visit him at the earliest possible moment.

Also present at Mr. Smith's party was Henry Field, of Chicago, who has done so much interesting work in connection with the Field Museum; Mr. and Mrs. C. T. Ballantyne—Mr. Ballantyne is secretary of the British Purchasing Commission—Mr. and Mrs. John Carter, Mrs. Anthony Coleby and Edward Weintal.

Chatting with Mrs. Harold Sims at tea time the other day brought back so many pleasant memories of the days before the war when the late Mr. Sims was Attache of the British Embassy and the Sims apartment was a favorite center for Washington social life. Mrs. Sims says that she loves living in Canada and is very much wrapped up in war work but that a trip to Washington to see her friends is a great treat. The other afternoon she was looking very pretty in black with a crisp white frill at her throat and was accompanied by her hostess, Mrs. Arthur Vandenberg, who was smart in a dark dress and a toque of turquoise blue feathers.

ALSO PRESENT at this small tea party was Mrs. J. Butler Wright and good-looking Mary Wright. Mrs. Wright was saying that her second daughter, Edith, is in New Orleans for the Mardi Gras festivities and is staying with Mrs. Wright's sister.

It seems that the Wrights' doctor was delighted when he heard that Edith, who had just recovered from a bad attack of flu, was to have a trip South but less pleased when told that Mardi Gras and not lazy beach-combing was in store for her.

Grant Mason came in looking healthier than anyone else and with the most superb tan which he frankly said kept him fit and was acquired by means of a prosaic sun lamp. Air Commodore and Mrs. Pirie brought along Squadron Leader Mills, who was recently fighting in the air over England and who is now assigned to Washington as Commodore Pirrie's assistant at the British Embassy. When someone introducing the newcomer complained that the army and navy in England had taken all the "human" titles and left only these complicated double-barrelled prefixes for the air force, Squadron Leader Mills said sympathetically, "Don't worry about it. I'm so used to being ordered about that when anyone says 'Mills,' I jump."

Other guests were Mrs. Ray Atherton, Senator Arthur Vandenberg, Sir Henry Self, of the British Air Purchasing Mission, Dorsey Fisher, of the State Department, Eric Taff and Mrs. Robert T. Pell. Mrs. Pell rushed off unexpectedly to New York in answer to a long distance call from her husband. Due to a mixup in dates, the poor man had arrived back from his mission in the Dominican Republic several days before he was expected and had immediately been struck down with flu.

Son Is Born To Mrs. Hathcock

Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Hathcock announce the birth of a son February 7 at Garfield Hospital. Mrs. Hathcock is the former Miss Dorothy Mitchell, daughter of Mrs. Roscoe C. Mitchell and the late Mr. Mitchell, who was Assistant Foreign Trade Adviser during the Wilson Administration.

The child will be named Thomas Mitchell.

Ruth Chambliss Betrothed

Mrs. H. Darden Chambliss, of Columbia, Mo., announces the engagement of her daughter, Ruth, to Roger Peacock, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Peacock, of Silver Spring, Md. The wedding will take place in March.

Altrusa Club Hears Friends' Service Aide

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

Miss Margaret Jones, a member of the headquarters staff of the American Service Committee in Philadelphia, last night addressed a dinner meeting of the Altrusa Club, held at the Broadmoor.

Miss Jones, who was introduced by Miss Bertha Nienburg, of the Department of Labor, told of the work of the Friends Service Committee in Europe. She returned to this country last October after having served in refugee relief in Rome, Vienna, Geneva and Lisbon. Her present work at the headquarters is in connection with the feeding of refugees in Free France.

There are now 50 members of the American Friends Service Committee in Free France, she told the club, and over a period of months they have been buying food wherever they could—primarily in Switzerland and Portugal—and distributing it to about 50,000 children and several thousand mothers.

Within the past few months this Quaker group has been called on to do relief work in the huge internment camp, deGurs, she said, where 20,000 men, women and children are living in indescribable conditions. The first report that has come through about aid for these people told of taking and distributing to the camp seven tons of food and enough clothing for 600 persons, said Miss Jones.

Explaining that the Friends, with their organization already set up in various areas, act as a distributing agency for other groups, she said that this food and clothing was purchased with money given the Quakers by some German refugees who have been in the United States for several years and who came originally from western Germany. They asked the Quakers to establish soup kitchens for the men, women and children recently sent to this camp from Heidelberg and the Palatinate area in Germany.

The Vichy government is cooperating in every way with the relief efforts and is also trying to make some improvement in conditions at deGurs, said Miss Jones. She also stated that the Germans were permitting relief work to go on in various sections without interference.

The Friends, she said, are supplying food to school children in Marseilles and some milk and rice to mothers with babies. It is increasingly difficult to buy food in Switzerland, she added.

There is close cooperation among the Quaker centers around the world on the emigration problems, said Miss Jones. The American Friends Service Committee has maintained two Quaker centers in Greater Germany for a number of years, she said, and recently the work at these has been on behalf of non-Aryans, involving emigration questions, advice and some forms of relief. The Quakers are working to aid refugees in Tokyo, Shanghai, Geneva, Rome, Marseilles, Paris and Lisbon.

Miss Jones, before going to Europe, was secretary of the Friends Meeting in Washington. She has spoken there since her return, telling something of the service being given abroad.

The Altrusa Club made a Christmas contribution to the work of the Friends Service Committee. Miss Edith Macauley is president of the club.

Sen. Brooks Pays Lincoln Tribute

Senator C. Wayland Brooks, of Illinois, addressed the Dames of the Loyal Legion yesterday at their annual Lincoln's Birthday breakfast held at the Mayflower Hotel.

Eulogizing Lincoln, Senator Brooks pointed out that, weighed in the scale of political experience, he was the least qualified of any man in America for the office he sought. Although he was a champion of the abolitionist cause from the beginning, the saving of the Union became the paramount issue with Lincoln as he viewed the crisis, said the speaker, "because under this form of government he knew that men would eventually be free."

Junior Bar to Hold Tea on Saturday

The junior bar section of the Women's Bar Association of the District will give a tea at the University Women's Club, 1634 I Street, Saturday, from 4 to 6. Among the guests of honor will be Judge Ellen K. Raedy, of the Municipal Court; Judge Fay L. Bentley, of the Juvenile Court, and Mrs. Elizabeth Cox, president of the Women's Bar Association.

The annual election of officers of the junior bar will be held prior to the tea. The outgoing officers are Marion E. Poole, chairman; Elizabeth Benson, vice chairman; Marion Toomey, secretary-treasurer; executive council, Mildred Gott Bryan, Katherine Haws, Virginia B. Parkinson. The chairof the nominating committee is Helen Goodner.

Miss Locke to Speak On Shakespeare

Miss Florence Locke will speak on "Children in Shakespeare" at the Ellen Terry Shakespeare lecture to be held at 8:30 p. m. on February 24 at Hotel Twenty-four Hundred. The lecture is being given under the sponsorship of the Authors of Books for Children Club.

Mrs. Roosevelt heads the list of patrons. Others include Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Auslander, Dr. and Mrs. Paul Bartsch, Mrs. John G. Bullard, Mme. Orlicz-Dreszer, Mrs. Hugh A. Greenwood, Mrs. Helen Ray Hagner, Mrs. J. L. Saugstad, Mrs. Kirk Bride, Joseph Quincy Adams and Charles Edward Russell.

Altrusa Club Hears of Relief Work

Madame Chairman

By Suzanne

MRS. JOHN FRANCIS WEINMANN, of Little Rock, Ark., honorary president national of the U. S. Daughters of 1812, will be guest of honor tomorrow afternoon at a tea to be given by the District society, of which Mrs. Albion Tuck is president. It will be at 4 p. m. at the national headquarters, 1461 Rhode Island Avenue.

The program, arranged by Mrs. Lane Schofield, former president of the society, will include songs and memories of France, presented by Germaine (Mrs. Ross Johnson), who is widely known for her radio programs.

Among guests invited to meet Mrs. Weinmann are Mrs. Llewellyn N. Edwards, national vice president; Mrs. William Bonar Bell, District president of the Founders and Patriots of America; Mrs. Roy C. Bowker, District president of American Colonists; Mrs. Harry C. Oberholser, District State regent of the D. A. R.; Mrs. Carolina V. Siedler, president of the Huguenot Society; Mrs. John Morrison Kerr, national president of the C. A. R.; Mrs. Livingston Vann, District president of the United Daughters of the Confederacy; Mrs. Bingham, wife of Capt. Wilson G. Bingham, of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Ross, wife of Maj. L. T. Ross, now stationed in Washington.

Mrs. Sol Lansburg, national chairman of the house committee, and Mrs. Charles W. Kutz, chairman of hospitality committee, will be assisted by Mrs. Charles T. Harris, Mrs. William Bonar Bell, Mrs. Maurice A. Emerson and Mrs. Rex Hays Rhodes. Mrs. Tuck will have her officers receiving with her.

JUNIOR FASHION SHOW—The 14 junior groups of the District D. A. R. will cooperate for the first time in staging a benefit when they hold a fashion show and tea Saturday afternoon at the D. A. R. Chapter House on Massachusetts Avenue, beginning at 3:30. Proceeds will go to the Red Cross, the juniors' project for the year.

Mrs. Frank Heller is State chairman of juniors and Aileen Wrightson, of the Army and Navy Chapter, chairman of the fashion show. Others on the committee include Regina Robey, in charge of refreshments; Mrs. James McKenny Berry, ways and means, and Edna Millwood, publicity.

ON THE AIR—The Red Cross class in public speaking, taught by Mrs. Hugh Butler, already has members taking to the air and trying their wings." Broadcasts have been made by Mrs. Farnham Blair, Mrs. Alec Preece, Mrs. Marie Micheau and Miss Marion Burt Claussen.

CELEBRATES ANNIVERSARY—Southeast Woman's Christian Temperance Union celebrated its sixty-first birthday anniversary Monday afternoon at District headquarters, 522 Sixth Street Northwest, with a program and tea under the direction of Mrs. Charles Arthur. Mrs. Earle Willey, president of the District of Columbia W. C. T. U., was honor guest.

Mrs. Emily Moffatt was elected president at the organizing meeting held February 13, 1880, in the Methodist Mission on Tenth Street Southeast. The present president is Mrs. Lurana VanDoren.

CHAPTER TO MEET—Mount Pleasant Chapter, Y. W. C. A., will meet today at 1:30 p. m. at the home of Mrs. John D. Morrey, 2301 Connecticut Avenue Northwest, with the president, Mrs. William Coffman, presiding. Speakers for the meeting will be Miss Elizabeth Haney, general secretary of the Washington branch, Y. W. C. A., and Miss Florence Dunlap, secretary for Camp Kahlert.

Home Economics Group Will Visit Maryland U.

Members of the District Home Economics Association will have a buffet supper in the Maryland room of the University of Maryland's new home economics building tonight at 6:30. President H. C. Byrd, of the university, will greet the guests and members of the university home economics staff will show them through the new building and the Old Rossborough Inn nearby.

Special buses to College Park will leave from the Willard Hotel on the F Street side promptly at 5:45.

Craft Unit Board Will Meet Today

To plan the forthcoming membership campaign, members of the board of directors of the National Craft Training Center will meet this afternoon at 5 o'clock at the residence of Mrs. Cazenove Lee on Newark Street. The membership drive will begin next week.

Mrs. H. L. Rust, jr., president of the board, has announced Mrs. Lew G. Coit as chairman of the drive. Other members of the board who will attend the meeting are John L. Barr, Mrs. William L. Breese, jr., Mrs. Morris Cafritz, Col. L. C. Crawford, Mrs. Lauchlan Currie, Mrs. Ralston Holmes, Mrs. Robert W. Imbrie, Miss Marian Lane, Miss Florence Merrill, Mrs. George P. Scriven, John A. Selby, Mrs. Charles Seymour, jr., Walter N. Tobriner, L. Metcalf Walling and Mrs. Cyril Wynne.

The National Craft Training Center, located in "Old Wheat Row," in Southwest Washington, was founded last year to fill the increasing demand for teachers in the crafts and to give Washingtonians whose hobbies lean toward crafts a chance to practice their art. Courses in ceramics, metal working, weaving and woodworking are included in the curriculum. F. J. Wallace is director.

Beck Circle to Meet

The William H. Beck Circle, Ladies of the G. A. R. will meet tonight at the Soldiers, Sailors and Marines Club, at 8 o'clock.

Group Opposes Trade Law

The consumer interests subcommittee of the Voteless D. C. League for Women Voters, after a study of the proposed "Fair Trade" law, has decided to oppose its passage. The reasons listed by the committee are:

"In the District this legislation would have the effect of giving Government sanction to price fixing by private individuals.

"Retail druggists in the District do not need legislation to protect their profit margin, since United States census data show that they have prospered over a period of years.

"The fact that the chains are supporting so-called "fair trade" legislation is a factor that makes us feel that this type of law does not protect independent merchants.

"Such legislation would raise prices to the consumer, especially to the consumer least able to pay.

"Retail price maintenance contracts tend to foster monopoly, especially among distributors."

The consumers' interests group is now making a study of the pure food and drugs and cosmetics laws, in preparation for attending hearings in March.

P.E.O. Chapter Will Honor Mrs. Kerr

Mrs. Florence Kerr, Assistant Commissioner of the Works Projects Administration and a member of the P. E. O. Sisterhood in the State of Iowa, will be guest of honor and speaker at the first annual guest night program of Chapter M tonight at the apartment of Miss Betty Vandersluis and Miss Hilda Canady, 2124 I Street Northwest. The chapter meeting will commence at 8 o'clock with the chapter members and guest P. E. O.'s to be present at that hour, and other guests invited to come in at 8:30 for the program.

Miss S. Elizabeth Reynolds, the president of the District chapter, will be present, as will most of her staff of officers, Mrs. T. A. Hutton, Miss Hazel B. Nielson, Mrs. M. H. Fohrman, Mrs. F. E. Weick, Mrs. W. M. Buckles and Miss Jane M. Anderson. The past presidents of the District chapter have been invited also. These include Miss Laura V. Hanson, Mrs. W. W. Stockberger, Mrs. K. D. Jacobs and Mrs. R. M. Ferguson.

Kilmer Reads at A. A. U. W. Dinner for Poetry Winners

Kenton Kilmer, assistant to the consultant in English poetry at the Library of Congress, last night read from his poems, both published and unpublished, at the dinner given in honor of the prize winners in the ninth annual poetry contest of the local branch of the American Association of University Women, at the clubhouse.

Ruth Rayana Metz, a freshman at George Washington University, was awarded first prize on her poem, "Tree at Night;" Cecil R. Martin, a junior at the University of Maryland, second on "Nostalgia," and Jessalyne Charles, a sophomore at George Washington, third on "A Protest." The judges were Mr. Kilmer, John Robert Quinn and Mrs. Richard Hogue, of the Martha McLear Poetry Group, of the A. A. U. W. branch, who read the prize-winning poems last night. Miss Anna Cooper was in charge of the program.

TREE AT NIGHT

Pour out your pouch of shadow,
Let it lie, a terror, at your feet.
What seemed by day
Simple statement of effect
From cause in nature
Renounces now much-seen simplicity.
We saw, by day, at most,
Slim arc of anguish in your blemished bough
Whose green-leaved triumph waved
Beyond its death. But here, by night,
The roots are seen . . . not element nor strong,
This mass of deathless shadow at your base.

And we who saw by day a branch in light,
See root that bleeds a shadow in the night.

The second prize poem, "Nostalgia," expresses the disappointment of the wanderer who has longed for home as he has traveled and then returns to find the landscape but not the loved ones there who made it home.

The poem on which third prize was awarded was a student's protest against the chemistry course in which:

We did
What the book told us to.
We did not know
Why we did it.

We copied stuff
We did not understand
Out of the textbooks
Into our notebooks.

It explains that the "faculty people are older" and think the students who have passed the course are brilliant, but concludes:

We, too, think
We know chemistry.
Only God knows
How much
We don't know!

Among the unpublished poems read by Mr. Kilmer from his works was one he wrote at the time of Munich, called "There Is Peace Now," describing the return of two Czech refugees to their homes, and their joy at going back, no matter what the future might hold. Another from the unpublished group was "My Cup Runneth Over," a poem describing the pain and sacrifice of love, and a third, a humorous Halloween verse, "Chant Royal Against Witches." Among others he read were "One Whom I Love," published here some years ago, and "Landscapes and Lives," a long poem, describing his work in the poetry division of the Congressional Library.

A large number have made reservations for the bridge benefit to be held tomorrow afternoon and evening for the Latin-American Fellowship Fund at the clubhouse of the American Association of University Women.

Before the games in the evening, vocal selections will be given by Senorita Mercedes Guerra, daughter of the Cuban representative on the Inter-American Economic Advisory Committee. Senorita Guerra will represent Cuba at Galveston's 1941 Mardi Gras from February 21 to 24.

She is now the guest of Miss Minerva Bernardino, vice chairman of the Inter-American Commission of Women.

Congressional Club Tea to Honor Czech Attache and Wife

Dr. Karll Crevenka, first secretary of the Szecho-Slovakian Legation, and Mme. Crevenka will be guests of honor tomorrow at the Friday tea of the Congressional Club. Mr. Crevenka will speak on "The Story of Czecho-Slovakia."

Alternating at the tea table will be Mrs. Brant Spence, of Kentucky; Mrs. Albert Thomas, of Texas; Mrs. Orville Zimmerman, of Missouri, and Mrs. George W. Gillie, of Indiana.

Women of Moose Broadcast at 10:30

The patriotic radio program given under the auspices of Columbia Chapter, Women of the Moose, originally scheduled for this evening from 9:15 to 9:30 p. m. over Station WOL, will be heard over that station from 10:30 to 10:45 p. m. instead. This program, arranged by Mrs. Ola D. Lee, radio and publicity chairman, will commemorate the birth of George Washington and Abraham Lincoln and the chapter's twenty-first anniversary.

The principal speaker will be Senator James J. Davis, of Pennsylvania, who is director general and pilgrim governor of the Loyal Order of Moose. The soloist will be Mrs. Alecia Kohrt, dramatic soprano.

The chapter will observe its twenty-first anniversary tomorrow at the Moose Hall, 1414 I Street Northwest. The senior regent, Mrs. Anna R. Gilbert, is general chairman.

Alpha Gamma Delta to Meet

The Washington Chapter of the Alumnae Club of Alpha Gamma Delta sorority will hold its regular monthly dinner meeting at the home of Mrs. J. E. Saugstad, 2021 Massachusetts Avenue Northwest, this evening, at 7 o'clock. Cohostesses will be Miss Ethel Riley and Miss Iona Thornton.

Carmody Asks Millions for Defense Roads

Appropriation of $287,000,000 for immediate defense highway construction and the planning of post-emergency roads was proposed yesterday by Federal Works Administrator John M. Carmody.

In a special Public Roads Administration report submitted to President Roosevelt, Carmody recommended Congressional appropriation of:

1. $150,000,000 for immediate construction of access roads to serve military and naval reservations and defense industries.

2. $100,000,000 for immediate strengthening of weak sections of the national highway system designated by the War and Navy Departments as the "strategic network."

3. $25,000,000 for construction and repair of special tactical roads designated by the War Department.

4. $12,000,000 for advance planning of improvements to be made after the national emergency.

Construction of the access roads would be carried out by the PRA in cooperation with State highway departments, but paid for entirely with Federal funds.

Strengthening the "strategic network" likewise would be done by PRA and States. However, States would be required to share the expense though the Federal contribution would be larger than the normal 50-50 basis of the Federal-aid highway program.

Tactical roads designated by the War Department would be constructed under supervision of the PRA, entirely with Federal funds.

Among 157 military establishments to which access roads should be built or improved, the report lists the following in the Third Corps Area:

Bolling Field, D. C.; Arlington Cantonment, Va.; Fort Myer, Va.; Fort Meade, Md.; Fort Hoyle, Md.; Fort Story, Va.; Edgewood Arsenal, Md.; Aberdeen Proving Grounds, Md.; Langley Field, Va.; Fort Monroe, Va.; Curtis Bay Ordnance Depot, Md.; Fort Eustis, Va.; Nansemond Ordnance Depot, Va.; Carlisle Barracks, Pa.; Virginia Beach National Guard Camp, Va.; Front Royal Quartermaster Depot, Va., and Indiantown Gap, Pa.

Thirty-five shore establishments to which like roads are needed, according to the report, include these in the Fifth Naval District:

Wisconsin U. Alumni Mark Founders' Day

Nearly 100 alumni of the University of Wisconsin attended a dinner in celebration of the ninety-second anniversary of the university's founding last night at the Hotel Dodge.

The voices of President Clarence A. Dykstra; M. J. Cleary '01, president of the Northwestern Life Insurance Co., and Philip D. Reed '21, chairman of the board of the General Electric Co., were heard by the group in a Nation-wide broadcast to similar meetings throughout the country.

C. M. Jansky, jr. '17, radio engineering consultant, described pioneer experiments in radio conducted at the university. Work of the Census Bureau was discussed by Chester E. Rightor '09, a statistician with the bureau.

The District Alumni Association recommended that Joseph E. Davies, former Ambassador to Russia and Belgium, receive an honorary degree from the university.

George E. Worthington '10, president of the Washington organization, served as toastmaster. The invocation was offered by Dr. Albert J. McCartney '01, pastor of the Covenant-First Presbyterian Church.

Embassy Denies Statement on U. S. Laid to Churchill

On authority of Prime Minister Churchill the British Embassy yesterday denied that he had ever said "America should have minded her own business and stayed out of the World War," or made any similar utterance.

The Embassy said in a statement:

"There have been repeated allegations in the press, some of which have even found an echo in the Congressional Record, to the effect that Mr. Winston Churchill had made a statement in 1936 deprecating America's participation in the war of 1914-18.

"The alleged statement as reproduced in various newspapers reads as follows:

"'Legally we owe this debt to the United States, but logically we don't and this is because America should have minded her own business and stayed out of the World War. If she had done so, the Allies would have made peace with Germany in the spring of 1917, thus saving over a million British, French, American and other lives and preventing the subsequent rise of fascism and naziism.'

"As a number of persons and some newspapers have apparently been deceived by an utter untruth put forward with the sole purpose of destroying good relations between the United States and Great Britain, the British Embassy wishes to state on the authority of the Prime Minister that it is totally untrue that he ever made any statement to the above or similar effect."

Text of Willkie's Challenge for G. O. P. Action

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 12.—The transcribed text of Wendell L. Willkie's Lincoln Day address tonight follows:

I recently had the very stimulating privilege of spending a weekend with the man whom I think is the greatest public figure in the world—Winston Churchill. With that gracious complimentary hospitality for which he is famous he proceeded into a discussion of the respective operations of the American constitutional system and the English constitutional system.

He added to demonstrate that under the English system defeated candidates for high office remain connected with government while under the American system they retire to private life. And he was lamenting as a complimentary gesture to me the difference in the American system that required the retirement of Presidential candidates to other occupations.

I suggested to him as a loyal American in defense of our system that perhaps ours had the advantage because they had with them political figures always while we had a convenient method of retiring them.

We meet here this evening as members of the Republican Party and people all over the country are meeting as members of the Republican Party to honor the name of Abraham Lincoln. And also citizens who are not members or active members of political parties are likewise paying their respects to that immortal figure.

It's good for a nation to have its heroes. It's fine for the people of a nation to turn in reverence to our very beloved. We in America have three distinguished political figures, three persons that instinctively everybody every year turns to.

Washington, Lincoln, Lee

Frequently in the last several years when I've had to visit Washington as all people must these days when the smoke has gotten too thick and the conversation too heavy at night I've climbed into a car and I've driven past the Washington Monument and Lincoln's Memorial and on out to Arlington to the home of Robert E. Lee. These are the men irrespective of politics that all American hearts turn to as the three great figures of our public life and the qualities that make them the heroes of this country are as much a compliment to the people of this country as they are to the men themselves. And the three of them had one common quality. And that was the quality of magnanimity.

George Washington said that without more tolerance for the views of others, this nation cannot survive. Robert E. Lee said "although I've fought the North because I thought it was seeking to take from us our most cherished right, I have never seen the night that I have not prayed for the people of the North."

Abraham Lincoln said: "With malice toward none, with charity toward all."

And so as I say, going by that tall shaft that pierces the sky and that classic temple with the simple brooding figure of Lincoln in it and to the stately home of Robert E. Lee, I've caught a spiritual value and a real faith that the American people after all worship most, not partisanship, nor bitterness, nor vindictiveness in their public leaders, but love of mankind and magnanimity and tolerance and understanding.

Unity Is Stressed

George Washington, without whose talent, without whose sacrifices and without whose ability this Nation could not have been created, struggled throughout his public career to bring the people into union and although Robert E. Lee, giving one of the finest minds and the utmost of energy in the struggle for the political belief that he believed in when the arbitrament of battle went against him, he settled down to a simple job and preached to all who would listen to him that America must be united.

Abraham Lincoln's whole career was to build of these United States a united country. Eighty years ago tonight Abraham Lincoln on his way to be inaugurated as President was traveling across my home State of Indiana to make a speech in Cincinnati that night. He had lived in that State 25 years before as a boy and I think that we all can see him now—that simple soul, that great mind, that man who could love, even those who fought him. He knew how to fight without vindictiveness, we can see him now the great brooding figure praying somehow that through these difficult times a United America would arise and save us in this world of turmoil.

The history of party government in the United States follows a fairly simple pattern: Parties in the United States are born in times of great crisis and struggle—perhaps sometimes they are reborn in such periods. The first two political parties were the Federalist and the Democratic Party—or as then was called the Republican Party. And they grew out of the struggles and the necessary problems in connection with the establishment of our Government.

And in a few years the Federalist Party died and the Democratic Party went on because the Federalist Party became a party of negation while the Democratic Party under the leadership of Thomas Jefferson remained the positive party.

Criticizes Negative Attitude

And then in the time of Andrew Jackson there arose the Whig Party—a party of opposition—a party of negation, a party that offered no other program to Jackson's except that Jackson was wrong, and existed some 25 years and then a great moral issue arose in America and because the Whig Party found nothing in that issue except compromise, except the adoption of cliches, except the playing of local prejudices, it passed away and in its place in the struggle for freedom came the Republican Party.

We were founded to preserve freedom—that was the reason for us coming into being.

And if we will but remember that, we cannot fail. But if we become like the Whig Party—merely the party of negation, merely the party of opposition, merely those who find fault and who in one of the critical moments of history find nothing nobler to do than compromise—this great party will pass from the scene. And I'm here to speak to you tonight to challenge you to a higher destiny than the destiny of compromise and negation and failure and death.

This group has said it so well here tonight. The Democratic Party in the struggle out of which the Republican Party was born as the champion of freedom—the Democratic Party was the champion of slavery, but at least it was the champion of something, and it survived.

Comparison With War Zone

Here we are at this moment in this peaceful ballroom untouched, happy, gay and buoyant, little troubled. And yet within a distance that I recently traveled by a round-about way within three days, bombs are dropping, destroying cities lived in by free men—free men like us—and some men rise and say "That's no problem of ours—let's preserve America alone."

Although he made some stops on the way, it took Abraham Lincoln 11 days to travel from Springfield, Ill., to Washington, D. C., to be inaugurated President of the United States. And it took George Washington, I believe, if my historical remembrance is correct, eight days to travel from Mount Vernon to New York to be inaugurated. And as I say, within the last two weeks by a much round-about way I traveled 10-20-30 times as far as they went in three days, and thus the world has collapsed in size.

I doubt if in the history of parties any party had such a golden opportunity as presents itself to the Republican Party tonight. Where is the Republican that doesn't want to meet the challenge?

If the Republican Party now tonight and tomorrow and the next day begins to preach a positive doctrine; if we begin to say here are free men like ourselves struggling to preserve themselves; here is a war that will determine the course of American history; here is a war that the outcome of which will determine whether or not the standard of living of every man in the world will be raised or lowered; here is an international situation that by reason of its very chaos offers the opportunity to America for world leadership—not alone world leadership that can follow this war, not alone an economic system in America but an economic system throughout the world that will offer to all men a fuller life than has ever been known or ever can be achieved within the narrow limits of any nation. It's always true in times of trouble that real opportunities come. Just as a party cannot live in negation so a system or an ideology cannot live in negation.

Look back across the pages of history. Any ideology, any belief, any religion, any system of government or of life that begins to contract and to narrow itself begins to die.

Assails Isolationism

Here is the democratic way of life and men say—I hear them argue it seriously—that it can die in Belgium, in Holland, in Norway, in France; it can even die in England and still we can preserve it in America. If we can, we render false all of the pages of history.

And yet we have the opportunity if we but adequately and immediately give to those fighting men of Britain merely the equipment with which they can win. We can make of democracy not a blind doctrine but an expanding doctrine and we can be the arbitrators, we can be the dictators, we can be the ones who determine that there shall be a peace where all men will have the right to live under freedom and not under slavery.

There is a party in power, a party not the Democratic Party—The New Deal Party—without faith in people because its idea of winning elections and controlling votes is by the method of Government pressures and expenditures.

We have a party in power that does not understand the basic functioning of the free enterprise system. We have a party in power although today it has at last grasped the meaning of the international situation, yet no later than 1933 or 1934 dumped the London Economic Conference that might have saved all of this chaos of war and confusion and death and bombed cities.

Here lies our opportunity. We know how the free enterprise system operates. We know that if it's permitted to function that it can create for all men more than any man has heretofore known of those who must work.

Here we are. We know what the international situation is. We know the necessities of a program to save those fighting men. People of the Republican Party, I give to you this challenge in the year 1941: Have we the vision? Have we the ability? Have we the leadership to take America down this glorious path that's offered to us?

I have no doubt that we have.

I remember when I was serving in the previous war. I was in the Field Artillery and there was a boy in my battery who was transferred to the Infantry. We had a sergeant in my battery who was what we called "hard-boiled." And his way of training the men was to keep shouting at them as they failed in their drills, "have you got it in you?" "Have you got it in you?"

And this boy in my battery who was transferred to the Infantry was trained under that sergeant and after he was transferred to the Infantry he was sent out on a wire-cutting expedition into no-man's land, and as he got partway out he began to lose his nerve. And then he could hear as though it was whispered on the voice of the wind: "Have you got it in you? Have you got it in you?" And he went on and today he's the proud wearer of the Croix de Guerre.

Republicans of 1941, have you got it in you? Have you or not?

Republican Party Strangling Itself, Clare Boothe Says

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—Clare Boothe, author and playwright, told members of the National Republican Club at their annual Lincoln Day dinner tonight that "if the Republican Party does not soon recover some measure of its historic robust health, it will never again elect another President."

Asking why the party's psychology has become, since the war, "almost pathologically that of confused and erratic opposition," Miss Boothe suggested it was "because the Republican Party is committing hari-kari with the sharp knife of a great political inconsistency. The inconsistency between a free economic system, and isolationism."

She told the Republicans that "you have here tonight, a man who is, of course really up to "the job of saving the party. And," she continued, "I am sure if he is permitted by the fortunes of politics to undertake it, even the most hidebound old guardists will be behind him—way behind him."

$4,157,000 Asked for Navy In D. C. Area

President Roosevelt yesterday asked Congress to appropriate $4,157,000 for additions to naval facilities in and around Washington, including $500,000 for a wind tunnel at the Carderock Ship Model Basin.

The local construction was included in budget estimates totaling $898,392,932, which were asked to speed forward the naval expansion program.

As the estimates reached Congress, Rear Admiral Ben Moreell, chief of the Bureau of Yard and Docks, told reporters that construction costs in the Washington area were among the highest in the country.

Moreell, who has charge of the Navy's shore construction program, said, however, that no difficulty had been found in keeping within cost limits for naval housing projects at Bellevue, Anacostia, as the high costs had been anticipated.

The naval estimates included $1,250,000 for "additional aviation facilities" at the Anacostia Naval Air Station; $309,000 for "additional research facilities" at the Bellevue Naval Research Station, and $960,000 for "additional ordnance manufacturing facilities" at the Navy Yard.

Funds were asked for an expansion of the naval proving ground at Dahlgren, Va. Included was $520,000 for purchase and development of a landing field for testing aircraft detection devices, and $295,000 for ordnance facilities.

The sum of $328,000 was asked for additional facilities at the Quantico (Va.) Flying Feld, and $95,000 for aviation facilities at the Naval Academy.

Mrs. R. A. Maurer, School Official's Wife, Kills Self

Mrs. Mary Roberta Maurer, 54-year-old wife of Robert A. Maurer, who is vice president of the District Board of Education and professor of public law at Georgetown university, killed herself yesterday in the kitchen of her home at 2029 Park Road Northwest.

Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald, certifying her death as suicide, was told by the family that Mrs. Maurer had been "depressed."

The body was found at 4:30 p. m. by a son, Robert Maurer. The gas jets of four burners and the oven were open. Crevices in doors and windows had been stuffed with paper.

Former Pelley Aide Wins Probation On War Record

David A. Mayne's military record in the World War yesterday won him probation of a one-to-three-year prison sentence for forgery and obtaining money by false pretenses.

Mayne, a former Washington aide of William Dudley Pelley, Silver Shirt chief, pleaded guilty in the District Court, to charges that he forged letters purporting to link Pelley and Chairman Dies of the House Committee on un-American Activities. The letters were sold for $105 to Gardner Jackson, former aide of Labor's Nonpartisan League, and Harold O. Weisberg, once an investigator for the Civil Libities Committee.

Justice James M. Proctor sentenced Mayne to one to three years yesterday, then said:

"I am going to give you probation because you have no past criminal record. I am hopeful that, however reprehensible your acts may have been, this has taught you a lesson. You have a good military record and have served your country well. Now, in your hour of trouble, I think the Government can repay you."

Symphony Fund Report Due Today

Final results of the National Symphony Orchestra's drive for $107,500 to support its 1941-42 season will be announced at a luncheon today in the Carlton Hotel.

Monday the campaign had brought in only $43,780, slightly more than 40 per cent of the goal.

Today's luncheon, which will begin at 12:30 p. m., will be dedicated to the Federal and District governments. Speakers and honor guests include Brig. Gen. John N. Greeley, Admiral Emory Scott Land, C. G. Abbott, Augustus E. Giegengack, Dr. H. C. Byrd and Helen Essary.

Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

President Reported Urged to Ramspeck Action

High-placed reports to the contrary, action on the Ramspeck law won't be delayed much longer, possibly not more than two weeks. Best information is that the Civil Service Commission will urge the President to issue a single order that would bring the jobs of between 100,000 and 125,000 Federal employes under the merit system. Once the order is issued it will mean that all vacancies among the affected jobs will have to be filled from Civil Service registers. Officials in two departments are known to have told employes that application of the Ramspeck Bill will be delayed until "after the emergency." If there's a prolonged delay it can't be blamed on the commission as it already has its plans outlined and is now merely waiting on a few of the recalcitrant departments to recommend which of its employes should be brought under merit.

Believe it or not, but red tape actually is going to cost Uncle Sam more money. Lewis C. Spangler, chief of Treasury's Printing Division, told the House Appropriations Committee that prices were going up for all supplies. "Even red tape," he said, "has gone up from $5,100 in 1940 to $6,000 in 1942."

National Archives officials claim they have the records which inspired the term "red tape," veterans' records of the Civil War. Records of each veteran are in yellowed jackets bound by red tape, long since turned pale. The story goes that a veteran got peeved because a Government clerk was holding up a check. The veteran bawled out the clerk, demanding that the red tape be torn off and he be given his check. The story got around and soon "red tape" became a term to describe governmental delay.

President Roosevelt is reported to have written a letter to Tommy Corcoran last week which "commanded" him to report to Attorney General Robert Jackson for wark in the Justice Department at $10,000 a year. So far Corcoran hasn't taken the job, apparently preferring to connect with a defense agency. Tommy, his friends say, really wanted to be general counsel of OPM, but with that job filled, he is trying to get an assistant secretary's job at either War or Navy. It's possible that Corcoran will practice law for several weeks before he accepts a Federal job. A side-line job being proposed for Corcoran is contact man between the White House and Capitol Hill. This job would give him some control over patronage.

Latimer May Quit

J. Austin Latimer, executive assistant to Postmaster General Frank Walker, is reported to be planning to resign to enter the practice of law here. He was brought in by Jim Farley in 1933 and he was placed in charge of patronage at USHA and several other New Deal Agencies . . . John B. Reynolds, FCC's expert on administration, budget and personnel, left this week to operate a radio station in Wheeling, W. Va. His resignation won't become effective for another month.

Attorney General Jackson is 49 today . . . Perry Fellows, WPA chief engineer, is reported to have support of Michigan Democrats for the job of WPA commissioner. He has told friends that he's satisfied with his present job and that it isn't necessary for him to move up to the ninth floor "to contract a pack of headaches." . . . Even employes in the Postoffice Department are complaining about the Official Messenger Service which probably will be soon shifted to the city Postoffice. About a third of the messengers have either quit or have been fired since they have been transferred to Postoffice. Most of them have been replaced with subcarriers. Messenger salaries aren't uniform and they haven't been brought under Civil Service as was promised.

Saturday is the last day for Federal employes to enter the recreational contest. The two winners will be sent to St. Petersburg for a week's vacation, all expenses paid. Contest sponsors are the Federal Employe Council and WJSV. Any employe can enter by telling how he spends his spare time and what he believes the council can do to promote recreational activity among Government employes.

The Dog Might Change His Plan

Dr. William Murphey, Salisbury (Md.) dogcatcher, yesterday announced a plan to capture an auto-chasing dog which cannily avoids the dogcatcher's white car.

The veterinarian has observed the dog chases one auto, then "sits out" three.

"I'm going to maneuver into that fourth position one of these days," he said.

It's Later Than You Think

Members of the War Department's Breakfast Club have been losing sleep by getting up "practically at dawn" for their breakfast meetings, so yesterday they gave up and had "breakfast" at 6 p. m.

The breakfast-dinner, held at 1644 Connecticut Avenue, was followed by psychoanalysis readings by Miss Irene Seber-Jay. "They all have war nerves," she said.

Bus Hearing Interests Citizen Units

Third Cross-Town Route Proposed For Discussion At Hearing Today

Transportation problems were the featured discussions at citizens associations meetings last night as citizens organizations prepared to send representatives to today's hearing on a cross-town bus line which will he held in the District Building.

Rhode Island Avenue

A third crosstown bus line, somewhat different from either of the routes now under consideration by the Public Utilities Commission, was proposed last night by the Rhode Island Avenue Citizens Association.

The new route would follow the proposed Park Road line from Ward Circle to Fourteenth and Monroe Streets Northeast and south on Fourteentn Street to Rhode Island Avenue, but it would branch off there to serve the Langdon area.

From Fourteenth Street and Rhode Island Avenue it would go east on Franklin Street to South Dakota Avenue at the Railroad Bridge, then follow South Dakota Avenue to the Bladensburg Road.

The association meeting at the Woodridge Branch Library, 2204 Rhode Island Avenue Northeast, also adopted a lengthy resolution expressing "deep appreciation" for the "fine service" of Harold J. Clay, retiring president.

Three members were appointed to attend the organization meeting of the Municipal Assembly, February 28. They are Fred T. Devine, C. E. Kissinger and S. Joseph Corrigan.

Admitted to membership were Williamson C. George, E. C. Lloyd, George Clark, Mrs. George Clark, Mrs. Jesse N. Lutton and Vincent C. Moss.

Michigan Park

Members of the Michigan Park Citizens Association last night asked that "No Parking" signs be removed and street cars prohibited from lining up on Twelfth Street Northeast between Randolph and Quincy Streets.

They pointed to the "virtual impossibility" of shopping in that area because of the parking ban.

The citizens went on record as favoring the Military Road route for the proposed cross-town bus and named Thomas Courtney as their representative at today's bus hearing in the District Building.

North Cleveland Park

A special meeting of the North Cleveland Park Citizens Association to be held Friday at 8 p. m. in Windom Hall, Wisconsin Avenue and Windom Place Northwest, was announced last night by President J. B. Dickman.

Purpose of the meeting will be to protest proposed closing of Van Ness Street in the vicinity of the Bureau of Standards, hearings on which will be held Monday, February 17, in the District Building.

North Randle Highlands

More school facilities to cope with "the tremendous increase in the Souteast school-age population" were urged last night by the North Randle Highlands Community Citizens Association.

The eight-room school provided for in the 1942 Distrcit budget will serve 240 pupils, while more than 2,000 family units are now being constructed in the North Randle area, the citizens pointed out.

President Archie Edwards announced that he would call a special meeting of the association within the next month if no action is taken by Congress on "this pressing problem."

The association also backed the Military Road route for the proposed crosstown bus, asked adjustment of the traffic light at Pennsylvania and Minnesota Avenues Southeast and asked for additional bus service from the area east of the Anacostia by the Navy Yard and to Georgetown.

$93,190 Sought To Protect D. C. Water System

Funds to provide protection of Washington's water system against sabotage were requested immediately of Congress yesterday in a supplemental estimate submitted by the Budget Bureau.

The estimate of $93,190 included $65,000 to build fences around the Great Falls intake, the Dalecarlia reservoir and filter plant, the McMillan filter plant and several "isolated works." An appropriation of $18,190 was asked to provide a three-shift patrol of the Washington aqueduct.

The Budget Bureau explained that the estimates are embraced in the regular 1942 budget but that the Commissioners believe the safeguards should not be delayed. The Commissioners previously had asked a supplemental appropriation to prepare against the severance of conduits which carry water to the Dalecarlia station.

7 Chilean Newspapermen Enter on Round Of Activities Before Beginning Work in U. S.

Postlude

Kindler Hailed On Dvorak's 9th Symphony

By Ray C. B. Brown

Hans Kindler conducts the National Symphony Orchestra on Wednesday night in Constitution Hall. Program: Symphony No. 9 in E Minor (Dvorak), Brandenburg Concerto No. 3 in G major (Bach), Excerpts from "Ledi Makbet Mtsenskago Uezda" (Shostakovich), Etudes Op. 2, No. 1 and Op 8, No. 12 (Skryabin-Spier).

Having completed on Sunday the scheduled series of "beloved symphonic masterpieces," Hans Kindler slipped in another favorite last evening, and conducted the National Symphony Orchestra in a vitalized and stimulating performance of Dvorak's E minor symphony. There was nothing perfunctory about his reading of the familiar pages, nor was there any sentimentalizing of the greatly mistreated Largo. With a zealous regard for the beauties of the work, and with a strict observance of the tempi, he made the music sound fresh and spontaneous.

BROWN

Edward N. Waters deserves a compliment as the first program annotator, within my knowledge, to inform the public about the correct number and order of Dvorak's nine symphonies. If more annotators follow his example, we may learn in time to refer to the "New World" symphony as the ninth and not the fifth.

Dr. Kindler began the second half of the program with an excellent exposition of Bach's third "Brandenburg" concerts in G major, supplying, as is his wont, the missing slow movement with the air from the D major orchestral suite. The sturdy first allegro was played with an irresistible dynamic urgency, and the second allegro had a clear brilliance.

The evening's novelty was Quinto Maganini's arrangement of three excerpts from Dimitri Shastakovich's second opera, "Lady Macbeth of the District of Mtsensk," which looks so quaint in transliterated Russian that one cannot refrain from putting it down: "Ledi Makbet Mtsenskago Uezda."

Seven Chilean newspapermen were welcomed by official Washington yesterday before beginning work on American newspapers, where they will serve as writers on South American affairs and interpret the American way of life for readers in their country.

Two of the Chileans will work in Washington. Joaquin Muirhead, of La Hora, Santiago, will write for The Post, while Manuel Vega, of El Diario Illustrado, Santiago, will serve in a similar capacity on the Evening Star.

Following a round of activities today, the group will be introduced to President Roosevelt at his White House press conference tomorrow.

Senor Rodolfo Michels, the Chilean Ambassador; Dr. L. S. Rowe, Director General of the Pan American Union; Edward G. Trueblood, assistant chief of the division of cultural relations of the State Department, and Robert Woodward, of the division of American republics of the department, greeted the group on arrival at Union Station yesterday.

A dinner in their honor was given last night by Eugene Meyer, editor and publisher of The Post, and Mrs. Meyer, at their home, 1624 Crescent Place Northwest.

Guests included the Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels, Robert Patchin, vice president of W. R. Grace & Co.; J. Stanton Robbins, of the Grace Line; Trueblood of the State Department; Dr. Rowe, Alexander F. Jones, managing editor of The Post, and Mrs. Jones; Ben McKelway, managing editor of the Star, and Mrs. McKelway; Countess de Gramont, and Mrs. Truxton Beale.

In addition to Muirhead and Vega, the newspapermen and the papers with which they will be associated are:

Carlos Eastman, of El Mercurio, Santiago, the New York Times; Francisco Le Dantec, of El Mercurio, Valparaiso, the Philadelphia Evening Bulletin; Luis Ignacio Silva, of La Union, Valparaiso, the Boston Globe; Rafael Valdivieso, of El Imparcial, Santiago, the Detroit News, and Guillermo Valenzuela, of La Nacion, Santiago, the Los Angeles Times.

Muirhead, who will write for The Post, is 30 years old and has spent the last ten years in newspaper work in Chile. He has specialized in reporting politics and national defense.

"I want to describe the people of this country to my people in Chile," he said yesterday. He visualizes the group's experience in American journalism as aiding in a closer understanding of the peoples of the Americas.

At 10 a. m. today the newspapermen will go to the Pan American Union, and at noon will attend Secretary of State Hull's press conference. They will be guests of Patchin at 1 p. m. at the Metropolitan Club. An informal reception will be held at 5 p. m. at the Chilean Embassy.

Following tomorrow's conference with President Roosevelt, the newspapermen will begin work on their host newspapers.

Tuckerman House Rezoned For Defense

Famous Tuckerman House, Sixteenth Street landmark, will be used by the Defense Housing Coordinating Committee, as a result of affirmative action yesterday by the District Board of Zoning Adjustment.

Situated at 1600 I Street Northwest, the famous house, also known as the Porter Mansion, will be used "for the duration of the emergency" under a zoning variance granted by the adjustment board.

The house, now the property of the Library of Congress, is directly across the street from the Central Housing Committee. The adjustment board acted favorably on five other appeals, denied two and deferred action on five.

Appeals approved were:

Waggaman & Brawner, for permission to continue the operation of a sand pit at Rizga Road and Chillum Place Northeast.

Roger J. Whiteford and Edgar N. Brawner, to extend retail and parking lot use on west side of Georgia Avenue between Underwood and Van Buren Streets Northwest.

Wilbur Rogers, Inc., to permit erection of a second story rear addition to 1211 F Street Northwest.

M. H. Fearnow, to permit erection of a two-story rear addition to dwelling at 435 Seventh Street Southwest.

Hunter May Head D. C. Funds Group

Prospective Head Of Subcommittee In House Favors More Federal Aid

By James D. Secrest

Post Staff Writer

Representative Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, who believes that the Federal payment to the District should be increased, is slated to become chairman of the important Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee of the House District Committee, it was learned yesterday.

Hunter, who also holds that the District tax system should be overhauled, would succeed Representative Nichols (Democrat), of Oklahoma, who resigned from the committee upon his appointment to the House Rules Committee.

Chairman Randolph, who has held up the appointment of subcommittees until three Republican vacancies on the District Committee shall be filled, hopes to announce the assignments next week. He is particularly anxious to expedite consideration of the District income tax amendments asked by the Commissioners.

The man in line for the Fiscal Affairs Subcommittee, Representative McGehee (Democrat), of Mississippi, has declined the job, it is understood, on the ground that he would rather retain the post of chairman of the Judiciary Subcommittee. McGehee is a sales tax advocate.

Hunter was not a member of the Nichols subcommittee, which was divided sharply for several years between income and sales taxes, but he was active on the Eberharter subcommittee which investigated the administration of the alcoholic beverage control act.

A quiet member of the committee, Hunter has maintained, nevertheless, a constant interest in District affairs.

He said yesterday he has an open mind on the controversy over whether the District income tax should be amended or repealed and a sales tax substituted.

"In principle I favor the income tax," he said, "but the District has some peculiar problems which might make a sales tax preferable."

An increase in the Federal contribution, possibly as much as 25 per cent, Hunter said, should be made and the District's tax system should be overhauled to bring it in line with the levies of comparable cities.

The Overton fiscal formula, which would raise the Federal payment to more than $8,000,000 is "absolutely fair," Hunter said. He indicated he might support it in the House. Nichols was vigorously opposed to it.

Hunter suggested that the District liquor taxes should be revised. He declared that liquor is cheaper in Ohio than in Washington, yet is taxed more, and last year gave the State $19,000,000 in revenue. Ohio has a State dispensary system.

Elimination of the personal property tax on automobiles and "some uniformity" in gasoline taxes of the District, Maryland and Virginia would be desirable, he said.

The District, on the other hand, could curtail its operating costs, Hunter said, by reducing some of the "ridiculous salaries" paid to municipal officials here. As an instance of unnecessary costs he cited the three-man commission. This board, he pointed out, performs duties handled in other cities by a mayor or city manager.

"Perhaps, the best solution to the whole problem," he concluded, "would be to let the District govern itself and come to Congress only for important legislation."

8 Tentatively Approved for Court Vacancy

Eight Washington lawyers have been tentatively chosen for indorsement of the District Bar Association for appointment to the District Court vacancy left by retirement of Justice Peyton Gordon.

The eight men are tentatively listed by the association's committee on judicial selection and will be reported to the bar's board of directors, which meets Friday, and to the general meeting of the association at the Mayflower next Monday night.

Before final recommendation is given, the approved list may be increased or diminished by the selection committee, the directors or the association general meeting.

Jo V. Morgan, who is the District's one-man Board of Tax Appeals.

Lawrence Koenigsberger, veteran Washington lawyer, who has served on many of the bar's important committees, including those named to assist the courts here to draft new rules.

Sefton Darr, former president of the bar association, who sponsored the establishment of the Small Claims Court and fought for other reforms in the Municipal Court.

Henry Schweinhaut, special Assistant Attorney General.

George Barse, Treasury Department attorney.

Bar Library Must Open To Negroes

Jackson Orders Lifting of Ban; Women Lawyers Get Privileges, Too

Attorney General Robert H. Jackson took the occasion of Lincoln's birthday to announce yesterday that the District Bar Association must end by April 1 its ban against colored attorneys using the association's library. The decision similarly opens the library to women lawyers.

The Attorney General, who has supervision over the District Courthouse, in which the bar library is housed, acted after a compromise plan offering use of separate rooms for colored and women attorneys was turned down by the Bar Association last December.

The ruling, communicated to Francis W. Hill, president of the District Bar Association, declared that "on and after April 1, if any space in the Federal Court Building be occupied by any members of the bar or any association of the bar, the space and its facilities shall be made available to all members of the bar in good standing without discrimination on account of race, color, religion, or sex." Hill said he had no comment last night.

Colored attorneys have long sought to break the library ban. The latest effort was undertaken last year when Huber I. Brown, a colored lawyer, filed a formal complaint that the exclusion was incompatible with the proscriptions against discrimination contained in the Constitution.

Brown sued the Bar Association, which asked the Attorney General to become the defendant in the suit since he had control over the building. Jackson declined "because technical defenses to Mr. Brown's complaint, whether good in law or not, do not justify me in perpetuating a denial of equal privileges in a Federal Court Building."

The Attorney General's office then worked out a compromise plan which was adopted unanimously by the Bar Association's board of directors, but turned down by the membership after heated debate.

Masons Honor Lincoln's Memory

Representative Melvin J. Maas, of Minnesota, Gen. John W. Greeley and Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, chief of the District National Guard, addressed more than 200 persons last night at an all-Masonic Lincoln's Birthday celebration at the Masonic Temple.

Harmony Lodge of Masons was the host at the ceremonies.

Miss Hayes, Mr. Evans Set an All-Time Record

'Twelfth Night' Today Exceeds Previous Runs; Another Refugee Film Is on Its Way; This, That and the Other About the Theater

HISTORY WILL BE MADE at the St. James Theater, in New York, this afternoon. The Theater Guild-Gilbert Miller production of Will Shakespeare's comedy of "Twelfth Night" will reach its hundredth performance, with Helen Hayes as Viola and Maurice Evans as Malvolio.

BELL

Never in the three-and-one-half centuries since the comedy was written, so Joseph Heidt, of the Theater Guild, reminds us, has any production of "Twelfth Night" matched the enviable record that will be set at the St. James today. Peg Woffington, Charles Macklin, John Henderson, Ellen Tree, Ben Webster, Mrs. Scott-Siddons, Adelaide Neilson, Charles Fisher, Mme. Modjeska, Henry Irving, Ellen Terry, Viola Allen, E. H. Sothern, Julia Marlowe, Ben Greet, Annie Russell, Phyllis Neilson-Terry and Jane Cowl are among the distinguished players who have appeared in this holiday revel, but none has equaled the success of Miss Hayes and Mr. Evans.

When the comedy closes at the St. James on Saturday night, March 8, it will have been performed 129 times. It then takes to the Guild's subscription cities, where it is expected to run until mid-June, with a total count of 269 consecutive performances that may never be equaled—in this century, at least.

To bolster again the hopes of the Capital's faithful, Washington is high on the list of the cities outside New York in which "Twelfth Night" will be seen.

In all other respects, the National Capital is not quite so fortunate. The concert tour Allan Jones has been making since the completion of his film role opposite Suzanne Foster in Paramount's "The Hard-Boiled Canary," and which was to have included this city until the flu laid Mr. Jones low in Hershey, Pa., was resumed Monday in Newark, N. J., and will be continued through some Southern dates leading up to a week's rest in New York before Allan takes the air in a radio version of "Canary." Well, we can't have everything.

With "So Ends Our Night," the first of the refugee pictures to reach the screen, there is another one coming up. Olivia de Havilland, Paulette Goddard and Charles Boyer have been signed for the stellar roles in Paramount's forthcoming "Hold Back the Dawn"—which seems a slightly confusing "sequel" to "So Ends Our Night." Based on the best-seller about war refugees, by Ketti Frings, "Hold Back the Dawn" boasts a script by Charles Brackett and Billy Wilder, authors of "Ninotchka" and "Arise My Love." Recommendation enough.

Ed Rowen, who is to play the role of the Stage Manager in the Falls Church Community Theater's production of "Our Town" on Friday and Saturday nights, should know his role inside-out after his conferences with Thornton Wilder this week. Author Wilder has been working at the Library of Congress for several days. He sails soon for South America. Mr. Rowen, high in command of the Federal arts work here, met him through Librarian of Congress MacLeish and acquired first-hand impressions of every salient point in the Pulitzer Prize play. Rare privilege.

Father Hartke, of the speech and drama department of Catholic University, calls up to say that a title finally has been chosen for the forthcoming musical biography based on the life of that eminent clown, Joe Cook. The name chosen is "Cook Book," which is practically perfect picking.

Too many Cooks never spoiled any broth, if all their names were Joe!

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, Feb. 12 (INS).—The most touching and best human interest story of the week is the rush airplane flight made by Laddie, an ageing airedale to his young master, Private Everett Scott, at Camp Ord. The 10-year-old dog had grieved so deeply for his pal that practically at death's door they flew him from Kansas City to San Francisco by TWA. But that is only half the story. Listen to this:

PARSONS

If Laddie recuperates, and today the veterinary said he is improving, he will become a movie star at Universal in the next Dick Arlen-Andy Devine picture, "Mutiny in the Arctic." Ben Pivar, the producer, is flying to Camp Ord tomorrow to see if Laddie will pull through.

If I were a betting woman, I'd say that if Paramount gives Bob Hope the proper vehicles, come next academy voting time, he will be in the running. He is so loved by the fans, who adore his nonsense, that great care should be taken in the selection of his vehicles. Buddy de Sylva, who has promised to see that Bob gets the breaks, has selected a remake of George Ade's comedy, "Back Home and Broke," for Bob. I

Amazing what one year has done for Walter Wanger. Last year he didn't have one picture that merited consideration from the Academy and within 12 months he has become a top producer with two films in the running, "Foreign Correspondent" and "Long Voyage Home." Mary Pickford, his coproducer at U. A., couldn't be more thrilled over his success than if two of her pictures were up and she's urging Walter to make more films.

Snapshots of Hollywood at random: Eight curtain calls for Ruth Chatterton at "Pygmalion" made all of those who love her very happy. Later at the Richard Barthelmesses with her leading man, Barry Thompson; her mother, Mrs. Tillie Chatterton and all of her old friends, we talked until the wee sma' hours. I sat at dinner with Mary Pickford and Buddy Rogers after playing five games of backgammon with Buddy, who is a champ; Sylvia Fairbanks with the Charles Feldmans, Richard Gully, Mary Astor and Manuel Del Campo, Dorothy Parker and Alan Campbell, Auriole Lee were at the Barthelmess party and John van Druten, famed author, old friend of Ruth's, was there personally to congratulate her.

Saw Betty Compson looking breathtakingly beautiful at the theater, the Joe E. Browns, all of whom actually cheered Ruth, who, for my money, is better than Wendy Hiller was in the movie version.

That's all for today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, Feb. 12.

In "Back Street" Margaret Sullavan not only gives the best performance of the year but one of the best I've ever seen. And Charles Boyer, in spite of playing a heel, wins your sympathy with his charm, which is 22 karat. He doesn't try to soften the character, but plays it to the hilt.

HOPPER

If this is Bruce Manning's first production it's lucky for Universal that they graduated him from the writing class to producer—because if anything goes wrong with a story he'll know how to fix it.

I'm glad Deanna Durbin and Vaughn Paul have chosen to have a church wedding. If you'll go back over those held together by benefit of clergy instead of justice of the peace you'll find there have been fewer divorces among them.

Let's take a peek; Rod La Rocque and Vilma Banky, Jeanette MacDonald and Gene Raymond, Lloyd and Mel Nolan, Bill and Mary Gargan, Brian and Marjorie Donlevy, the Bing Crosbys, the Phil Regans, Maureen O'Sullivan and Johnny Farrow, Jean Arthur and Frank Ross, the Regis Toomeys, the Roy Rogers, Frances Dee and Joel McCrea are among our happily married. The church gives deep meaning to marriage vows.

Salvador Dali, the surrealist painter, was given a party at the Beachcomber last week by Harpo Marx, and was charmed at the colorful food, which he thought was specially ordered to fit in with his mood. He doesn't know that's the way they always serve it. In trying to explain his extraordinary painting, he blamed it on his memory, which he claims goes back before birth. He once did a picture script in drawings for the Marx boys, and Harpo now has it framed.

When the European war started Metro did less wailing than any other studio about the loss of foreign profits. And with some of our big studios going in the red it's gratifying that Metro's faith in the American public is paying a $2.50 dividend. With the exception of one year during our lush period, 1940 was the most profitable in Metro's history—which shoots the foreign market theory as full of holes as a Swiss cheese!

Shirley Temple isn't No. 1 at the box office now, but she is at the Westlake School, so the house mother told me the other day. When Shirley entered last year the girls were called together, told not to ask for autographs, but just to treat her like any other girl. So they left her strictly alone—but not for long, because Shirley's complete naturalness won them over.

'Twould be almost worth a trip to New York to see Katharine Cornell and Raymond Massey in "The Doctor's Dilemma," but I can't imagine them doing a greater job than Lunt and Fontanne did some years back.

Palace

Hardly less could be expected of one of the sprightliest and most skillfully executed marital comedies of the year than that it should be continued a second week on a Washington screen. That is the kind of picture "The Philadelphia Story" is and that is the decree that has been expressed in its favor by overflow crowds throughout the first chapter of its run at Loew's Palace Theater.

Adapted with rare fidelity and acumen by Donald Ogden Stewart from the stage play by Philip Barry, "The Philadelphia Story" has been given the added benefits of stellar casting and superb production by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer, who had the fine discernment to nullify all of the recent celluloid calumnies heaped upon her by continuing Katharine Hepburn in the role that brought her such distinction on the stage. As her costellar leading men, Miss Hepburn has Cary Grant and James Stewart, with John Howard, Ruth Hussey, Roland Young, Mary Nash, John Halliday and Virginia Weidler bringing high qualities of humor and dramatic suspense to their supporting roles.

The story of the projected second marriage of a chill and snooty "Mainliner" and the manner of its interruption by her renegade first husband—with the aid of two bewildered "keyhole" magazine reporters—is a shimmering and gossamer fable, not without its moments of serious plumbings into human nature and what makes some inexplicable people the way they are. It is adult, literate, hilariously amusing and occasionally genuinely exciting.

The supplementary features of the Palace bill, including Pete Smith's provocative "Nostradamus" short reel, are being carried over with the highly spiced major attraction.

'Night Train' Streaks Onto Little Screen

By Richard L. Coe

"NIGHT TRAIN." 20th-Century Fox-G. B. picturization of a screen play by Sidney Gilliat and Frank Launder, starring Margaret Lockwood and Rex Harrison with Paul von Henreid, Basil Radford, Naunton Wayne, James Harcourt, Felix Aylmer, Wyntham Goldie, Roland Culver, Eliot Makeham, Raymond Huntley, Austen Trevor, Kenneth Kent, C. V. France, Fritz Feld and Marland Graham. Directed by Carol Reed. Maurice Ostrer in charge of production. Previewed Monday afternoon. At the Little Theater.

"Night Train" is a film no lover of melodrama, suspense or Winston Churchill should miss. Its crackling excitement has finally arrived at the Little after smacking startled New York film critics right in the middle of their "Ten Best" lists.

Nearest things you'll know that are like "Night Train" are those four zooming pictures directed by mystery master Alfred Hitchcock: "The Man Who Knew Too Much," "Secret Agent," "The Girl Was Young" and, especially, "The Lady Vanishes." Now in Hollywood, Hitchcock had nothing to do with "Night Train," but in the expert direction of Carol Reed, his "suspense" influence is evident.

International espionage is again the subject of our English dreamers and the tale they have conjured up has England and Germany battling for the services of a brilliant Czech inventor. The Nazis have the power and lots of blunderbuss (whatever that is, but it has a proper sound) and the British have the wit. Scotland Yard gets its man.

Those Cricketeers Again

With soft-eyed Margaret Lockwood to play the inventor's daughter and suave, sleek Rex Harrison, of "Storm Over Patsy" and "The Citadel," to befuddle the Nazi secret service, Director Reed gets smart help for his twisting narrative. And who should pop up as the true heroes of the piece but those gallant cricketeers of "The Lady Vanishes," Basil Radford and Naunton Wayne. Remember them? This time they're in no end of a bother because the war has found some priceless golf clubs out of their reach in Berlin, but it isn't until a Nazi officer assaults their pride that they contribute the information that fits the puzzle together.

Outside of the suspense that's bound to make the manicurist industry a major one while 'Night Train" is around, there is wry treatment of the somber Prussians that's loaded with laughs.

Our man from Scotland Yard gains entry to the Berlin Naval Headquarters because a minor clerk has forgotten his identity card (yes, they have them there, too!) Says the clerk: "A FINE country this is to live in." Asks a superior officer: "What was that you said?" Replies the clerk: "A fine COUNTRY this is to live in." Says the Nazi superior officer, to himself: "A bloody awful country this is to live in."

Then there's Harrison plugging corny songs on the Brighton boardwalk; there's the cricket duo confronted with two books at a German railway bookstall: "Gone With the Wind" and "Mein Kampf" and our friend picks "Mein Kampf;" there is a bedroom sequence without which no self-respecting comedy ever appears these merry days.

All of this ties up neatly at the border of Switzerland and Naziland, where our friends meet a funicular carriage that would give pause to the Lone Ranger. What would that staunch fellow do hanging by one hand to a stalled trolley suspended over a 6,000 feet drop? More to the point, what would you do?

There's no doubt about it, you'll have a smacking lot of excitement on "Night Train," thanks to Director Reed, his script-writers and a top-notch cast.

Rough Westerns Alarm Patricia

As the result of two accidents on "The Roundup," Harry Sherman production manager for Paramount in which Richard Dix and Preston Foster, with whom she costars, were injured, Patricia Morison has asked studio executives not to cast her in any more Western pictures.

Miss Morison was standing within a few feet of Dix recently when the star was accidentally shot in the face during a barroom brawl scene, and all but faited when she saw blood spurting from wounds in his cheek.

"We've simply reversed it."

GEORGE BERNARD SHAW entered into a discussion with some of his colleagues about the capabilities of Adolf Hitler . . . "I firmly believe," said one of them, "that Hitler is a great man." . . . "Why? Because he ruled that mixed marriages shall be prohibited?" Shaw protested. "He'd be even a greater man—if he had ruled that only mixed marriages shall be permitted."

RKO-Keith's

With "Back Street" entering its second week, RKO-Keith's continues the ruminations on which it embarked with the five-week run of "Kitty Foyle." Should the "other woman" of a man's life be content with the questionable corner of his life or should she simply forget the whole thing?

You may remember that Kitty Foyle took the realistic approach. It was tough sledding, to be sure, for Kitty to toss over Wyn in favor of a man she could have to herself, but she did it. In "Back Street" Fannie Hurst told what occurred when the lady decides a stolen slice is better than even a half loaf: it's wonderful when he's around the house, tough when the neighbors talk and awful when you're all alone.

It is this latter, 1925, approach that Margaret Sullavan and Charles Boyer currently are expounding at Keith's. It's romantic and full of suffering and more than just a whit old hat. It lacks the healthy logic which Mr. Morley's forthright Kitty followed to her ultimate happiness. Despite its slick production, "Back Street" has a lavender-and-old-lace atmosphere that must make brave Kitty glad she tossed aside her likeable, selfish lover.

For all that, "Back Street" has box-office plus: the ever-sincere Miss Sullavan, the charming Boyer, a scrupulously detailed production and the sorrows so attractive to lady cinema-goers. That it all adds up to a rather chilly warm-over of the picture Irene Dunn and John Boles made so memorable back in 1932 lies in the simple fact that the world moves on despite Universal's glossy sheen.

Also on the Keith screen is a Donald Duck adventure, "Timber" and a new "Information Please" release, with actress Ruth Gordon as the guest of Messrs, Fadiman, Adams, Kiernan and Levant.

1,000 Camp Leaders Meet Here Today

More than 1,000 camp leaders from every State in the Nation will meet today at the eighteenth annual convention of the American Camping Association opening in the Wardman Park Hotel.

Around the theme of "Americans Out of Doors," the delegates will hold forum discussions and hear speakers on camp leadership and the importance of camping in national defense.

Miss Katherine Lenroot, chief of the Children's Bureau, will address the opening session of the convention at 2 p. m. on "The Fundamentals of the American Way of Life and Their Relation to Camping."

Dr. Alfred E. Stearns, headmaster emeritus of Philips Academy, Andover, Mass., will speak on "Camping and a War-torn World" at the same meeting.

The possibility of work camps for youth and compulsory camping for younger children as an impetus to national health will be taken up at forum discussions during the three-day convention.

Organizations represented will include the Boy Scouts of America; Girl Scouts, Inc.; the National Association of Jewish Center Workers' camp committee, private camps, and several Government bureaus.

The annual banquet will be held Saturday at the Wardman Park.

Loans to Poland, Spain Are Being Repaid, Jones Says

The Export-Import Bank Loan to Poland is still a good one, Federal Loan Administrator Jesse H. Jones declared yesterday. So also, he said, is the loan to Spain. Repayments are being made regularly on both, he stated.

The question arose at a press conference in which Jones declared that the bank had suffered no losses. The amount outstanding on the Polish loan, made before the war, is about $2,800,000. The Polish refugee government in London has authorized payment of interest out of Polish funds in this country.

The loan to Spain, made in 1939, is outstanding in the amount of about $13,000,000.

Since its creation, seven years ago, the bank has authorized a total of $666,000,000 in loans, Jones said. Of this, $154,000,000 were canceled or not exercised, leaving $512,000,000 in active loans. About $240,000,000 of this amount has been disbursed, leaving $272,000,000 in live commitments.

Opportunity House Fund Teams to Report

Representative C. Jasper Bell, of Missouri, and the Rev. Peter Marshall, pastor of the New York Presbyterian Church, will be guest speakers at the report dinner of Opportunity House to be held at 6:30 p. m. tomorrow at the House, 78 I Street Northwest.

Arthur Clarendon Smith, chairman of the campaign committee, announced yesterday that all team members and captains should be present to report on progress of the $5,000 fund campaign.

To Teach in Hawaii

Richard Pattee, senior divisional assistant in the Department of State's division of cultural relations and lecturer at Catholic University, will teach in the coming summer session at the University of Hawaii, it was announced yesterday. He will offer courses in Hispanic American history.

Man, 62, Leaves to See World; Friends Worry

Last March John G. Scherb, 62, left his home at 1719 North Nelson Street, Arlington, Va., to "see the world." His friends and relatives have heard from him only infrequently since, and now they are anxious to learn of his whereabouts.

His sister, Miss Tilly Scherb, is seriously ill in Georgetown Hospital and wants to see him. The last word friends have received came from Cornice, Me., where he "passed through" June 18, 1940. Scherb had previously announced intentions of striking out for the Northwest. He is hiking. When he left he was carrying only a small brown knapsack.

Shorter Skirts in England

London, Feb. 12 (AP).—Skirts are going higher in England this spring.

"And if material becomes scarcer and scarcer due to the war, dresses may become even shorter," Digby Morton, London designer, who announced that spring lengths will average 18 inches above ground, said.

(New York style experts said the average for smartly dressed American women was 16 to 17 inches.)

PORTER'S CAP GALLOPING TO WIRE WITH BULL REIGH SECOND. COPPERMAN OUTLASTED WELCOME PASS (LEFT) FOR THIRD POSITION. A FIELD OF 15 COMPETED

Howard Ace Triumphs by Four Lengths

Bull Reigh Second To 'Bargain' Horse As 30,000 Watch; Copperman Third

(Chart of Santa Anita Derby on Page 24.)

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 12.—Charles S. Howard, the Midas of the turf world, did it again.

The San Francisco sportsman, who touches a horse and makes it turn into gold, sent his favored Porter's Cap postward and saw it come home on schedule to capture the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby and earn another pot of cash for the overflowing Howard coffers.

A roaring throng of more than 30,000 watched the crack Kentucky-bred Porter's Cap soundly whip a brilliant array of 15 fellow 3-year-olds in the classic derby of the West and win the mile and one-eighth grind by four lengths.

Bull Reigh, running under the silks of Mrs. Anthony Pelleteri, of New Orleans, was second. Copperman, owned by Hugh S. Nesbitt, of Los Angeles, ran third in a photo-finish with a long-shot hope. William E. Boeing's maiden, Welcome Pass.

Sunshine of the morning gave way to overcast skies by post time for this seventh running of the Santa Anita Derby, and a dreary haze hung over the vast, flower-splotched infield as the field went to the post just beyond the grandstand.

Madigama in Front

Madigama, from the Brandywine Stable of Delaware, jumped into a quick lead, with Bull Reigh, Transfigure and Alfred C. Vanderbilt's Good Turn close behind as the closely bunched pack thundered around the clubhouse turn.

Jockey Buddy Haas held Porter's Cap in the fifth spot until they hit the backstretch. Then he begna to move up on the flying leaders.

At the far turn, Basil James had taken Bull Reigh into a neck lead, and Porter's Cap was closing in fast with Madigama fading back and Valdina Groom, from Emerson Woodward's Texas ranch, making a threat for contention.

Pounding into the stretch, Haas and the strapping chestnut son of the Porter, churning up the turf on a track labeled heavy, increased their lead and were never threatened from then until they flashed under the finish wire, four full lengths to the good over Bull Reigh. Bull Reigh managed to hang on to the place position, but Copperman, an ignored candidate coupled with his stablemate, Staretor, and Welcome Pass flew up from nowhere and battled it out to the finish. The camera gave it to Copperman, ridden by veteran Charlie Corbett.

$44,975 to Winner

Victory for Porter's Cap and Owner Howard, who has won a fortune with his famed Seabiscuit, Kayak II and 4-year-old Mioland, was worth $44,975. Bull Reigh won $10,000, Copperman $5,000 and Welcome Pass $2,500.

Porter's Cap, the betting favorite, paid $5.20, $4, and $3.20; Bull Reigh, $6.40 and $5.20, and Copperman $12.20. Time for the winner was 1:54 2-5.

The betting handle for the race was $209,456, compared with the $178,424 bet on the derby last year. The public planked $62,056 down on Porter's Cap.

Finishing in order behind the first four were Valdina Groom, Swain, Fairymant, Pirate, Staretor, Transfigure, Armistice, Buckhorn Creek, Nasca, Good Turn, Madigama and Havana Lad.

Howard to Send Porter's Cap After Kentucky Derby

By the Associated Press

Los Angeles, Feb. 12 (AP).—Charles S. Howard has his sights set on the Kentucky Derby.

His favored Porter's Cap won the $50,000 Santa Anita Derby with ease today, and his rider, Jockey Leon (Buddy) Haas, asked how the colt might have gone on had the race been at 1¼ miles, the Kentucky Derby distance, grinned.

"Well, we're going into the Kentucky Derby."

Continuing, he said, "I knew we had the race won on the backstretch. Porter's Cap won with plenty in reserve."

Basil James, who rode the runner-up, Bull Reigh, said only, "The other horse was just too good."

Porter's Cap is eligible for the $100,000 Santa Anita Handicap March 1, but Howard has intimated the colt may be held back for the big 3-year-old events in the East.

Lead Changes 13 Times as 2,500 Watch

Geibel, Bornheimer And Schmidli Star; Hilltop Leads, 28-27, At Half of Battle

By Jack Munhall.

In a pulse-stirring exhibition of basketball at its finest, in which the lead changed hands 13 times, Georgetown University last night entered a strong bid for an invitation in the New York Sportswriters Invitation Championship by defeating Temple, 57 to 49, at Riverside Stadium.

Some 2,500 fans were witnesses to one of the best games here in recent years as Georgetown fought back four times in the first half to tie the score and then launched a typical Hoya finish to clinch the victory in the last ten minutes.

Not until 11 minutes remained to be played was either team able to grasp an advantage of more than three points. Then Georgetown, with big Jim Geibel, a local boy, and Bill Bornheimer, the sophomore sensation, leading way shot ahead, 45 to 40, and was increasing its margin steadily as the final whistle sounded.

Fourteenth Hoya Victory

In scoring their fourteenth victory in 16 starts and insuring their District leadership against George Washington's rampaging Colonials, the Hoyas once again proved their ability to win the close ones, and once again they looked to Charley Schmidli to provide the spark.

For during the later portion of the first half and the early crucial minutes of the closing 20 minutes it was Schmidli, registering nine straight points, who kept Georgetown in the game, until his mates could pick up the scoring trend.

This, the Hilltop's second triumph of the campaign over the lofty, unpredictable Temple squad, was perhaps its most arduously achieved. Misleading was the final Georgetown victory margin of nine points, for until the last ten minutes it was anybody's game and Temple, largely through the sharpshooting of Angelo Musi, a little forward who tied with Schmidli as high scorer for the evening with 18 points, seemed able to match the locals basket for basket.

Schmidli Starts Rally

Schmidli, whose field goal simultaneously with the gun ending the first half put Georgetown ahead, 28-27, was the same loose-jointed character who in the second half lofted the basket that started Georgetown on the swift rally which turned the struggle into a decisive and convincing success for Elmer Ripley's boys.

After young Charley had made the score Georgetown. 45; Temple,

Tom Goodwin, Mrs. Davy Lose in Florida

By the Associated Press

Palm Beach, Fla., Feb. 12.—National Champion Dick Chapman and Mrs. E. G. Schaefer, of Philadelphia, formed a winning combination today as they advanced to the semifinals of the Everglades Club Mixed Foursomes Golf Tournament.

Their victims, 7 and 6, were Mrs. Myron Davy, of Washington, and Tommy Goodwin, of New York, frequent winner of events here.

Mrs. Schaefer and Chapman were only one over par for the 12 holes they needed to conquer. Mrs. Schaefer, praised by Chapman for her fine shots, put on the clincher with a 30-foot uphill putt for a deuce on the twelfth.

An astounding comeback by a husband and wife team knocked Elizabeth Hicks, of Pasadena, Calif., and Hugh L. Willoughby 3d, of Port Sewell, Fla., out of the running.

Two down with three to go, Mr. and Mrs. Briggs S. Cunningham, of Greens Farms, Conn., won three holes in a row and the match, 1 up.

Tomorrow's semifinal opponents for the Schaefer-Chapman duo will be Dorothy Gardner, of Steubenville, Ohio, and R. H. Lansdell, of Hackensack, N. J., who scored 3 and 2, today over Mrs. A. C. Critchely and Jesse Mason, of Palm Beach.

Grace Amory and T. Dennis Boardman, of Palm Beach, won, 3 and 2, over Mrs. William Hockenjos, jr., of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., and William B. Langford, of Chicago, thus winning a semifinal berth against Mr. and Mrs. Cunningham.

Jack Johnson To Help Simon Train for Louis

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 12.—Jimmy Johnston, manager of Heavyweight Abe Simon, announced today he has hired Jack Johnson, the former Negro heavyweight champion, to work with Simon in preparation for his title fight with Joe Louis in Detroit March 21.

"Jack was regarded as one of the greatest boxers who ever lived," Jimmy explained. "Simon is one of the biggest. Jack's idea is to change Abe's stance so that he can get more of his tremendous heft behind his punches."

Eagle Rally Fails, Baltimore Wins, 5-3

Special Dispatch to The Post

Baltimore, Md., Feb. 12.—Fighting back desperately through a blue haze of smoke and against heartbreaking odds, Revers Mackenzie's courageous Washington Eagles looked the part of champions despite a 5-to-3 fall before the inspired Baltimore Orioles at Iceland Palace tonight.

The Orioles, by virtue of their victory, regained the Eastern Hockey League lead, but not until some 3,300 spectators had all but collapsed from heart failure as the Eagles, rallying desperately in the last period, all but pulled the game out of the fire.

The Eagles were trailing woefully at the start of the third period, 4 to 0, when they suddenly broke loose.

McBride Starts Rally

Roy McBride started it at 4:13 when he took a double pass from Len Burrage and Germann and sent the puck flying past Ceryance.

While Baltimore fans blinked unbelievedly, Russ Rossignol skated in swiftly, raked in assists from Burrage and Germann and made it 2-4 exactly 30 seconds later.

The fans, many of them Washingtonians, were in an uproar when Rossignol tallied, unassisted, at 10:41.

Washington barely missed deadlocking it at 15:00 when Ceryance made saves on shots by Rossignol and McBride.

The Eagles pulled Colvin out of the net with 15 seconds to go and substituted a winger, whereupon Grigor scored on a pass from Vitarelli to assure victory.

The Orioles attacked menacingly from the opening face off and only several heroic saves by Goalie Lee Colvin saved scoring. At 4 minutes flat Kowalski jammed his way into a wild flurry of arms and legs, took the puck on the rebound and counted, unassisted, over Colvin's prostrate body.

Eagles Hit Stride

Several near fights resulted as players of both teams mixed it merrily. Baltimore's Ned Vitarelli and Washington's Frank Mailley both were sentenced to 2 minutes each after one exchange.

The Orioles remained on defense most of the way.

The Eagles appeared to hit their stride in the opening moments of the second period, but George Grigor brought the fans to their feet at 10:06 when he took a pass from Riley and shot the puck past Colvin, who continued to play sensational hockey.

Exactly 42 seconds later the Orioles again turned on the red

Charley Keller Placed in 3A Draft Class

By the Associated Press

Frederick, Md., Feb. 12.—Draft Board No. 1 announced tonight that Charlie Keller, New York Yankee outfielder who lives here, has received a selective service classification of 3A.

This rating makes it almost certain that Keller, who is married and has two children, will not be called for military service during the next six months, it was said.

Brown Picks Stahley for Grid Coach

By the Associated Press

Providence, R. I., Feb. 12.—The wholesale shakeup in the ranks of New England's "Ivy League" football coaching circles appeared almost completed today when J. Neil (Skip) Stahley, chief assistant to Dick Harlow at Harvard for the last six years, was appointed head coach at Brown University.

While naming Stahley as successor to "Tuss" McLaughry, who moved on to Dartmouth after directing the Bruins' football for 16 years, Athletic Director Thomas W. Taylor declined to divulge the length or terms of the contract he signed. Stahley is only the ninth professional football coach Brown has engaged in 51 years.

Since the 1940 season closed, "Spike" Nelson has replaced "Ducky" Pond at Yale, McLaughry has succeeded Army's Earl (Red) Blaik at Dartmouth, Wes Fesler has left Harvard to become head coach at Wesleyan, and two Brown assistant coaches have moved on, Earl Brown to Harvard and George (Eck) Allen to the University of Maine.

Stahley, a 32-year-old 200-pounder, has spent all but one of his 11 coaching years under Har-

Two Yachts Close in Race For Nassau

By the Associated Press

Aboard Coast Guard Cutter Mojave, Feb. 12.—Henry G. Fownes' big yawl Escapade and Robert W. Johnson's speedy Good News maneuvered for the lead tonight as the Miami to Nassau racing fleet turned into the homestretch.

After bucking headwinds and rain squalls in a choppy sea for more than two-thirds of the 184-mile route, the sailing vessels began a broad reach toward the finish line. For the first time, the craft, having turned southward, were favored by a brisk wind that had slowed the race considerably in comparison with previous years.

Harry E. Noyes' Tioga made the run in the record time of 19 hours 36 minutes 30 seconds last year, but the current race had been under way for 30 hours at 6 p. m. today.

Escapade, the 72-foot scratch boat, led from the start, but Good News had almost overtaken her as the yachts rounded Great Stirrup Cay, end of the second leg.

Six others were strung out behind, among them William H. Labrot's Stormy Weather, four-time winner of the bluewater classic.

Most of the yachts passed Great Isaac Light about last midnight but three entrants—Walter T. Colquitt's Blue Heron, Dudley Sharp's Gulf Stream and the West Indian, owned by Palmer H. Langdon and Robert F. Vaughan—did not round that marker until morning.

In between were Stormy, E. S. Bradford, jr.'s Belisarius, and Gordon Mendelssohn's Quartermore.

Violets Capture Indoor Meet

New York, Feb. 12 (U.P.).—Paced by the winning efforts of Leslie MacMitchell, their great miler, and Harold Bogrow, a senior middle-distance runner, who previously had languished in the obscurity of relay competition, New York University, I. C. 4-A indoor titleholder, captured the Metropolitan Intercollegiate Indoor Track and Field Championship before 5,000 tonight in the New York Coliseum.

The Violets, winning 5 of 13 events, piled up 49 points, to lead Columbia by 5 points. Fordham was third, with 38; Manhattan, fourth, with 25½; St. John's, fifth, with 20; City College, sixth, with 9½ and St. Francis, seventh, with 9.

Spaniel Best of 13 Dogs in Show

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 12.—My Own Brucie, the defending champion, qualified for the final round in defense of his Westminister Kennel Club laurels tonight when he was chosen best of the 13-dog sporting group.

The coal-black cocker spaniel won out in a contest that called for all of William Smalley's judging ability. The Plainfield, N. J., connoisseur obviously was torn between Brucie and the handsome, graceful English setter, Ch. Maro of Maridor from Prune's own kennels, Tuxedo Park, N. Y.

Maro, brother of Daro of Maridor, best-in-show in 1938, took second place. Third went to the Irish setter, Tyrone Farm Moldy O'Day from the kennels of W. S. Kennedy, Walled Lake, Mich., and fourth to the golden retriever, Ch. Frieda, owned by Mrs. A. W. Smith, of Ipswich, Mass.

The sensational Kerry Blue terrier, Buskin of Kenmare, competing in his second show and first Westminster, was judged best in his group by William R. Proctor, of New York. Owned by James M. Austin, of Old Westbury, N. Y., Buskin won the Associated Terrier Clubs show last Sunday and thus qualified for the Garden competition.

The 1½-year-old dog led a list of 19 terriers. The airedale champion, Castiron Monarch, owned by Hinson Stiles, of New York, took second; third went to the West Highland white champion, Wolvey Pattern of Edgerstoune, whose owner is Mrs. John J. Winant, wife of the new Ambassador to Britain, and fourth to Ch. Lady Rowena of Rowenoakes, a Bedlington owned by Mr. and Mrs. C. R. Harbauer, of Houghton Lake, Mich.

Two Welsh terriers owned by Harold M. Florshein, of Deerfield, Ill., won the first of the night's best-in-show prizes—for best brace—in competition against the winners in the five other groups. Both were champions—Pennhill Perfect of Harham and Towie Thargelia.

A beautifully matched foursome of Shetland sheepdogs then was named best team, repeaters for their owner, Elizabeth D. Whelen, of Fairview Village, Pa.

August Dog Show Honors 'Hero Mutt'

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—The Westminster Kennel Club's sixty-fifth annual dog show, complete with experts and spectators, took time out from judging thoroughbred dogs tonight to honor the "hero dog of the year," a mutt named Tim.

Tim, wandering through downtown New York one day, nosed into a pile of rubble where a condemned building had collapsed. Tim's curiosity drew that of passersby who also dug into the rubble and found there an 11-year-old boy, still alive, and judging by his appearance at Madison Square Garden tonight, still hale and hearty in spite of his adventure.

With Lowell Thomas presiding, the boy, the dog and his owner all were presented to the crowd, and Tim received a handsome silver trophy.

By Walter Haight

Washington, D. C.

Dear Jake:

How's every little thing in lousy Florida, you lucky stiff?

Well, I got back O. K., but I just made it by the skin of my teeth. I didn't have to sell the spare tire as you predicted, but it was almost that bad. In fact, the last day I was only getting 100 miles on a hamburger. Talk about coincidences, I got home and found out that my bankroll, my wife's checking account and our furnace oil had all run out at the same time. My wife's patience had exhausted several days before and her stare made me so cold I thought I was back in the pressbox at Hialeah. Well, the open fireplace was blazing and I walked over and rubbed my hands near the flames.

HAIGHT

"Do you know what we are using to make that fire?" asked the little lady. I looked askingly, putting on my best hurt expression. She went on, "Well, those are bills you owe. They make a hot fire, but I'm glad you're home. Now we can put your wooden head on it." She reached for the poker. I ducked. But I guess my head would have burned just as well with some knots on it. I would like to say that my wife and the car motor cooled off at the same time, but I had to use my No. 1 home defense move of "I've got to get to the office."

I headed for the door and bumped right into young Haight. My how that boy did grow while I was away! I thought for a moment that he might be acting under instructions from his mother, so I took no chances and assumed a Jim Corbett stance. My precaution was unnecessary, however. He greeted me with "Hi, Pop. I read your letters in the paper and you're a killer. How about letting me have two bucks?" You know, Jake, it would have been just the same if he had asked me for two oil wells.

I finally got outside only to meet my little girl. She was skating on one skate, a chip off the old block. She gave me a big hug and almost dropped the cup of sugar she was carrying. I asked her if skating with a cup of sugar was some kind of a new game and she said that mother had sent her across the street to borrow a cup of sugar. I asked her why she didn't go next door and she said that mother was saving the people on our side of the street for flour.

Well, I almost got away from her without feeling guilty, Jake. But I never felt as bad in my life as when she looked me straight in the eyes and asked, "Did you bring me a shark's tooth?" Somebody must have let her read that letter of mine about me hitting the shark in the mouth. I had to say something, Jake, so I answered, "You know I went back to that spot where I had that underwater battle with that shark and I just couldn't find a tooth on the bottom that wasn't broken."

She looked up at me proudly and said, "Gee, you're strong, Pop, to hit that shark in the mouth so hard you broke up all his teeth." I smiled it off and got half way down the block and then I heard her yell, "Hey, Pop. Wait a minute. I want to see the scars on your knuckles." She started after me on that one skate, but I outran her.

Well, Jake, I arrived in front of the office. I rubbed my face trying to make it look sunburned and took up several notches on my belt to try to look thin. I had my pencil in my hand in case some of the boys wanted me to autograph any of those letters that had been printed. For some reason I had to turn my head sideways in the revolving door. I decided on a pet phrase to use whenever anybody began praising my Florida letters. I was going to say, "Shucks, they weren't nothing."

Anyway, I got inside the door. The boys in the cashier's cage looked at me and without batting an eye one of them closed the safe and gave the handle a spin. I smiled at the girl behind the counter and she looked at me as if I had given her that punk permanent wave. I brushed them right out of my mind. They probably could read anyway. I was about to start up the steps when I received a tap on the shoulder. I turned and it was an elderly lady. "I know I'm a stranger, but I just had to stop you and talk to you," she said smilingly, "I read your stuff every morning and I want you to know how much I like it. Why if The Post ever stops it, I'm going to cancel my subscription."

Well, Jake, it looked for a minute as if I were going to have to get a ground crew to keep my head on. So I used my phrase that I had decided on and replied, rather nonchalantly, "Shucks, they weren't nothing." Then she said, "I knew a genius of your type would be bashful and retiring. I told my husband so when I left home." I came back, "Those certainly are kind words, lady. Please don't write any letters to the editor."

She opened her pocketbook, a good move because I thought she might give me a dime or something. However, she drew out a long newspaper clipping. I took my best holt on my pencil. I knew what was coming and it did. "Would you mind autographing this?" she asked, as she unfolded the clipping. Well, Jake, I autographed that piece of newspaper.

Here's something I want you to find out for me. Ask some of those big lawyers over in the clubhouse if I can be locked up for forgery for signing Jerry Siegel's name across one of his Superman cartoons.

Anxiously,
WASHINGTON HAIGHT.

Orleans Open's 'Angel' to Give Up Ghost Unless Public Pays

By the Associated Press

New Orleans, Feb. 12.—Golf's touring professionals trudged around the City Park course today warming up for the $5,000 New Orleans Open Tournament, an event which has traveled on "angels' wings" thus far but must fly henceforth on its own.

"If the people don't want it enough to support it, there will be no more tournaments," said Dr. Herbert H. Meyer, New Orleans dentist who is the 1941 "angel."

Meyer personally has guaranteed the purse and other expenses for the tournament to be held Friday through Sunday, after a pro-amateur event tomorrow.

Mayor Robert S. Maestri started the event in 1938, donating $5,000 prize money that year and $10,000 each of the following years to make the tournament one of the two richest stakes in American golf. Admission was free.

After last year's tournament, the mayor withdrew his sponsorship. He gave no reason for dropping from the golf meet picture, but the situation as it now stands has generally been attributed to Louisiana's political troubles.

Mayor Maestri insisted upon free galleries and the resulting crowds were said by professional golf officials to be the largest ever to witness golf tournaments. This year the spectators will pay to see the play. The money will go first to reimburse Dr. Meyer. Any excess will be given to a non-profit organization which he had formed to carry on the tournament after this year.

All the big names of golf's professional ranks have entered, and, like most golf tournaments, this one is labeled a wide-open affair. No one has won here twice. Pig Vic Ghezzi, who hasn't won here at all, has shot the best practice round, a 5-under-par 67 that tied the course record.

Dr. Earl B. Frank, retiring chairman of the board of directors at Kenwood, was honored last night at a dinner meeting at the club. Members of the board congratulated Dr. Frank on his valuable services to the club and mapped plans for the coming year.

George Washington Snaps Navy's Winning Streak, 39 to 29

Colonials' Second Half Drive Wins

Tars' 5-Game Winning Streak Ended; Zunic, Veltri Star for G. W.; Ebnet Knocked Out

By the Associated Press

Annapolis, Md., Feb. 12.—George Washington University snapped Navy's winning streak on the basketball court today, humbling the Middies, 39 to 29.

The Tars, who went into the fray with five straight victories, battled the Colonials on even terms in the first half but were unable to check the Washingtonians' final period splurge.

Mat Zunic and Lou Veltri, forward and guard, respectively, led the George Washington rally in the last half, Zunic sinking three field goals and a foul shot, and Veltri getting two double-deckers and two single-pointers.

Zunic was high scorer of the contest, garnering 11 points. He was trailed by Veltri, with 8. Dick Martin, center, paced the Middie shooters, accounting for seven markers.

The score was tied seven times in the initial period, with George Washington holding a slim 19-to-18 half-time advantage. Martin's under-the-basket toss put Navy in the lead, 20 to 19, one minute after the intermission, but from then on the Colonials took command to build up a 10-point margin as the final gun barked.

Navy's attack bogged down just as the first half closed when Jack Ebnet, Middie forward, ran into the post supporting the basket, knocking himself out. George Washington swept ahead shortly after he left the game.

The Midshipmen played without the services of Norman Ackley and "Moose" Smith, who was graduated, and Phil Gutting, new first string center, and John McTighe, his alternate, who were unable to see action. Gutting is out with a twisted ankle and McTighe is sick.

After George Washington took the lead in the second half and stretched their advantage to 25-20, Navy made a slight rally reducing the Washington lead to 2 points, 25-23. From there to the finish the visitors were too strong.

G. W., West Virginia Play Here Tonight

How to solve West Virginia University's sliding zone defense will be George Washington's big problem tonight when the Colonials entertain the Mountaineers at Riverside.

Aside from the zone defense, two additional barriers to a George Washington victory are vested in the persons of Rudy Baric and Jimmy Ruch, both of whom have made themselves familiar with opposition baskets. Ruch has accounted for 154 points in 12 games this season, while the 6 foot 3 inch Baric specializes in follow-up shots under the basket.

A victory tonight will be a big feather in George Washington's cap, since West Virginia numbers among its eight victims such teams as Penn State (35-29) Kentucky (56-43) and Michigan State (40-31).

Beaten by Pitt Tuesday night at Pittsburgh, the Mountaineers will be seeking to get back in the win column at the expense of the Colonials and would relish a win, if for no other reason than to get revenge for the 19-0 defeat the Colonials handed Bill Kern's football team this fall. But Coach Dyke Raese can depend on at least seven basketball players to go at top speed for the entire game.

Jack Sullivan Gets 5 Strikes Consecutively

Making five straight strikes and coming within two wobbling pins of getting eight in a row, Jack Sullivan, District court official, is believed to have set a record last night. Rolling on Henry Hiser's Bethesda alleys, Sullivan used only five balls to knock down 50 pins and finished with a game of 203. He was in action for the American Legion team in the Civic League.

The one-time North Carolina State football star had a set of 401. His remarkable game began with a spare, on which he made a nine count, the tenth pin shaking, but refusing to fall. In the third box he made the first of his row of strikes, sending his score to 57.

With each box he built up to 87, 117, 146 and 165. In the eighth box Sullivan again put the ball in the groove, but one pin failed to fall. He came back with his sixth strike of the game in the ninth box.

Brewers Play Celtics Sunday

Key men of the championship Celtic team when it represented Kingston, N. Y., two years ago will clash with their old mates Sunday night when the Washington Brewers entertain the colorful Kate Smiths in an American Basketball League game at Riverside Stadium, 8:45 o'clock.

Ben Kramer, who was released by the Kingston Celtics when they merged with Troy last season, and Nat Frankel, who jumped the team to join Detroit a year ago, both will be representing the Brewers, now are tied with the Celtics for the second half lead with three victories and one defeat.

Hughes to Meet Tough Opponent

HUCK HUGHES

Southwest Louisiana Boxers Will Present Veteran Welterweight

Catholic University's Huck Hughes, blond welterweight buzzsaw, has had tougher sledding this season than any member of Coach Eddie LaFond's Cardinal mitt squad, and the opponent drawn for Saturday night's meeting with Southwestern Louisiana Institute promises no exception to the rule.

In three meets held this season, the Annapolis, Md., lad, who learned his boxing at an early age from Navy's great coach, Spike Webb, has scored but one victory, dropping two decisions.

Against Lock Haven State Teachers College in the opening meet, Hughes exchanged blows with the Teachers' highly touted Bill Skerpon, captain and three letterman and only after three rough rounds was declared the winner. Against the U. S. Coast Guard, Huck drew Rufus Drury, the toughest member on the invading team and lost after three hard fought rounds. Last week Hughes bowed once again, dropping a three-round decision to Maryland's highly regarded Hotsey Alperstein.

Fights Sam Crow

This week Huck gets another tough row to hoe in meeting Sam Crow, Southwestern Louisiana's hard hitting welterweight banner carrier. Undefeated in three years of college competition, the Louisiana star has scored knockout victories in the three meets held this season. Crow has but one defeat chalked against his record, that coming last winter in the finals of the national intercollegiates, when he dropped a three-round decision to Wisconsin's national champ, Omar Krocker.

Hughes' opponent, however, happens to be but one of the many stars the Southerners will bring here with an eye toward halting C. U.'s 13 meet winning streak. All eight boys, comprising the invading team have competed in the national intercollegiates, five of them battling their way to the semifinal round.

G. U. Skaters Drilling for Temple Game

Georgetown University's ambitious hockey team, facing the toughest schedule of its short, three-year history, will take its final hard workout tonight at 6 p. m. at Uline Ice Arena for the season's opener Saturday night, at 8 p. m., with Temple University at Uline Ice Arena.

Under the direction of Coach Jim Roberts, a former Harvard hockey star of 1936, the Hoyas will face a seven-game slate including contests, besides Temple, with University of Pennsylvania, Lehigh, Baltimore Hockey Club, Franklin and Marshall and home-and-home tilts with Penn State All except the contests with Penn State at State College, Pa., and with Baltimore Hockey Club will be played here, at Uline Ice Arena.

In meeting the Owls Saturday, the Hoyas will be facing a team which has performed seven times this year and which has won three while losing four. Despite the fact that the Hoyas will be playing for the first time this year, six of the squad remain of the 12 original lads who organized Washington's first ice-hockey team three years ago and played five games in the persons of Art Feenan, a goalie; Frank Deegan and Vin Powers, defense, and Johnny Smith, Bill Edelen and Bill Deegan, wingmen. Coach Roberts is convinced that the Hoyas, once operating at full speed, will develop into a high scoring outfit.

Scheduled to start at 8 p. m., a general admission price of 55 cents will be charged which also permits spectators to join the public skating session which follows at no additional cost, Raoul LeMat, general manager, announced yesterday.

Bruins Win Over Chinese Five, 52-49

With 1,100 spectators rooting themselves hoarse for the diminutive Chinese Hong Wah Que quintet, the Washington Bruins, colored professional five, last night defeated their Oriental opponents, 52-48. It was the undefeated Bruins' eleventh victory.

With Martin "Baby Face" Pree and "Reds" Briscoe leading the way, the Bruins came to the half with a 25-19 lead. Then, to the misery of those who had spotted the Chinese' eight points, the Bruins cruised along, and a wee celestial forward, Lee Wah Quong, took the center of the stage.

The visitors' 12 points were added before the Bruins started to count again, and as the smoke cleared away, the Hong Wah Ques were out in front, 41-36.

Then Pree came back into the game, generaled his forces, and despite the heroic efforts of the Hon. Quong, the Bruins, in the last five minutes, picked up 16 points before the gong rang. Briscoe accounted for 14 Bruin points, while Quong was good for 20 for the Hong Wah Ques.

Canadians Win Figure Skating Championships

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—Canadians won the ladies' and men's singles titles in the final of the North American figure skating championships on the Philadelphia Skating Club rinks tonight.

Mary Rose Thacker, 18-year-old Winnipeg girl, successfully defended her championship in the women's singles by winning the nods of all six judges, while Ralph McCreath, sturdy University of Toronto senior, came from behind in the school figures to win the men's title by eight-tenths of a point.

Washington Scout Signs 3 Pitchers

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 12 (AP).—Joe Stripp said today five of his baseball school students had been signed by major league clubs.

Pitchers Raymond Fancell, 18, of Brooklyn; Mario Secciani, 19, of Chicago, and Henry Alexander, 18, of Taney Town, N. Y., were signed by Joe Cambria, Washington scout, he said.

Green Hornet To Meet Dusek Here Tonight

Wrestledom's mystery man, the Green Hornet, will try to continue his reign of terror tonight at Turner's Arena, where the 260-pound giant will be arrayed against Ernie Dusek, the notorious villain from Nebraska, in the headline match.

With a couple of cowgirls, Patsy Miller, of Idaho, and Gladys Gilliam, of Oklahoma City, meeting in a special attraction on the card, Joe Turner expects a packed house.

Dusek and the Hornet are due to wage one of those knock-down, drag-out affairs. The Hornet will pit his punishing body bend against the "Dusek Dirigible," a spinner of a hold that usually leaves opponents dizzy as a drunken goat.

The gal wrestlers will be shooting for a chance to meet Mildred Burke, the recognized champion. Miss Gilliam lost a close match to Miss Burke here last month. Miss Miller will be wrestling here for the first time.

Other matches tonight will find Lou Plummer versus Fred Grobmier, Tiger Tasker versus Ed Newman and Tiger Jack Bloomfield, a newcomer, opposing Carl Gray.

Alumni Team Faces Wilson Teachers Five

Phil Fox, outstanding cager on the Wilson Teachers College quint of 1936 and now coach of Eastern High School's basketball squad, will captain an Alumni five which will oppose Coach "Doc" White's boys tonight. The game will be played on the Harvard Street school floor and will start at 8 o'clock.

The Alumni quint will be composed of Harry English, Norman Gill, Francis Flattery, Bernard Gilliam, "Flash" Gordon, Donald Gaw, Cliff Lunson, Roger Irvin and Warren Sairall.

A serious threat to the Wilson alumni will be the Owls high scorer of last year, Hal Ifshin, and little Charley Clark. Ralph Battaglini, who has figured in all of Wilson's victories, will also be very much in evidence against the grads.

The Teachers will be seeking their eleventh win of the season and will be playing their fourth game in seven days. Last Tuesday they handed the Towson Teachers a 45-37 licking. Thus far, the Owls have only been defeated five times this season.

Toby Taylor, of the D. C. Approved Board of Referees, will handle the tilt. An informal dance will be held in the gym afterward.

D. C. Woman Bows In Orlando Golf

Orlando, Fla., Feb. 12 (AP).—Miss Alberta Little, medalist in the fourth annual mid-Florida women's golf championship, advanced through the first round of match play here today with an easy 5 and 4 victory over Mrs. Helen Clark, Washington, D. C.

The Rollins College coed, after qualifying yesterday with an 81, was six over par 36 in the first nine, ending 1 up, and three over the regulation figure on the back nine when she closed out on the fourteenth.

The only really close match for the favorites was Miss Georgia Taintor, of Fargo, N. Dak., who won a 1-up thriller over Mrs. J. C. Shorb, of South Bend, Ind.

Maryland U. And Terrors Fight to Draw

By the Associated Press

Westminister, Md., Feb. 12.—The University of Maryland's Terrapins invaded the territory of the Western Maryland Terrors tonight and the two crews of leather slingers fought through eight fast matches to a 4-to-4 draw.

The opposing captains swung out for decisions over their respective opponents, but neither of the forces could gain enough points to settle the evening's battle in decisive fashion.

Judson Lincoln, Maryland captain, took all three rounds for a decision over Vann Hudson in the 120-pound class, but Joe Rouse, Western Maryland leader, came in and won the 127-pound contest to even the score.

Bachman Scores

Charles Bachman, Western Maryland, won the 155-pound contest with a technical knockout over Bob Miller, and Harry Baker made it another for the Terrors by taking a decision over Stell, of Maryland, at 165 pounds.

Maryland's heavy artillery saved the invasion forces from a defeat when Herb Gunther, Maryland 175-pounder, swung out for a technical kayo over John Pirie in the first round, and Heavyweight Ben Rodman knocked out Bill Wells, of Western Maryland, in the third.

Maryland and Western Maryland freshmen also mixed in a series of matches and came out with the game results as the varsity teams—4 to 4.

Daytona to Hold 5th Cycle Race

Daytona Beach, Fla., Feb. 12 (AP).—The National Championship 200-mile road race for motorcycles will be staged here in 1942 for the fifth consecutive year, the American Motorcycle Association's competitions committee agreed today. Dates will be decided by Daytona Beach officials.

Jeffra-Archibald Bout May Be Postponed

The Harry Jeffra-Joey Archibald 15-round match scheduled for the Maryland-New York version of the world's featherweight championship struck a new snag yesterday when Jeffra's trainer, Heinie Blaustein, reported yesterday his fighter had injured his hand while training at the Century A. C.

Blaustein and Max Waxmen, the manager of Jeffra, have asked that the fight be postponed, but Promoter Joe Turner and Gabe Menendez, quickly carrying their case to the District Boxing Commission, got action to the extent of a demand that Jeffra show up at 3 p. m. today for an examination.

The commission previously had excused Jeffra from being examined, since he was the champion, but had ordered Archibald, from whom Jeffra won the title, to report at 3 p. m. today.

Turner and Menendez have indicated that there may be an attempted "run-out" on the part of the Waxman-Blaustein forces, and the commission, seeing eye to eye with the local promoters, have guaranteed him that Jeffra's hands will be thoroughly examined by competent commission physicians.

If Jeffra's hands are hurt, Turner and Menendez have no other alternative but to postpone the fight. Archibald, with two days of training at Huron Gym, is said to be fit as a fiddle. And it was reported the other day that Jeffra, too, looked great. If there's something underneath the surface the commission, presided over by Claude W. Owen, will attempt to uncover that.

The picture is just the reverse of that September in 1939 when Archibald had his left eye cut and was forced to postpone the match which he won by an unpopular decision from Jeffra, for two weeks.

Turner and Menendez are charging a tariff of $3.60, $1.80 and $1.20 for the bout, and are figuring on a $4,500 gate. Originally the bout was scheduled for Uline-Ice-Arena, but changed to the arena, after Archibald's unexpected kayo at the hands of Larry Bolvin.

First of Giants Leave for Camp

The group included Pitcher Hal Schumacher, Catcher Ken O'Dea, Manager Tony Cuccinello of the Giants' farm at Jersey City, Bump Hadley, veteran pitcher obtained from the Yankees, and Pitcher George Bauswein, Jersey City, whom the Giants will give some training.

Manager Bill Terry and Coach Gabby Hartnett will meet the squad at Miami.

Tom Gorman, rookie pitcher up from Clinton, Iowa, of the Three-Eye League, was at the train to wave the boys goodby. He was supposed to report to the Giants but Uncle Sam got first call and he'll leave soon for the Army.

Virginia Tech Names James Kitts as Head Football Coach

Former Rice Pilot Phones Acceptance

Southern Methodist Grad Has 17 Years Experience; Piloted Conference Champs

By the United Press

Blacksburg, Va., Feb. 12.—James R. Kitts, former head coach at Rice Institute, has accepted the position as head football coach at Virginia Tech, effective March 1, Athletic Director Monk Younger announced tonight.

Kitts succeeds Henry (Puss) Redd, head coach at V. P. I. for the past nine years who resigned dramatically on eve of the V. P. I.-V. M. I. game last Thanksgiving to become full-time alumni secretary and director of the alumni fund.

His appointment is for one year, subject to annual renewal for an indefinite period, and he was given faculty rank. Salary was not disclosed. He was chosen from more than 60 applicants for the job.

Accepts by Phone

Kitts, who conferred with athletic officials here last Thursday, accepted the position in a telephone call late this afternoon from Dallas where he has been working since he left Rice at close of the 1939 season.

The Tech athletic council gave Kitts the privilege of recommending his own assistants, but no announcement was made as to who they will be. It was understood that Redd's assistants, Backfield Coach H. M. McEver and Line Coach S. T. Tilson, were among those being considered.

Kitts, a graduate in 1922 of Southern Methodist University, has had 17 years coaching experience. He was freshman coach at Rice in 1932 and 1933 when his teams were undefeated, and became head coach in 1934. His teams won the Southwest Conference title in '34 and '37.

Kitts, who left Rice after a disastrous 1939 season, has been in the automobile business since, then at Houston and Dallas. While at Rice he coached basketball in 34-35-36, and while coaching at Athens, Tex., High School from 1927-32, twice coached quintets which won the national title.

lew's wing. He joined the latter at Western Maryland in 1930, following his graduation at Pennsylvania State, and except for 1934, when he served as head coach at Delaware, has been with him ever since.

"Skip is a fine man," Harlow said when he learned he was losing his most dependable aide.

"I told him I would take the position if I were in a similar situation, and I can say that he goes with every good wish of Harvard officials."

The only survivor of the McLaughry corps is Denny Myers, the line coach, who, according to reports, was the football squad's candidate for the head coachship vacancy.

Under those conditions, Myers' resignation generally is expected to follow shortly, for it has been rumored that Nelson has invited him to return to Yale, where Denny turned out great lines in 1935-36.

Table Tennis Tourney Draws 42 New Entries

200 Total Expected for Post Event to Start Saturday at Ice Palace; FBIRA Leads With 24 Entries; Play in Four Classes

With 42 entries received yesterday for the Government Employes' Championship Table Tennis Tournament as sponsored by The Post and scheduled for Saturday at the Chevy Chase Ice Palace Courts, the total list to date approaches the 125 mark with all indications pointing to a grand total of 200. Already the event promises to be the largest ever held in the District of Columbia with the almost certain possibility it will double any previous effort.

The FBIRA has taken the lead away from the War Department as to total entries, leading the list with a total of 24 against but 14 for the latter. Commerce is close behind the War Department with 12 entries. National Archives made a bid for recognition with a block of five entries while the Treasury Department has six in all. The remainder of the entries have come from a score of Government agencies. One department has phoned that they will enter en bloc at the last moment and has been checking on totals of other agencies and it is thought entries are being saved so as to stage a "Garrison finish" in order to win the special loving cup given the agency entering the most players.

Exclusive Affair

As Government table tennisers now know, the Government Employes' tournament is an exclusive affair in that it is open only to Uncle Sam's workers, which also includes District of Columbia employes. Play is to start at the Ice Palace courts at 3 p. m. Saturday afternoon.

This afternoon at 5 o'clock a special troupe of experts will stage an exhibition in the Interior Department. The top ranking table tennisers will be led by Carolyn Wilson, Eastern women's champion, and Stanley Fields, District No. 1 player. Other players who will show how expert they are with the rubber-faced paddle are Jimmy Limerick, Lou Gorin, Bobby Bensinger and Jimmy Shea. Any Government employe is invited to attend the exhibition as the guest of The Post and the I. D. R. A.

Saturday's tournament will be divided into four classes in order that any table tennis player, regardless of ability or degree of expertness, will have a chance to win one of the handsome trophies to be presented winners or the medals for the runners-up. The four classes are:

Class B, for novices.
Class D, for all women.

Georgetown Beats Temple, 57-49

40, Temple suddenly appeared a tired, beaten team, and it was then that Geibel, a product of St. John's Prep, and the indefatigable Bornheimer sealed the Owls' doom. This pair of six-footers accounted for 13 of the Hoyas' last 19 points.

The prolific scorers, other than Musi and Schmidli, were Bornheimer, with 15 points; Geibel with 11, and "Chink" Morganstine, of Temple, with 9.

In defeating the Owls and their touted sliding zone defense Georgetown was licking the team that upset Rhode Island State, the country's highest scoring college five, and also Oklahoma, Illinois and Kansas.

Statistics of the game show that Georgetown made 33 per cent of the 72 shots it took, while Temple capitalized 25 per cent, which testifies to the shooting ability of the two teams since both guarded expertly.

In the preliminary, the Georgetown Frosh continued their domination of the local freshmen and scholastic basbetball by whipping Gonzaga, 38-30, with Gabbanelli setting the pace with five field goals. The losing Purple, however, produced the game's top point getter in Counselman, who dropped in five baskets and three charity throws.

McReady's Rolling Tops At Queen Pin

Eddie McReady, Boyles Restaurant, sparked the Southeast play at Queen Pin, rolling 152-403 to win individual honors. A 626 game and 1,769 set won team highs for Quality Shop and the odd game over A. B. Price as well. McReady's highs helped Boyles win all three from City Baking. Elmer Mead's 385 for Brinkley's helped take two games from Bacas Bros. despite Dr. George Ellis' 368 for the losers. Art Nelson had 368 for Shaffer Flower Shop and helped take two from the Redmen even with Ralph Reid's 360 for the latter. Russ Hopkins had 336 and sparked a three-game win for Rosson Motor over Tommy Tucker's Tavern. Everett Ballard rolled 356 for Chat's Liquor.

NORTHEAST TEMPLE

Bill Caffa, Crann's Tavern, had top game of 154 in the Temple Minor League at Northeast Temple and helped his boys win high game with a 623 count. Francis Holmes' 382 set was the main reason why his Frager's Hardware lads took team set with a 1,697 pinfall. Bright Star Liquor, McKee Pontiac and New Deal Men's Shop won all three from opponents. McKee Pontiac leads with Frager's next.

ICE PALACE

Thomas, Engineers, and Roeser, Cosmos, had highs in the Bureau of Standards play at the Ice Palace, the former with top game of 139 with the latter taking set after a 382 pinfall which helped his team to top set of 1,658. The Office quintet won team game with 604. The Chemists lead with 14-4 with Industrial and BTU following with 11-7 each.

PENN RECREATION

Dan Cronin, Reclamation No. 1, and Tolson Brown, Cartography, were the leaders in the Interior meet at Penn Recreation with 150 for game and 381 for set, respectively. The National Capital Parks boys took all the team honors with a 600 game and 1733 set. Cartography was the only tetam to win all three, winning from Topography. The Parks boys and Reclamation No. 1 took the odd games from Survey and Grazing Secretary, respectively.

ARCADIA

The Bankers League at Arcadia was paced by Bill Grimes, American Security & Trust No. 1, whose 144 game helped his quintet win team game with 822. The Riggs boys won team set with a 1,690 count after Jimmy Bridges had helped out with his own 386 string.

The Orioles, skating swiftly and driving hard, made it 4 to 0 at 13:56, when Chick Webster clicked on a shot set up by Ned Vitarelli, Baltimore's diminutive winger who was playing one of his best games.

Just prior to the period's close Bob Dill roughed up Paul Courteau in a wild scrimmage and Courteau protested vigorously, but no penalty was called. Dill had wrestled Courteau to the ice and hit him twice with his stick.

Former Baseball, Hockey Players Seek Elmira

Elmira, N. Y., Feb. 12 (AP).—Dick Porter, veteran outfielder and for three years manager of the Syracuse Chiefs, announced today he and Johnny Ogden, former general manager of the Baltimore Orioles, expect to buy the Elmira Eastern League Club from the Brooklyn Dodgers this week.

Porter, Ogden and League President Thomas H. Richardson will confer here tomorrow with directors of the old home-owned club who have pledged support to new operators.

Gopher Swimmers Win

Madison, Wis., Feb. 12 (AP).—A powerful Minnesota swimming team defeated Wisconsin, 56 to 28, in the Badger pool today. The Gophers, rated highly in the Big Ten, allowed Wisconsin two firsts and one second in individual events.

Mt. Rainier Boys Lose; Girls Win 13th

Mount Rainier High School's boys dropped the "rubber" game in their feud with the alumni five last night, but the girls' team saved the day by overcoming the "13" jinx and nosing out the girls from George Washington, of Alexandria, 16-15.

Led by Bob Bauman, who scored exactly half of his team's total, the Rainier alumni defeated the varsity, 32-30, in a hot battle that saw the lead constantly changing hands until the final whistle.

The game started out as a scoring duel between Bauman and Ladwig Rodriguez, the varsity's high scoring forward, but Bauman's 16 points topped Rodriguez' performance by five. It was the second victory for the alumni in three games.

Earlier, Coach Mary Speake's undefeated team went on to take its thirteenth straight victory, 16-13, over the Alexandria girls, but a letup in the second half almost cost them the game.

The Perfectly BALANCED Blend
STEPS TO HEAD OF CLASS
1. Gentlemen, we ask you—can it be mere luck that has made Carstairs White Seal such an outstandingly successful whiskey in its class? Increased its popularity tenfold over last year? We don't think so...
2. The explanation is—the character of the whiskey itself. Yes, Carstairs White Seal brings you a studiously planned combination of all the whiskey qualities you like...as your first delighted taste will tell you!
3. Here, in one whiskey, is richness and lightness. Mildness and heartiness. A smoother, mellower, better-tasting drink...thanks to Carstairs' own deliberate method of "balanced blending".
4. Find out why Carstairs White Seal is the fastest-growing whiskey in town. Enjoy "The Perfectly Balanced Blend"...yours at a budget-balancing price. Made by Carstairs...a name of character since 1788.

Eastern High School Conquers Episcopal Five, 33 to 25

Victors Use Reserves Most of Play

Franny Manilli And Schulman Led Attack for Lincoln Parkers

Eastern High School's White Tide rolled over Episcopal High yesterday, 33-25, and added insult to injury by relying mainly on their reserves.

The Tide five, tied with Roosevelt for the interhigh basketball lead in Washington, turned over the first half to the subs ,and Franny Manilli came through in noble fashion with 6 points—just one short of Capt. Moe Schulman's total.

Eastern jumped into the lead at the start and were never headed, although Episcopal made a valiant bid for the lead midway of the first half and tied the score at 6-6. Burnett led the Episcopal attack and was the afternoon's high scorer with 10 points.

Eastern College Boxing Tourney Gives Neil Award

By the Associated Press

Syracuse, N. Y., Feb. 12.—The Eastern Intercollegiate Boxing Association, offering a new trophy in competition this year, expects a heavy entry list for its annual championship tournament at Syracuse University, March 7-8.

The association, which recently admitted Virginia and the United States Coast Guard Academy, is restricting the 1941 tourney to members, who also include West Point, Cornell, Penn State and Western Maryland. Entry blanks were mailed yesterday.

The new award will be the Edward J. Neil trophy, in memory of the Associated Press correspondent who was killed in Spain while covering the Civil War.

Joe Louis Has Lost Something, Says Man He Beat for Title

JIM BRADDOCK

Braddock Contends Brown Bomber Has Slipped Recently And Crown Begins to Sag

By the Associated Press

New York, Feb. 12.—Jim Braddock wants a doctor.

Now, don't be alarmed, folks; Old Jim is still able to do somewhat more than sit up and take a little nourishment. But he'd like to explain to a medical man just what it is he sees which convinces him Joe Louis "ain't what he used to be." Then he'd like to have Mr. Medical Man tell him how he can explain it clearly to his friends.

This is a most surprising situation, inasmuch as old Jim has been the Brown Bomber's sincerest booster ever since the night in Chicago Louis took the cinderella man's heavyweight championship away. If just any former fighter came up and told you Louis was fistiana's superman, but is slipping, you'd nod nicely and ask him about the sugar situation in Siam. But when Jim announces he has changed his mind, after nearly four years of going up and down the countryside singing Joe's praises, then it gets down to the man-bites-the-dog sort of thing.

Can't Explain It

"I don't know exactly how to explain what I mean," Jim said today. "That's why I'd like to ask a doctor, to have him tell me just what it is I'm trying to say. But Joe seems to have lost something between the second fight with Godoy last summer and the Al McCoy fight in Boston in December. It's not that he's getting soft, or anything like that, but the drive, the old will he had when he fought me in 1937, is gone.

"Maybe I can make myself clearer this way: Everybody, including myself, knew I had about one chance in a hundred against Louis in '37. He was a great fighting machine, did things instinctively. But after looking at Joe against McCoy and against Red Burman two weeks ago, I feel that if I was the Braddock of four years ago and was matched with the Louis of today, there's a possibility—now, mind you, I'm not saying positively—but it's possible I could outgallop him and win a decision. By that I don't say he figures to get flattened by Gus Dorazio in Philadelphia Monday, but there's a chance any guy might beat him. Personally, I think that if Joe doesn't get some of his stuff back, the fellow who might do it is Billy Conn in June."

Jim's idea isn't that Louis is loafing through his training. He feels Joe is working just as hard as ever, but that the same old routine isn't enough any more, that it's become monotonous and doesn't put the Bomber into the old peak of condition. His preparations now are being done simply by ear.

Brother Acts To Feature A. A. U. Fights

The popular Apollo A. C. will be represented by two sets of fighting brothers in the District Amateur Athletic Union's boxing tournament to be launched at Turner's Arena a week from tomorrow night, February 21.

The tournament continues on successive nights through March 21.

Charley Petro, a clever 126 pounder, who will box in the senior class, rounds out a family representation of four brothers. The others to box for the Apollo A. C. are Joe Petro, 112 pounds, and Danny, 118 pounds, both seniors, and Jim Petro, 175 pounds, novice.

Hubscher Promising

Joe Petro recently won the Golden Gloves' 112-pound title, while both Danny and Jim were eliminated in this championship finals, where Jim boxed in the heavyweight novice division.

Charley Petro, who did not compete in the Golden Gloves, is a combination boxer and puncher pair of promising brothers in Don and is considered by many the classiest of the battling brothers.

The Apollos also will feature a Hubscher, 126 pounds, and Roy, 147 pounds. Both are considered title contenders in the novice class.

Entry Blanks Available

Other boys to represent the Apollo Clubmen in the District A. A. U. competition are Joe Gannon, 118 pounds; Bill Purdy, 147 pounds, and Lou Bass, 160 pounds, all seniors, and Roger Watts, 118 pounds; Howard Kramer, 126 pounds; Owen Abell, 147 pounds, and Norris Speet, 160 pounds, novices.

Entry blanks are available at the Boys Club of Washington, 230 C Street Northwest.

Black Again Told Pa. Man Will Be Referee Monday

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, Feb. 12.—A second request for an outside referee in the Joe Louis-Gus Dorazio heavyweight title here Monday produced the same answer today as the first—that a Pennsylvanian will be the third man in the ring.

Chairman Leon Rains of the State athletic commission told Julian Black, one of Louis' handlers, that referees in Pennsylvania are entirely capable of handling the bout, and added:

Black said he asked the outside official because the champion would be defending his title against a "hometown boy." He agreed to Rains' decision after a 5-minute conference.

Bears Buy Pitcher

Newark, N. J., Feb. 12 (AP).—The Newark Bears of the International Baseball League today acquired Jim Davis, right-hand Homer City, Pa., pitcher who won 23 and lost 9 with Augusta last year. In 276 innings and 41 games last season Davis allowed 239 hits, walked 113 and fanned 164. He is 26 years old.

On the Line

With CONSIDINE

New York, Feb. 12.—Sportin' around: With no fanfare at all, Joe Louis has surpassed Jack Dempsey's record for the number of persons drawn by a fight champion. Dempsey fought only six times as champ. He drew 11,348 with Billy Miske, 14,703 with Bill Brennan, an estimated 75,000 with Georges Carpentier, 7,966 with Tommy Gibbons, an estimated 82,000 with Louis Firpo and 120,789 when he lost the title to Gene Tunney. That's 311,806, give or take a deadhead or so.

CONSIDINE

Louis, as champ, drew 36,896 with Tommy Farr, 19,509 with Natie Mann, 11,743 with Harry Thomas, 70,043 with Max Schmeling, 17,350 with John Henry Lewis, 22,675 with Jack Roper, 34,852 with Tony Galento, 15,657 and 27,786 with Arturo Godoy, 11,620 with Johnny Paychek, 14,002 with Al McCoy and 18,061 with Red Burman. That's 334,964, with the probability that the mark will be shoved up near the 350,000 class when Louis takes on Gus Dorazio Monday night in Philadelphia. Dempsey, by reason of his fights with Jack Sharkey and Gene Tunney, after he lost the title, is still comfortably ahead of Louis for his total fighting life, for those two fights drew about 150,000. But Louis, twice as busy as a champ, has outdistanced the ring's greatest drawing name, so far as Jack's title span is concerned.

A fan at Madison Square Garden the other night kept heckling Bill Stewart, the hockey official, until Will skated near the tormentor and said, "If you had half a gut I'd recommend you for my job" . . . The boys around Jacobs Beach say that big Abe Simon was robbed in his recent setback . . . C. C. Slapnicka, who runs the Cleveland Indians, takes personal charge of the team's baseballs' too. A former manager of the team says that Slappy rigged up a photographic device in the umpire's room at the Cleveland ball park when he suspected that the ump was pocketing a ball or two after the game . . . Tip your hat to the memory of Abe Lincoln, the last honest rassler.

The sweet-swinging hillbilly, Sam Snead, set a new intersectional record for something or other when he played a round of golf with the Duke of Windsor not long ago. When Sam was invited to play he scratched for a while and said, "How am I going to get out to the course? I don't have no car with me." That much arranged for, he was oblivious to the open admiration of the duke, over Sam's game. The duke also said that he thought Sam's ghosted book on how to play golf was the best he had read in years and that he had sent a crop of them to his friends. Sam yawned, and went about the business of shooting his 67. For the last nine holes he was too worried to pay any attention to what the duke was asking about his game. He was afraid he might not be able to get a lift back from the club to his hotel.

George Keogan, grand old basketball coach of Notre Dame, may retire at the end of the season. Heart trouble, from watching 18 years of Irish court battling. There is some doubt that he will make the trip to New York for the Notre Dame-N. Y. U. game Friday night. He was Knute Rockne's last appointment to the Notre Dame athletic staff. In his 18 years his teams have won 295 games and lost 87 games. This year's Irish team's record is 15 wins against 3 boots.

When Joe Orengo, the Giants' answer to Joe DiMaggio, was a street car conductor in San Francisco he was ired one day by a lady who handed him a $5 bill during the rush hour. "Madam," he said, "have you seen the new nickles?" Madam said she had not. So Joe gave her 99 of them for her change.

Delancey to Head Cardinal Farm

St. Louis, Feb. 12 (AP).—Having attained his goal of returning to the major leagues, Catcher Bill Delancey will leave the Cardinals this season and manage one of their farm clubs.

Delancey, star of the Cards' 1934 championship team, was stricken with a serious lung ailment in 1935. Determined to come back, he was able to regain his health and he rejoined the team last year, taking part in 12 games.

His new post will be announced in a few days. During his convalescence, Delancey managed Albequerque, N. Mex., a Cardinal farm, for several seasons.

Devil's Crag Captures Lincoln Purse at Hialeah Park Track

McCreary Rides Victor In Feature

Son of Diavolo Scores by Four Lengths; Pays $5 Mutuel

By the Associated Press

Hialeah Park, Fla., Feb. 12.—James B. Campbell's Devil's Crag, recently a good second in similar company, scored an easy triumph in the mile and a furlong Lincoln Purse for grade "C" horses here this afternoon. Apprentice Conn McCreary, who stole the show the previous day by riding a quartet of winners, booted the son of Diavolo to the wire with four lengths to spare. The combination ruled favorite in the field of six, paying $5 for two. Running over a track that had not yet dried out, the victor was timed in 1:50 2/5.

J. H. Miles' Play House outlasted Mrs. Payne Whitney's frequent disappointment, Corydon, by a head for the place. Corydon, which never has run back to his surprise victory over Bimelech in the Withers at Belmont Park last summer, was a close second choice. He had more early foot than usual but was not there when called upon for his best through the stretch. Corydon was the only horse in the field eligible for the rich Widener.

Plowshare finally ran to his fast morning trials and set most of the pace. The J. E. Widener colt sprinted into a wide advantage, with Play House and Corydon nearest in pursuit.

Devil's Crag, well back until the field swung around the last bend, became a threat when the leaders raced wide into the stretch. McCreary shot the gelding through to save ground and his mount easily bounded clear of the field inside the final furlong.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—KIND GESTURE, $3.30, $2.80, $2.60; SCOTLAND LIGHT, $6.00, $3.50; LADY CLIPPER, $20.20.

KIND GESTURE broke alertly, drew clear in the run out of the chute, but began to swerve approaching the stands and had to be vigorously ridden to stave off SCOTLAND LIGHT. The latter moved up fast after settling into his stride and was wearing the winner down. LADY CLIPPER responded to punishment and outlasted SAMPLER. The latter was in tight quarters most of the trip.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 2:35. Off 2:36. Winner, J. H. Miles' ch. g. (3), by Agrarian—Miss Sheila. Trained by J. J. Bauer. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—HOTZEA, $31.60, $12.20, $7.00; BOREDOM, $5.20, $4.10; GENERAL PLANET, $4.70.

HOTZEA, well up from the start, swung wide entering the stretch, closed fast under pressure and won going away. BOREDOM displayed the most speed and faltered through the stretch, yet outlasted GENERAL PLANET. The latter slipped through on the inside entering the stretch and made a game effort, but could not get up. OUR FLORENCE did not appear to favor the footing.

Daily Double, KIND GESTURE and HOTZEA, Paid $108.70

THIRD RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 3-year-olds. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 3:06. Off 3:08. Winner, L. Hardy's br. c. (3), by Sweeping Light—Attraction. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:13.

†Broke down.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—BEAMY, $11.70, $5.60, $3.40; WELL ALLRIGHT, $5.00, $3.10; PAJAS, $2.80.

BEAMY held the field safe for speed, opened up a good lead in the early running and held sway thereafter. WELL ALLRIGHT gradually bettered his position, finished strong and wore PAJAS down. The latter, a forward factor throughout, faltered in the final furlong. REST AWHILE broke slowly, made up much ground in the first half mile and then faltered.

FOURTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 3:36½. Off 3:37. Winner, L. Diker's b. g. (5), by Jean Valjean—Daphnia. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:52⅘.

JAY BEE DEE	(McMullen)	115	2	9	9	9	9	9	9	7.10

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PETE GENE, $22.40, $12.20, $9.70; QUAKER BRASS, $18.60, $13.00; CONSUL, $4.50.

PETEE GENE, steadied off the early pace until the last furlong, closed determinedly to pressure and drew clear in the last strides. QUAKER BRASS, nearest in pursuit of the leader in the early stages, assumed command with a rush going to the stretch turn, but faltered in the final drive. CONSUL responded to punishment through the stretch and outlasted ODDEBA'S PRIDE. The latter was going strong at the end.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,400; allowances. For 3-year-olds and upward. Grade C Handicap. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:06. Off 4:06½. Winner, Coldstream Stable's b. g. (4), by Haste—Madamoiselle De Valois. Trained by J. Howard. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:18⅘.

THELUSSON	(Stout)	120	3	5	5h	6	6	6	8.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TOWN BOY, $3.70, $3.00, $2.50; VISIGOTH, $8.40, $4.30; VICTORY MORN, $4.40.

TOWN BOY, eased off the pace midway around the turn, swung around the leaders and, assuming command entering the stretch, maintained his lead under mild pressure. VISIGOTH, slow to get going, gained steadily in the final 3 furlongs on the outside and wore VICTORY MORN down in the final drive. VICTORY MORN displayed good speed and raced MINEE-MO into defeat, but hung when the real test came. MINEE-MO retired in the final furlong.

SIXTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,400. For 4-year-olds and upward. The Lincoln. Grade C. Start good from gate. Won handily; place driving. Went to post 4:36. Off at once. Winner, J. H. Campbell's br. g. (4), by Diavolo—Cairn. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $1,000; second, $250; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:50⅘.

HIGH FIDELITY	(Eads)	113	5	6	6	6	6	6	6	8.75

Two-dollar mutuels paid—DEVIL'S CRAG, $5.00, $3.30, $2.70; PLAY HOUSE, $7.00, $3.90; CORYDON, $3.00.

DEVIL'S CRAG, eased off the pace until leaving the backstretch, moved into contention with a rush while saving ground, took command and was under light pressure at the end. PLAY HOUSE, well up all the way, finished gamely under punishment to wear CORYDON down. The latter finished stoutly to punishment. PLOWSHARE set a swift pace from the start, lost ground entering the stretch and faltered.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles (on the turf). Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward; fillies and mares. Start good from gate. Won easily; place driving. Went to post 5:07. Off 5:09. Winner, Mrs. M. F. Shapoff's br. m. (7), by Frisius—Forecast II. Trained by S. W. Shapoff. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:53⅘.

CATCHEM	(Kaufman)	111	3	11	4h	4h	8½	10¹	12	9.60

Two-dollar mutuels paid—FORE ISUS, $10.30, $5.50, $4.20; VIRGINIA ROSE, $20.40, $10.30; OUTBOARD, $6.90.

FORE ISUS took command going to the first turn, was rated in front in the opening half mile and then drew out to win in hand. VIRGINIA ROSE, a forward contender all the way, finished stoutly, but never seriously threatened the winner. OUTBOARD worked her way up on the extreme outside and disposed of GREY DOLL in the stretch run. The latter had no excuses.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-eighth miles. Purse, $1,200; claiming. For 4-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post 5:36. Off 5:36½. Winner, M. Freud's br. g. (4), by Quatre Bras II—Aroma. Trained by J. Hastie. Value to winner, $850; second, $200; third, $100; fourth, $50. Time, 1:51⅘.

KIEVEX	(Calvin)	118	6	7	7	7	7	7	7	19.15

Two-dollar mutuels paid—QUAROMA, $10.50, $5.00, $3.90; COMMENDADOR II, $3.90, $3.10; SAXONIAN, $5.30.

QUAROMA was not rushed when outrun early, moved up to contending position entering the stretch, assumed a short lead under pressure in the drive and just lasted. COMMENDADOR II moved up smartly on the inside on the backstretch to vie for command and fought a stirring duel with the winner in the last eighth, but just missed. SAXONIAN, far back the first mile, came with a rush in the stretch to hold the others safe. WHITE HOT, outrun early, lost ground on the home turns and was unable to threaten in the drive.

Reiselt Breaks Losing Streak

By the Associated Press

The first annual Atlantic coastal fishing contest for which George Ruppert shelled out as prizes some 4,000-odd hard iron dollars is over, and the prizes have been forwarded or are on the way.

ACKERMAN

The competition was saturated with human interest and impossible happenings, such as the Niagara Falls fellow who didn't think fishing was hard, even though he had never tried it, and to prove his contention flew to Montauk, after hiring a cab to meet him by wire, chartering a boat and boating a broadbill swordfish weighing 325 pounds within an hour after leaving the dock, and repeating the performance within the next hour. Then, for added good measure, catching a mako weighing 108 pounds, and remarking upon returning that fishing wasn't anything out of the ordinary that he could see, even after being told that he had just accomplished what only two other anglers in all the world had succeeded in doing.

And Capt. Nel Edward's mate on the Julie Anna, who jumped overboard and held on to a live sailfish that had threw the hook, until he could be hauled back aboard (with the sail); or the capture of a huge swordfish by two boys with a lasso.

But consider the former football player, Elbert Ray, of Jacksboro, Tenn., bellhopping in the Columbus Hotel in Miami and on a Gulf Stream fishing trip given by the hotel to its employes, when he caught a 92 pound sailfish. Later he became ill and returned to his home, where, the prize check will settle up his hospital bills so that he may return to Miami where his job is waiting for him.

The women entered many fine fish in the majority of the 12 classes, and, for many months, held commanding positions in several, but were unable to surmount the late entries of the men. They failed to take a first place, but did place in the white marlin division with a buster of 122 pounds that was shy of the winner by but pound.

The prize for the outstanding achievement of the year—either an auto or a boat worth $1,000—was awarded to Dr. John B. Vernaglia, of Medford, Mass., for his catch of a bluefish tuna weighing 927 pounds. This fish brought the world's record for the species to this country.

Local anglers failed to find any place on the prize list, but a nearby Virginian did—because he was a reader of this column and interested enough in it to send us a picture of a fish he had caught at Wachaprague early in August. It was a good picture, and was used with the story. What attracted our attention most, however, was the weight of this channel bass—66 pounds and 12 ounces.

We immediately mailed him an entry blank for the Ruppert contest, which he filled out and sent in, and, this week, Randolph M. Robinson, of Elkton, Va., received $250 for first prize in that class, while his boatman, Capt. Earl Parker, Wachaprague, Va., received $100 for his end.

Selections at Hialeah Park

DEAR AL:

I received several letters on this subject so I will print one of them: With reference to your column in today's Post (which column I have fallen into the habit of reading for no good reason at all) I would like to call your attention to an error you made in calling the good colt Curious Coin a maiden in his 2-year-old form. Curious Coin won a very nice race at Lauel in the mud last November with a good mud runner, Don Orlan, chasing him to the wire. Remember? (signed) A reader (but not an admirer of your selections.)" You are right as rain about Curious Coin and so another fan who reminds me that Curious Coin broke his maiden at Delaware Park. Please forgive me for making the mistake and I make no excuses. However, Mr. A. Reader, you wrote that the colt won "at Laurel in the mud last November." Laurel was last October, but let's call it quits. I hope you played Beamy, my best bet yesterday. I have an announcement before me of the opening of Thoroughbred Sales, at 1622 H Street Northwest, in Washington. It is an agency for buying and selling thoroughbred horses. I don't know any more about it than is contained in the pamphlet but the name of Col. John F. Wall, long head of the remount station and a steward at Charles Town, is there and that's the equivalent of the stamp of approval in my book. Jockey Bobby Merritt is riding under difficulties. He has to wear a large pair of white gloves despite the fact that some of the Hialeah days are hot. Bobby developed leather poisoning and has been unable to shake it off. Trying to rate powerful horses with sore hands is quite a task but Bobby wants to keep in action. Tommy Daly, the fellow who conducts the public address systems at Bowie, Havre de Grace and Laurel, is in Cuba now calling charts for the racing form. Incidentally, Daly was one of the first chart callers in the country and worked for the late Thomas K. Lynch who was the originator of the idea and later general manager of Bowie. Wish I could see you all on the rail at Bowie tomorrow. BILL.

First race—STARWEISTA is last on the reserve list but will have an outside post position if put into action. Would be able to keep out of trouble and figures best. REMEMBERING is good if he can overcome Gilbert's riding. QUICK CONQUEST for the show end.

Second race—SIR GIBSON seems well placed in this field of maidens. Conn McCreary may be the rider and I'm going to string along. BAD COLD is a doubtful starter but has speed and will be a threat if sent postward. ROYAL RUBY 2d for the show end.

Third race — HANDIBOY has plenty of early foot and may forget to stop in this rather open affair. Dupps will do the riding and I favor the combination. DOMKIN breaks from the rail and has the speed to make the most of the position. SHORT DISTANCE has failed before at light weight but may be a surprise.

Fourth race—SIGNATOR appears much the best in this company. Needs only the right ride and any price will be a good one. PONTY raced well last week and is dangerout. GAY MAN to take care of the minor award.

Fifth race—DAY OFF breaks from the No. 1 position and may go to the top in this turf course battle. Eads may keep him there all the way. TOPEE has done about everything asked hereabouts. KEY MAN is in light.

Sixth race — The route suits CAVALIER and I'm going to try to root this one home ahead of the pack. CLARKSVILLE has shown good form hereabouts and should go well. YANKEE PARTY may be third in this company.

Seventh race—BUSY MAN probably is the right one in this field. Alfred Robertson has the mount and I'm going to string along. BROWN QUEEN 2d is not overmatched and deserves consideration. LANDLUBBER to take care of the others.

Eighth race—FLAG POST seems to have a slight edge over this field. Likes the route and is

Capital Losses

No deduction is allowable for losses from sales or exchanges of property, directly or indirectly, between (a) members of a family, (b) a corporation and an individual owning more than 50 per cent of its stock (liquidations excepted), (c) a grantor and fiduciary of any trust, or (d) a fiduciary and a beneficiary of the same trust.

If (1) shares of stock become worthless during the year, or (2) corporate securities with interest coupons or in registered form are ascertained to be worthless and charged off during the year, and are capital assets, the loss therefrom shall be considered as from the sale or exchange of capital assets as of the last day of such taxable year.

In determining "gain" in case of property acquired before March 1, 1913, the cost, or the fair market value as of March 1, 1913, adjusted as provided in section 113 (b), as amended by section 215 of the Revenue Act of 1939, whichever is greater, should be used, and in determining "loss" the cost, so adjusted, should be used.

If the property was acquired after February 28, 1913, the cost, except as otherwise provided in section 113, as amended by sections 213, 214, 215, and 223 of the Revenue Act of 1939, should be used.

The taxpayer's return should state the following facts: (a) For real estate, the location and description of land and improvements; (b) for bonds or other evidences of indebtedness, name of issuing corporation, particular issue, denomination, and amount; and (c) for stocks, name of corporation, class of stock, number of shares, and capital charges affecting basis (including nontaxable distributions.)

Georgia Power Co. Maps $101,000,000 Refunding Issue

Atlanta, Feb. 12 (AP).—Georgia Power Co., a subsidiary of Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, today announced a multimillion-dollar refinancing program to reduce bonded debt and lower its interest charges.

Application was made to the Georgia Public Service Commission for approval, and a hearing was set for February 24. Application for approval has been made to the Securities & Exchange Commission.

Arkwright said the company planned to call in $80,935,000 of first and refunding mortgage bonds now publicly held at the call price of 104 1-6, acquire $34,231,000 worth of bonds now held by Commonwealth & Southern and call for redemption all other bonds of other issues.

The company proposes to replace these bonds with an issue of $101,271,000 of 3½ per cent bonds maturing in 30 years. It also plans to borrow $13,500,000 at 2½ per cent interest from a group of New York banks, the principal to be repaid in semiannual installments over 20 years. In addition, the company is to receive $14,337,319 in cash from Commonwealth & Southern.

Power Production In Week Again Dips

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—Electric power production declined for the third week in a row in the period ended February 8 but the drop was less than seasonally expected, figures released by the Edison Electric Institute disclosed today.

Output of 2,823,651,000 kilowatt hours was .2 of one per cent less than 2,829,690,000 in the preceding week. The represented a gain of 11.9 per cent over 2,522,514,000 kilowatthours in the comparable 1940 week.

Capital Store Sales Up 11% In Fiscal Year

Washington department store sales increased 21 per cent in January as compared with the same month of 1940, the Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond reported last night. The gain for the Reserve district was 17 per cent in the same period.

For the fiscal year ended January 31, District of Columbia store sales were 11 per cent heavier than in the previous year. The gain for the reserve district was estimated 10 per cent.

The survey is based on sales reported by seven Washington stores and 64 in the Reserve district. Other cities in the first district reported sales gains for January and the fiscal year as follows:

Baltimore, 12 per cent and 16 per cent for the fiscal year; Norfolk, 49 per cent and 2 per cent; Richmond, 16 per cent and unchanged.

Holiday in Markets

Security exchanges and most commodity markets in the United States were closed yesterday for the Lincoln's Birthday observance. The New Orleans Cotton Exchange, for the first time in six years likewise closed.

Livestock and naval stores markets remained open.

New England Mutual Reports

Assets and insurance protection of policyholders in the New England Mutual increased during 1940 to the highest points in its century of experience, President George Willard Smith reported yesterday. In the 11-year period since 1929, insurance in force has increased 33 per cent to $1,607,000,000, while assets have more than doubled.

Assets, which now total over half a billion dollars, $502,000,000, increased $33,000,000 in 1940. Surplus funds stand at $21,314,000, of which $4,000,000 has been set apart as a special real estate and mortgage fund. A total of 30,702 new policies, totaling $114,060,000, was issued in 1940, while 2,257 annuity contracts were purchased.

Real Estate Bonds Gain

The average price of real estate bonds increased 1.4 per cent in January, according to the monthly index of Amott, Baker & Co. The average price of a $1,000 bond is now $285 compared to $281 at the close of 1940.

Of the four Washington bonds listed in the average, three showed increases in bid prices for January. The National Press Building first 5s and 3s were up 3 points each at the bid prices of 83½ and 25, respectively. Washington Properties, Inc., 7s of 1952 was up 1 point at the bid price of 60. Mayflower Hotel first 5s of 1950 was down 6 points at the bid price of 83½.

Banquet to Draw 500

Indications point to an attendance of more than 500 for the annual banquet of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League. Scheduled for the Mayflower Hotel on Saturday, March 8, the affair will be the eighth yearly dinner arranged by the league. According to Rudolph W. Santelmann, vice chairman of the general committee, table seating will be in order of application.

Advertising Gains 5.8 Per Cent

Advertising Age yesterday reported that newspapers in 32 major cities carried a total of 17,069,919 lines of retain display for the seven days ended February 1, compared with 16,178,363 lines for the corresponding week of last year. This is an increase of 5.6 per cent.

For the five-week period since the beginning of the year, the total for the reporting cities is 83,456,515 lines, compared with 82,176,863 lines during the same period last year, for a gain of 1.8 per cent.

Girdler Receives $176,000 a Year As Republic's Head

Cleveland, Feb. 12 (AP).—Republic Steel Corporation employes—led by Chairman Tom Girdler at $176,000 for 1940—received earnings last year averaging 91.9 cents an hour, the Nation's third largest steel concern disclosed today.

A registration statement filed with the Securities & Exchange Commission office here for $90,000,000 of new securities and $16,500,000 of bank loans to retire all Republic's funded debt showed these figures:

	Monthly Employes	Weekly Hours	Hourly Earnings (cents)
1936	46,000	39.1	74.6
1937	52,438	36.8	90.8
1938	42,073	28.7	83.0
1939	49,882	35.0	91.7
1940	56,480	36.9	91.9

The new securities to be issued by Republic, probably before the end of February, consist of $65,000,000 of 20-year first-mortgage sinking fund bonds and $25,000,000 of 15-year convertible sinking fund debentures.

"Coupone, redemption prices and offering prices will be announced at a later date," the corporation said.

G. M. Employes Get Another $8,063,840

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—A new distribution of $8,063,840 in cash and common stock by the General Motors Corporation under its employes' savings and investment plan, brings the total disbursed in the last 22 years to $264,301,368, the corporation reported today.

Of the total, it was explained, $151,036,047 represents original savings of employes and $113,265,321 the company's contribution.

The current disbursement, going to nearly 35,000 employes in the United States and Canada, was made on the basis of $143 plus one share of common stock of General Motors (with a market value of about $43) for each $100 paid into the savings fund in 1935.

Sinclair Reports Oil Strike in Venezuela

New York, Feb. 12 (AP).—H. F. Sinclair, chairman of the executive committee of the Consolidated Oil Corporation, announced today its subsidiary, Venezuelan Petroleum Co., had discovered its first oil well in the state of Monagas, Venezuela.

The subsidiary has been conducting exploratory and geophysical work in Venezuela for a number of years, having under lease in various areas nearly 1,000,000 acres.

Foreign Markets

London, Feb. 12 (AP).—The London stock market was somewhat steadier today, but dealings as a whole were rather quiet Gilt-edged issues failed to find support and ended mostly 1/4 down. Indian bonds, however, remained firm.

Home rails steadied after initial weakness. The industrial list rallied smartly under leadership of Courtaulds, chemicals, store and electrical supply shares. Kaffirs tended at slightly lower levels. Oil shares managed to finish above the lows of the day.

Liverpool Cotton

Liverpool, Feb. 12 (AP).—Cotton futures clung to a narrow course today. Liquidation of October was evident at the outset, gained momentum in the afternoon, but was well taken by trade demands.

Final prices were unchanged to 2 points higher. American and Sudanese staples met best demand in the spot market.

Winnipeg Grain

Winnipeg, Feb. 12 (AP).—Absence of selling pressure enabled moderate demand to boost wheat futures more than half a cent in the grain exchange today. Final quotations were ¾-¾ cent ahead: May, 77⅞, and July, 79½@79¾ cents a bushel.

With operations suspended in the Chicago wheat market in observance of the Lincoln Birthday holiday, trading lagged and only light buying by mills and domestic interests was required to hoist values.

Montreal Stocks

Montreal, Feb. 12 (AP).—After a losing battle most of the session gains got the upper hand over losses in the stock market in late trading today.

In constructions, Dominion Bridge tacked on 2 points, though Asbestos sold off ½. Bell Telephone advanced ⅝ in utilities and Montreal Power held at its early ¼ decline.

A gainer in metals was International Nickel, which firmed ½. Noranda failed to recover a point slip. Canada Steamships put on the minimum fraction in carriers, but Canadian Pacific was off ⅛. Canadian Car preferred lost ½.

Toronto Stocks

Toronto, Feb. 12 (AP).—Stocks perked up moderately late today in the exchange, and golds and industrials closed with narrow margins on the upside. Base metal issues weakened a bit, but Western oils were unchanged to slightly higher. Only about 125,000 shares changed hands.

The New York market holiday held down local trade. Interlisted stocks especially were in light demand and, excepting minor gains in the senior oils, prices were off slightly.

Fanny Farmer, Brazilian Traction, Steel of Canada, Dominion Steel and United Steel eased minor fractions. Walkers and Ford "A" posted small gains.

Chicago Livestock

Chicago, Feb. 12 (AP) (U. S. Dept. of Agric.).—SALABLE HOGS—Receipts, 12,000; total, 15,500; fairly active, mostly 10 to 15 higher than Tuesday's average; top, 8.20; bulk good and choice 180-240 lbs., 7.85@8.15; most 240-270 lbs., butchers, 7.75@8.00; 270-320 lbs., averages generally 7.60@7.95; most packing sows, 400 lbs. down, 7.00@7.25, with 425-550 lbs. kinds 6.75@7.00.

Boston Wool

Boston, Feb. 12 (AP).—(U. S. Dept. of Agric.)—The demand for domestic wools was very limited today in the Boston market. Occasional sales of moderate quantities of original bag 12-month Texas combing wools were reported at 1.00@1.05, scoured basis, which was the equivalent of 37@39 cents for wools shrinking around 63 per cent and 40@42 cents, in the grease, for lighter wools shrinking around 60 per cent. Fine and half-blood foreign wools continue in good demand at steady prices.

Kodak Dividends Voted

Rochester, N. Y., Feb. 12 (AP).—Eastman Kodak Co. declared today the regular quarterly dividend of 1¾ per cent on preferred stock, and a quarterly dividend of $1.50 on common stock. Both are payable April 1 to stockholders of record March 5.

Within the last year more than 500 persons from the Washington vicinity have given approximately 2,000 donations of blood to Children's Hospital in order that disease and surgical shock might be overcome among children with its assistance.

This unsung generosity is heard of only at this time of the year when The Post, WJSV, The American Legion and the American Contract Bridge League combine their energies to let the public know more about it.

For not only are additional donors with rare types of blood needed by the blood bank, but financial contributions are necessary for the purchase of serums.

Bridge parties are being arranged throughout the city by generous citizens and are being attended by other generous citizens and the proceeds from the parties are going toward raising the financial ante needed for the blood bank.

Tonight at 10:15 WJSV is broadcasting a recording made yesterday at Children's Hospital to give you an idea of how the blood bank really works and to urge you to take part in aiding it. From an operating room at the hospital Hugh Conover describes the procedure as a Washington citizen does his bit to aid the children. There'll be interviews with the donor, and Dr. William Dougherty, resident in pathology at the hospital, and Dr. A. M. Grossman will tell you all there is to know about the blood bank.

Contract Bridge

Walter Malowan, mentioned in yesterday's article, tells of another amusing incident in which he was the victim of a highly suspicious partner who, alas, remembered that upon occasion the Regency treasurer was prone to indulge in psychic bidding. With Malowan, West, and his partner, East, the bidding had gone:

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	2 ♡	2 ♠	Pass
4 ♠	5 ♢	Dble	Pass
Pass	Pass

East, as dummy, laid down these cards:

♠ 9 8 6 2
♡ A K 9 7
♢ 8 7
♣ 9 7 6

"My hearts were so strong, partner," explained his all too canny male colleague "that I knew your heart bid was a psyche. I couldn't take you back to that suit, as I was sure you had a long string of diamonds and nothing else.

"Oh, well," signed Walter, and with great forbearance put down the score without another word.

New Schedule Is Adopted At Ft. Meade

By Marshall Andrews
Post Staff Writer

Fort George G. Meade, Md., Feb. 12.—Maryland and Virginia Infantry regiments of the Twenty-ninth Division will be in their quarters next Tuesday under a revised tentative schedule set today by Maj. Gen. Milton A. Reckord, division commander.

The artillery brigade, except the 176th Field Artillery, of Pittsburgh, should follow immediately behind the infantry regiments. Inspection of the camp area today indicated the 176th's area would be ready February 21, permitting the regiment's arrival the same day and completing concentration of the division.

The new schedule was worked out this morning after a conference late last night at which it was arranged to use facilities of the permanent post hospital if the unfinished cantonment hospital should prove inadequate. At the conference, besides Gen. Reckord, were Col. John A. Cutchins, chief of staff; Col. Daniel P. Card, post surgeon, and Lieut. Col. William K. Triplett, division surgeon.

Last minute preparations were under way today to prepare the engineer and special troops areas of camp for the arrival Friday of the District's 121st Engineers and 104th Ordnance Company. Roads were closed to traffic while repairs were rushed to place them in condition to receive the two units' heavy equipment.

Much new paraphernalia for the Engineer regiment, including assault boats, water purification units and light and heavy trucks is waiting here for the regiment's arrival. By the end of its 13-week period of initial training, the 121st is expected to be completely equipped with the thousands of mechanical adjuncts for a regiment of combat engineers.

Four officers and 34 men of Service Company, 111th Field Artillery, of Newport News, Va., were placed in quarantine today after one of its members was discovered to have contracted measles. The man, Pvt. William G. Hill, of Newport News, was placed in the Post Hospital, while the members of his company continued with their duties, segregated from other troops, and subject to a daily medical inspection for 14 days.

The Recruit Reception Center announced that the 301st Service Unit, consisting of 35 officers and 298 men, would be sent tomorrow to New Cumberland, Pa. There the unit will open a new induction center for selectees from Pennsylvania and Western Maryland.

Arrivals at the reception center today included 126 selectees from Pittsburgh; 30 from Baltimore; 17 from Roanoke, Va., and 3 from Philadelphia. Departures included 133 selectees to the Armored Force and 11 to the Second Armored Division, both at Fort Benning, Ga.; 4 to Camp Claiborne, La.; 2 to Camp Blanding, Fla., and 6 to Fort Monroe, Va.

Hoover to Testify On Civil Liberties In Wire-Tapping

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, will be called before a House Judiciary subcommittee Monday to discuss safeguards for civil liberties in the event Congress authorizes wire-tapping by the Justice Department and other Federal investigative agencies.

The decision to call Hoover was taken at a subcommittee hearing yesterday in which five witnesses testified against wire-tapping legislation introduced by Representative Hobbs (Democrat), of Alabama. The bill would permit Federal investigators to intercept telephone, telegraph or radio communications when the head of their agency has reason to believe a crime "may have been committed, is being committed or may be about to be committed."

John T. Jones, legislative representative of the C. I. O. and director of Labor's Non-Partisan League, told the subcommittee that "real spies are not going to use the telephone to give away their secrets, and real saboteurs are not going to plan or reveal bomb plots by wire."

Holy Comforter Social Tonight

The annual three-day get-together and social of Holy Comforter Catholic Church will begin tonight in the school hall at Fifteenth and East Capitol Streets. Supper will be served from 5 to 8 p. m., followed by games and other entertainment.

"Old Home Nights" is the theme of this year's program, during which movies will be shown nightly for the children. Tonight's menu will feature roast beef; tomorrow's, sea food, and Saturday's, genuine Italian spaghetti.

Town Hall to Move To Constitution Hall

Washington's Town Hall will move to larger quarters in Constitution Hall to hear Mrs. Roosevelt and Dorothy Thompson, columnist, lead a discussion of America's role in world affairs at 8 p. m., February 20.

Town Hall officials explained that the meeting, originally scheduled for Sunday in the Shoreham Hotel, had to be moved because of the large number of calls for seats. Mrs. Roosevelt will be Town Hall chairman, and Miss Thompson will speak on "America's Responsibility in the World Crisis."

MANY NEVER SUSPECT CAUSE OF BACKACHES

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Legislators Warm to Sally

FANS OLD FLAMES OF FRIENDSHIP—Sally Rand, of the fan, got a warm reception yesterday at Atlanta, Ga., where she visited the State Senate. She said she was anxious to make the visit because she felt sure she would meet "many of my favorite men—the old ones." State Senator H. B. Edwards, of Valdosta, introduced her to the assembly

Wives, Children of Army Officers to Leave Manila

Manila, Feb. 12 (AP).—Between 300 and 400 wives and children of Army officers will leave soon on Army transports for the United States.

Reliable quarters said the evacuation plan came as a surprise but high Army men said unofficially the decision was made merely in order to make use of available transportation.

49 District Selects Will Be Named Today; 28,000 Guardsmen to Be Called in March

As Washington Selective Service registrants awaited announcement of the names of men who will go into uniform in the induction starting Wednesday, the War Department annouced last night that 28,000 National Guardsmen would be called into Federal service in March.

Officials at local selection headquarters planned to make public today the names of 49 colored selects who will lead off the February induction at Baltimore's Fifth Regiment Armory.

Also to be identified soon are the District men who will fill out the remainder of the February quota of 353. On February 20, white registrants numbering 70 and 40 colored men are scheduled for induction. A like number to be sworn in the next day and 84 white selects will join the colors February 24.

Other developments were:

Maj. Guiton Morgan, of National Selective Service Headquarters, said a camp for relixious objects to the draft would open in about two weeks at Patapsco State Park, near Baltimore. It is one of about six similar camps to go into operation in the near future.

The 450 officers and men of the 121st Engineers, District Guard regiment, slated for mobilization at Fort Meade Friday, prepared for departure after Col. John W. Oehmann, commanding, said a check of Meade facilities showed that housing is adequate for the citizen soldiers.

In addition to the 28,000 Guardsmen from various parts of the country to be inducted next month, 6,000 more will go into the Army in April, and 500 in June.

Only National Guard organizations for which induction dates have not yet been set are nine observation squadrons now in the process of formation. These include the 121st Capital aviation unit.

The objectors' camp, one of those to be set up by national selection officials in cooperation with representatives of various religious sects opposed to war, will ultimately have a capacity of 200, Maj. Morgan said. Men at this camp will come from Washington and nearby States, it was said.

The religious organizations will bear the brunt of the cost of operation of the camps for men who refuse even Medical Corps duty, or other noncombatant Army service.

Col. Oehmann said he had found 12 enlisted men's cantonments, an officers' barracks and several mess halls completed and ready for occupancy by the engineers at Meade.

Meanwhile, some 3,000 registrants were to be examined at local hospitals today. From their number will be picked 1,100 Washingtonians who will compose the record March quota call.

Models Parade But King Confines Remarks to Gowns

Copyright by New York Times

London, Feb. 12.—The first fashion show ever held in Buckingham Palace was staged today when nine manikins, who are to tour South America, displayed 36 of the latest creations before King George and Queen Elizabeth.

The King, observing the new low waistline evening gowns, said:

The Queen remarked that they were "most wearable," and added:

Panama Crashes Kill 2 Army Pilots

Balboa, Canal Zone, Feb. 12 (AP).—Two Army pilots, Second Lieuts. J. E. Kinsey and Wilbur Broemel, were killed today when their planes crashed and a third pilot, Folmer Sogaard, parachuted to safety when the engine of his plane caught fire.

Kinsey, of Grand Rapids, Mich., crashed near the Pacific entrance to the Panama Canal. It was reported his plane failed to pull out of a dive during bombing practice. The body of Broemel, of Pennington, N. J., was found in the jungle. He was flying alone from Albrook Field, and the cause of the crash was not known.

A SALE OF SPRING STYLES AND PATTERNS FOR MEN WHO PREFER SHIRT DISTINCTION

WRINKLE-FREE COLLARS AND SANFORIZED-SHRUNK FABRICS

$1.65 and $2 Spring Shirts

HERE ARE THE IMPORTANT STYLE FEATURES:

Wrinkle-free Collars: They will not wrinkle, curl, wilt, turn up or develop a saw edge. No starch is needed in laundering, for rayon celanese yarns are woven into the collar linings to give them that starched appearance . . . yet are easy on your neck.

English Tab Collars: The slightly higher collar for the man with a longer neck. Fine with English drape suits.

Slotted Spread Collars: Two celluloid strips fit into the back of your collar points to keep your collar from curling.

Button-down Collars: In white and striped oxfords for daytime and sportswear.
